League to Stake All on Averting War in Ethiopia

France and Italy Opposed to Move

England's Favor of Plan for Mandate Viewed as Probable.

By the United Press.

Geneva, July 17.—The League of Nations tonight decided to face the Italo-Ethiopian crisis squarely, staking its future on a final effort to avert war.

From Paris, where he is conferring with Premier Pierre Laval, Joseph Avenol, league secretary general, telegraphed council members to prepare for a special session between July 25 and August 2.

After discussions with British and French officials, Avenol decided the league can not dodge the issue, although France and Italy oppose new Geneva intervention in the threatened East African war.

Basis Uncertain.

Whether the council will convene on the basis of Ethiopia's appeal for intervention or under its own June 25 resolution remained uncertain.

In either case the council can tackle the entire problem because its resolution, appointing the unsuccessful conciliation commission, did not limit its action in selecting a fifth arbitrator.

Britons said the council may offer Italy opportunity to state fully her grievances against Ethiopia. Thus Italy could demand Ethiopia's expulsion from the league on the grounds of failure to fulfill conditions of its membership.

Italy could seek a league mandate over Ethiopia to assure abolition of slavery and other "civilizing" reforms.

Opposed Admission.

Observers believed the British would favor this course, since Britain opposed admission of Ethiopia to the league on grounds she was not ready for membership.

Therefore Britain now could logically agree to place Ethiopia under an Italian mandate to insure fulfillment of reforms.

Such a scheme might not prevent war because it is uncertain whether Italy would be satisfied with a mandate or whether Ethiopia would accept Italian tutelage.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, July 17.—Italy poured troops and planes into Africa, and Ethiopia drilled her tribal warriors today in preparation for expected hostilities as efforts to avert war—repeatedly called futile here—continued.

A spokesman for the government said Italy had received no notice of the League of Nations' announcement that the council would meet in special session about July 25 to consider the Italo-Ethiopian crisis.

Italy will not consider her reply to an invitation until it arrives, he said. Well-informed circles believe, however, Italy will accept an invitation, but refuse to yield any of her precepts and oppose any further efforts to handle the situation through the league. Press and officials alike have said re-

Minor Operation For Mrs. Bingham

By the Associated Press.

London, July 17.—Mrs. Robert W. Bingham, wife of the American Ambassador, was reported getting along "excellently" tonight after undergoing a slight operation.

Three physicians reported no complications were expected. It was said Mrs. Bingham would leave the nursing home in about three weeks. The nature of her ailment was not disclosed.

The bulletin on Mrs. Bingham's condition was signed by Dr. Victor Bonney, Sir Thomas Dunhill and Dr. J. B. Blaikie. Sir Thomas Dunhill is an expert on thyroid surgery, while Dr. Bonney is regarded as one of England's leading women's surgeons.

AFRICA

"The Lions of Judah."

FIERCE Galla tribesmen, known as Ethiopia's most savage fighters, are planning to turn lions loose against any Italian invaders, so the Associated Press reports from Africa by way of Istanbul. The Gallas, who are pagans, worship the tree as their symbol of divinity. A staple in their diet is reported to be raw hippopotamus meat. The lion is the national symbol of Ethiopia, even being used on occasions to guard the throne of the emperor, who, since the days of King David, has been called "The Conquering Lion of Judah."

New York

Mazol Tov.

"MAZOL TOV," the Yiddish good luck cry, echoed through the streets of New York's Ghetto, for hundreds of neighbors and friends rejoiced at the fortune of Abraham Starr, an iron worker. He got the news in his five-floor tenement flat that Uncle Harry was dead and that he would receive $1,000,000 to $6,000,000 from the estate.

But Abraham was not altogether impressed. "I still go to work, anyway, until I get the case." It is fairly certain, however, that Abraha mwill get part of the estate of his uncle who went to South Africa and found a diamond mine that piled up $17,000,000.

"But," put in Mrs. Sarah Cohen, a relative, "it may be a lot of hooey," and Abe said "maybe."

SEATTIE.

How Could You, Doctor?

THE trouble with women, Dr. Karen Horney, New York psychiatrist, told delegates to the national convention of Business and Professional Women's Clubs is that they have:

1. "An over-valuation of love and emotional relations.

2. "A complying attitude to men's ideas and ideals of feminity.

3. "An age phobia with a subsequent waste of human values.

4. "An inferiority feeling as a woman.

5. "A lack of solidarity among themselves."

CHICAGO

Murder and the Laundry.

CHINATOWN has been in a turmoil ever since the police announced that Mrs. Blanche Dunkel, 43-year-old grandmother, confessed she made a down payment of $100 on a $500 agreement for the killing of her son-in-law, Ervin Lang. Since then life in Chinatown has been just one police raid after another, and the Chinese residents around Cermak road and Wentworth avenue are none too happy about it. The object of the raids—to obtain some clew leading to the arrest of Mrs. Evelyn Smith and Harry Jung, her Chinese husband—hasn't been gained, and, in the meantime, the police activities haven't helped any. In fact, some clients of Chinese laundries have complained police arrests of Chinese suspects, was interfering with prompt laundry service, the Associated Press found.

League Asked To Aid 80,500 Nazi Outcasts

Emigres, Mostly Jews, Facing Problem of Repatriation.

By the Associated Press.

London, July 17.—A proposal was made today that the League of Nations assume the responsibility for the care of refugees from Germany, estimated at more than 80,000.

James G. McDonald, New York, high commissioner for refugees coming from Germany, and Viscount Cecil of Chelwood, commission chairman, united on the suggestion. They submitted it with their report that 80,500 persons, mostly Jews, had quit Germany since Hitler came into power.

"Nor has the era of dismissals in Germany come to an end," the report stated. That referred to dismissals of scholars from university appointments in connection with the plight of "intellectuals" among the emigres.

"Settlement and repatriation of the refugees must be carried on without consideration of their possible return to Germany," the report continued, as "the German government has taken drastic measures against their returning."

15,000 Unsettled.

Approximately 15,000 of the present emigres are unplaced, the report added, and from 5,000 to 5,500 with temporary or permanent homes in European countries are dependent on relief or in need of relief.

McDonald said a refugee economic corporation had been formed in the United States, capitalized at $10,000,000, but it had been unable to get more than $1,250,000 subscribed. Contributions for relief since April, 1933, he said, totaled about $10,000,000. Jews of the United States supplied $3,000,000 of it. Jews of Great Britain, $2,500,000. The Rockefeller Institute aided, he said.

The greater number of the refugees have gone to Palestine, where 27,000 have found homes. The United States took in 6,000; France, 10,000; Netherlands, 4,000; Great Britain, 2,500. Others went to other countries in central Europe, Africa and South America.

Plight Held "Grave."

"The plight of thousands of these is grave," said McDonald.

"They and others must become desperate unless the present tendency to deny to unsettled refugees opportunities to work is reversed."

The scarcity of relief contributions makes it difficult for his organization to provide for these thousands of Jews and non-Jews, McDonald said.

"I see no prospects that this task can be carried forward," he went on, "except under the direction of an organization created by the League of Nations, empowered to act on behalf of all the categories of refugees—Russians, Armenians, Assyrians and others as well as Germans."

McDonald added that two-thirds of the settlement and repatriation of the refugees has been done, due largely to co-operation of private organizations and individuals, Jewish and non-Jewish.

He also reported favorably on South Africa as a territory for an enlarged refugee settlement.

Ex-Convict Runs Amok, Hacks Three, 1 Fatally

Elmira, N. Y., July 17 (AP).—George Henry Moore, 42, a paroled convict, ran amok with a knife or an ax early today, killing Frederick White, 60, critically wounding White's 15-year-old son Louis, and less seriously wounding his own wife, Mrs. Hattie Bowen Moore, 36, White's housekeeper.

Officers were hunting Moore, who vanished after leaving the White home, which he entered some time during the night. Moore was paroled from Auburn Prison after having been sentenced to life as a confirmed criminal.

Sugar 'Tanned' by Light Rays Is Found Lethal to Bacteria

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Mass., July 17.—Discovery that sugar can take on a mysterious form of "tan" from ultra-violet light and thereby prevent germs from growing created a sensation among biologists at the conference on spectroscopy at Massachusetts Institute of Technology today.

It suggests a completely new explanation of the action of these short, invisible rays of light, particularly why they are the most lethal form of radiation known to single cell life—such as bacteria.

The sugar discovery was reported yesterday by Dr. I. H. Blank, of Harvard, but it was not until today that informal discussion brought out its implications. Dr. Blank set out to learn why the food combinations on which bacteria grow freely fail to produce a single germ if exposed to ultra-violet rays before the germs are planted. He discovered that it was the sugar in the food that possessed the power to stop the bacteria.

Twenty-two different kinds of sugar acquired the lethal power under these rays. Some of these were fairly common sugars, including corn starch, maltose, dextrin, glucose and lactose. One striking and surprising exception was complete failure of glycogen, which is the sugar of human muscle and energy, to acquire such lethal power, no matter how long the rays fell on it.

Dr. Blank showed positive evidence of the lethal power acquired by the 22 sugars. Not one of the germs he tried would colonize—or grow—with the sugars present. The organisms inhibited from growth were colon bacteria, yeasts and molds.

It also was suggested today that it may be the action of the light

Irish Poet Dead at 68

GEORGE WILLIAM RUSSELL.

George Russell, Ireland's 'AE,' Dies in England

Talented Jack of All Trade Paid a Visit to Copital in January.

By the Associated Press.

Bournemouth, England, July 17.—George William Russell, Irish journalist, poet and painter, known by the cryptic pen name, "AE," died here tonight. He was 68 years old.

Although primarily noted as a poet, "AE" was an energetic Jack of many trades—a painter, businessman, organizer, editor and co-founder of the famous Abbey Theater in Dublin.

Paradoxically he was a lyrical advocate of the virtues of idleness and caused amusement in the United States when he described Longfellow's line, "Let us then be up and doing," in the American bard's "Psalm of Life," as "one of the most terrible lines in all poetry."

"Congress ought to call in all copies of Longfellow's poem and extract that terrible line," he said. "It should then pass a statute in favor of idleness."

In 1932 "AE" told American audiences the United States depression was caused by a too literal following of Longfellow's advice.

Already ailing when he returned from the United States a few months ago, he suffered a setback in London during the first heat wave of summer. At that time he told a friend, "I feel cramped in London. I need the sea and mountains and wide views of the sky."

Russell was in his late twenties when he published his first book of poems, "Homeward: Songs By the Way," in 1894. The Yeats "Celtic Twilight" cult had just achieved world prominence and Russell, with his spiritual mysticism, was immediately taken to the hearts of poetry lovers.

His last book, "House of the Titans, and Other Poems," appeared in 1934.

Artist, Writer, Farmer.

Born at Lurgan, County Armagh, Ireland, in 1867, Russell was educated at Rathmines School, Dublin. He entered an accountant's office, but soon became interested in agricultural co-operative associations and in 1897 joined the Irish Agricultural Organization Society.

Thenceforward journalism, literature, painting and agricultural organization divided his attention. He

Cummings, Glass Clash On Gold Bill

McAdoo Joins in Bitter Attack on Plan to Ban Suits.

Attorney General Holds 'Immoral' Charge 'Impertinent.'

By the Associated Press.

The propriety of blocking all gold clause damage suits yesterday was heatedly argued by Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, and Attorney General Cummings.

The Attorney General, testifying on the measure before the Senate Banking Committee, characterized as "impertinent" charges that the move was "immoral." Glass and Senator McAdoo (Democrat), California, both former Secretaries of the Treasury, each had characterized the Administration's proposal as repudiation.

The clash ended in an argument over the meaning of the Supreme Court's gold decision, in which the Virginian contended the court upheld his view. Cummings dissented.

"We don't read the Supreme Court decision the same way," Glass remarked hotly.

"No, and we never will," Cummings retorted.

Earlier Glass and McAdoo had argued almost as bitterly with Secretary Morgenthau about the effect of the move on Government credit. They insisted it would destroy confidence in future security issues.

Morgenthau insisted, however, that the legislation to block damage suits would help, rather than hurt, Government credit by removing the threat of suits to recover additional cash on the outstanding gold clause obligations totaling about $10,000,000,000.

Accepts Responsibility.

The Treasury head told the committee the Government faces $9,000,000,000 of financing during the present fiscal year, of which about $5,000,000,000 will be refunding operations. He offered to be personally responsible for the consequences of the proposed ban against damage suits.

Advances in the price of Government securities since the President asked for the legislation, Morgenthau said, proved that it would not have a bad effect on Government credit. He testified that in the Government's latest financing, a $50,000,000 operation, it obtained the lowest interest rate in history—one-twentieth of one per cent for nine months.

Glass got into the discussion by asking Morgenthau how it would help Government credit to "formally notify creditors that the Government reserves the right to repudiate its indebtedness." He said the Government was "implying there is no moral turpitude in repudiation."

McAdoo Denounces Plan.

McAdoo denounced the proposal as "a complete repudiation of a solemn obligation." He predicted that "when that percolates into the minds of the people it is going to have a serious effect in the future."

"I don't think a great Government should do it," McAdoo said, adding that the United States had "never failed to perform literally every obligation assumed."

As Morgenthau continued to insist that the Government credit was sound, Glass remarked:

$3,000,000 Slum Clearance Is Imperiled by D. C. Woman

Miss Minnie Keyes Fights Condemnation of Property Bequeathed to Her in Will Scrawled on Small Piece of Paper.

A woman who inherited much of her property by virtue of a will scrawled on a single sheet of paper yesterday went into court in an effort to thwart the Government's plans for clearing Southwest Washington's sprawling Negro slums and rebuilding with modern low-cost dwellings at the cost of $3,000,000.

In District Supreme Court, Miss Minnie Keyes, 714 Seventh street southwest, filed an objection by which she hopes to stop the condemnation proceedings of 15 pieces of property which she owns, and some of which she inherited from Leonard A. Hamilton, for 30 years a boarder in her home. At the time of his death in March, 1933, Hamilton left a small piece of paper wrapped around a pencil with an elastic band. It read: "You have been good to me. All is yours."

Miss Keyes yesterday said she firmly intended to see that it remained hers. At her Seventh street home she told The Post: "I believe in the maxim, live and let live, and I have no intention of robbing the Government, but when people try to put something over on me I take a firm stand."

Her stand consisted of challenging the validity of the $3,000,000 project which civic leaders have hailed as a major step in the development of the District. She took the stand, upheld in a recent decision by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnatti in a suit involving a Kentucky project that the Government is without authority to condemn her property for the purpose of erecting low-cost houses.

Miss Keyes' property, which the Government had hoped to seize, is located at 9 and 10 Pierce court, 121 to 141 P street, and 1256 to 1261 Half street, all in the Southwest section.

Specifically Miss Keyes charged, through her attorneys, that the Government could not take her properties, because of eight deficiencies in the condemnation order of three weeks ago. She said there was no allegation of the inability of the Government to acquire the property by contract with her. And

Lobby Expenditure Total Is $1,000,000

By James D. Secrest.

The Associated Gas and Electric System has spent $700,000 in opposing the Wheeler-Rayburn utilities legislation, the company announced last night in a statement prompted by revelatoins in the Senate lobby investigation concerning the burning of fake telegrams to Senators and Representatives in the drive to defeat this legislation.

Disclosure of this $700,000 expenditure brings the admitted figure of expenses in the utilities fight to approximately $1,000,000.

The company, whose local representative at Warren, Pa., was represented in the Senate committee testimony as having worked with the Western Union telegraph office there to send telegrams signed with names taken from the city directory, said its knowledge of such telegrams was limited to newspaper accounts. It could make no statement about the matter pending its own investigation, the company stated.

Saying that its two representatives, mentioned in the Senate testimony, had long been in the company's employ, the Associated Gas and Electric System declared "we propose to stand by them until we have convincing evidence that some other action is warranted."

Recently Philip H. Gadsden, chairman of the committee of Public Utilities Executives, and other utilities executives of the same group testified to expenditure of $301,865 for attorney fees and lobby activities. A. G. and E. was not part of the Gadsden group. Gadsden denounced the sending of fake telegrams by representatives of A. G. and E.

A bashful, shiny-faced Western Union messenger, still in his teens, yesterday proved the star witness as the Senate Lobby Committee failed to tack the guilt of burning more than 1,000 anti-Wheeler-Rayburn bill telegrams on an $85-a-month simplex operator.

Elmer Danielson, the messenger boy who is studying for the ministry, turned the hearing from a virtual arson trial into a comic sketch when he told the committee how he had assisted the Associated Gas & Electric Co. in soliciting telegrams to be sent Representative Driscoll (Democrat), of Pennsylvania.

Other testimony, of a more serious nature, was that R. P. Herron, bond salesman, who is charged with dictating most of the telegrams sent to Driscoll and the Pennsylvania Senators, burned all his personal records when a Federal investigation was threatened because he feared he might face a prison sentence for forgery.

His chief, E. W. O'Brien, of the securities divison of the Associated Gas & Electric Co. office at Erie, Pa., likewise destroyed his records, but suggested that he might supply other telegrams to replace those which have disappeared from the Warren office.

Herron Day Late.

Both Herron and O'Brien have been summoned to testify before the committee at 10 o'clock this morning. Herron was called for yesterday's session, but he wired that he was short of funds and could not reach Washington before last night.

Elmer, under instructions of the Warren (Pa.) Western Union manager and the A. G. & E. representative, tried to drum up some trade along with the other two messenger boys at the same office.

Although he obtained signatures for only six of the 1,300 telegrams that were sent out of Warren, Elmer was proud of his record and spoke up when Frank R. Veale, Eastern superintendent of Western

New Deal Wins on TVA Test; Right to Sell Power Upheld

Circuit Court Reverses Alabama Case, Sending It Back to Judge Grubb for Rehearing; Decision to Supreme Bench Next.

By the United Press.

New Orleans, La., July 17.—The New Deal scored a victory in the Fifth United States Circuit Court of Appeals today when the tribunal upheld the constitutionality of the Tennessee Valley Authority's "yardstick" electric program.

The decision, reversing an anti-TVA ruling by Federal Judge W. I. Grubb, of Birmingham, swept aside all arguments that the Federal Government may not go into the business of selling surplus electricity.

All three appellate judges concurred in the opinion. They are Judges Nathan P. Bryan, Rufus E. Foster and Samuel E. Sibley. Attorneys for both sides had announced they would carry the case to the highest tribunal if the decision here went against them.

Holds U. S. May Compete.

"It is within the province of Congress to adopt any reasonable means, whether for lease or sale, for disposing of the surplus hydro-electric power at Wilson Dam," the three-judge circuit court held.

"The use of transmission lines to facilitate sales can not fairly be said by the courts to be unreasonable or inappropriate," the ruling continued.

"Of course it is true that the Government of the United States can not engage at will in private business, but it by no means follows that it can not sell property which it owns, even though in doing so it may enter into competition with other public or private owners of property.

State Rights Refuted.

"We live under a dual government of divided powers (Federal and State), not under separate governments of conflicting powers," the court said in awarding the New Deal a singular victory and in answering the challenge that Congress had no authority to establish such a vast operation in competition with private business within State domain.

Hostile Senate Adds to AAA's Fear of Courts

Davis Leaning Heavily On Proposed Amendments; Price Fixing Beaten.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

With a majority of the Senate suddenly adopting a hostile attitude toward sections of the proposed AAA amendments, Administration officials yesterday appeared more concerned over the effect of the decision of the Boston Circuit Court of Appeals declaring the processing taxes invalid than they were Monday when the opinion was handed down.

Chester C. Davis, AAA administrator, at a press conference made it clear that he is counting heavily on the pending AAA amendments to save the processing taxes and his organization, as well as to protect the Government against suits already filed seeking to avoid taxes levied under the original act.

Should the AAA amendments, now on a stormy course in the Senate, fail of passage or be substantially modified, the Treasury may be liable for a sum approximating $2,000,000,000 as a result of acreage reduction contracts and taxes il-

Public Debt Above 29 Billions To Set New All-time Record

By the United Press.

The Federal Government's deficit for the first half month of the current fiscal year was more than double the deficit for the corresponding period of last year, the Treasury reported yesterday.

Because of the excess of expenditures during the first 15 days of July, the Government was forced to borrow several hundred millions of new money, carrying the public debt to another all-time record peak of $29,177,786,319 of July 15.

This compared with a public debt of $27,184,378,508 a year ago and one of approximately $22,000,000,000 when President Roosevelt took office.

In 1919, just after the war, the debt was $26,600,000,000.

Between July 1 and July 15 the Treasury "ran in the red" to the extent of $376,010,635 when expenditures of $535,249,208 overbalanced income of $159,238,573.

In the first 15 days of July, 1934, expenditures were $289,947,882 and income was $138,992,860, leaving the Government "in the red" a year ago to the extent of $150,955,022.

Among expenditures showing a sharp gain over a year ago during the first 15 days of July were retirements of public debt, expenditures of the Commodity Credit Corporation, and the adjusted service certificate fund.

House Group's Surprise Move Speeds Tax Bill

By Robert C. Albright.

Spurred by renewed expressions from the White House, the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday jockeyed the President's "tax-the-wealthy" program into position for a swift race against time and the tempers of members.

Laying aside the Guffey coal bill temporarily, the full committee ahead of schedule set itself to the task of formulating a tax bill that will meet with both the social objectives of the President and the revenue aims of the Treasury.

For all of the bustle and hurry, progress was slow. Confronted with revenue charts by Lovell H. Parker, the committee's staff expert, ideas were exchanged on tax policies that failed to crystallize into definite proposals. Later, the sum total of committee suggestions will be whipped together by legislative draftsmen into "confidential committee print, No. 1."

Intimates "Weak Case."

While the House committee sweated through morning and afternoon sessions, the President at a White House press conference sought to dispel all remaining doubts that the bill will be enacted this session.

That, said the President, is his wish. He compared congressional efforts to adjourn before tax bill enactment with the strategy of a lawyer who has a weak case. He said the lawyer's first move would be to put the trial over until next term, and, failing in that, to ask for a mistrial because of hot weather.

Even as the Ways and Means Committee strained every nerve to bring out a bill in less than two weeks, variations of the President's wealth-sharing proposals were proposed in the Senate, and renewed adjournment skepticism was voiced in the House.

From Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), Texas, came a proposal for excess profits taxes that would yield $150,000,000 in annual revenue. Connally wants a law enacted similar to the excess-profit tax of 1921, which neted $350,000,000 a year.

Excess-Profit Tax Urged.

The Texan offered a resolution that would exempt small corporations with incomes of $3,000, and profits up to 8 per cent. On the next 20 per cent profit, however, a tax of 20 per cent would be imposed, and on the next 20 per cent a tax of 40 per cent.

Strong sentiment exists in the House Ways and Means Committee for some such excess-profits tax, as a substitute for the corporation income taxes proposed by the President. Numerous other variations have been suggested on the inheritance, gift and high bracket surtaxes outlined by Mr. Roosevelt.

Among the charts laid before the committee yesterday by Parker was one covering revenue since the World War, showing a uniformly rising line on yields from incomes up to $150,000, and a sharp leveling-out thereafter. To "straighten out the line" some members insisted it may be necessary to increase the rates on incomes over $150,000. For "substantial revenue," it was generally admitted, however, it would be necessary to tap the middle or lower brackets. This the President does not want to do.

Meeting a Surprise.

The Ways and Means Committee meeting on the tax bill yesterday came as a surprise. Chairman Robert L. Doughton had indicated that the Guffey coal bill would have right of way. Leaders insisted, however, that the Guffey bill has not been laid aside for long and will be taken up again when committee experts actually begin drafting the tax bill.

Connally said yesterday that the excess profits tax he offered "is not intended to supplant the graduated corporation tax proposed by the Administration."

"It is possible that in the consideration of the tax bill both plans may be adopted with proper adjustments as between the two," he said.

He argued that both the elements of size of corporations and the principle of a progressive tax based on the rate of return ought to be considered in framing the new tax measure. The present corporation tax is a flat rate upon earnings, whereas the Connally proposal calls for an excess profits levy similar to the graduated income tax for individuals.

"It is not a burdensome tax," Connally insisted. "It is based upon the principle of ability to pay. It is based upon a sound and equitable principle of taxation and in view of the necessities of the Government, it ought to be adopted."

51 Picketers Arrested At Magazine Offices

New York, July 17.—Twenty-nine men and 22 young women were arrested on a charge of picketing today in front of the Fifth Avenue offices of the American Mercury, a monthly magazine which has been having difficulties with its office staff.

Among the prisoners, most of whom were members of student organizations, was a man who said he was a representative in the Washington State Legislature. He gave his name as Michael Smith.

The AAA Two-Act Tragedy; Lobbyists Up to Old Tricks; Farley Seeks a Rest.

By Raymond Clapper

TRAGEDY in at least two acts: Act 1. Time, May 12, 1933. AAA passed.

(Two years elapse between Acts 1 and 2, during which time the Government sets up gigantic machinery to pay benefits money to farmers for curtailing crops and collects nearly $1,000,000,000 in processing taxes.)

Act. 2. Time, July 16, 1935. Federal appellate court says it was all an unconstitutional mistake.

Two of the three judges who ruled on the AAA case said the scheme was unconstitutional. They were Republicans—one appointed by Harding, one by Hoover. The third judge, a Democrat appointed by Wilson, said AAA was constitutional as had the district judge who was overruled. Some time next winter, or possibly next spring, nearly three years late, we will have the final veto or approval of the act by the Supreme Court.

Meantime, from now until the final word is spoken, no business man who is liable to this Federal tax, knows what to do. Shall he refuse to pay when the tax man comes around and take his chances on the Supreme Court throwing out the law? Or shall he pay and then in all probability be unable to recover? Congress is now in the final stages of passing a law that would prevent him from recovering if he pays up.

* * *

Such needless delay is more shocking because it is so unnecessary. Good or bad, constitutional or not, isn't there some way to have these questions settled quickly? Isn't there enough combined intelligence between Congress and the bar to adapt the idea of the declaratory judgments act so that the Supreme Court has its chance to veto an act of Congress immediately after passage instead of two or three years later? Even James M. Beck, former solicitor general, whose reluctance to change a comma in the Constitution is above suspicion, tells the American Bar Association at Los Angeles that under this system we lock the door after the horse is stolen.

* * *

And while we are at it, why not reserve for the Supreme Court alone the power to say when Congress violates the Constitution? Why shouldn't constitutional cases go straight to the fountain-head at once and not be messed into by lower judges scattered all around the country, some ruling one way and some the opposite?

In the AAA decision at Boston, two Republicans voted against AAA and one Democrat voted for it.

In the PWA low-cost housing condemnation suit at Cincinnati a few days ago, the three judges of the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals divided the same way, two Republicans against the New Deal and the Democratic judge for it.

In New Orleans, the Circuit Court of Appeals says TVA is constitutional, reversing District Judge Grubb, who recently said it wasn't.

These decisions are not final until reviewed by the Supreme Court. So that until the final word is given you have confusion, administrative machinery thrown out of gear, nobody in the Government or out of it knowing what is legal and what is not. The confusion is not only worse confounded, it is compounded.

* * *

Under our system, where Congress often is impulsive, often swayed by ravenous minorities or pushed by an aggressive President, perhaps it is wise to have a supreme veto power over both it and the President, one that sits above politics and is less easily blown about by the shifting winds. The Supreme Court averages high in disinterested statesmanship. Its members are reinforced by a high tradition.

Even so, the practice of overruling Congress by a 5-to-4 decision is widely questioned. If a case is so debatable that nine such men divide half and half on it, why should not the elected representatives of the people have the benefit of the doubt? When two-thirds or three-fourths of such a group agrees that an act is unconstitutional, you have a better test and still a thorough safeguard, one that would have still permitted the gold clause and Schechter decisions.

* * *

There is a good deal of hair-trigger cheering every time a district judge cracks down on Congress and says, "You can't do that." One after another of the main foundation pieces in the Roosevelt program are being ripped out by judicial veto.

But this may not be the last of it. Will the country be content to see appointed judges tear down everything and say that it must fold its hands and patiently endure the conditions which put us down where we were on the black Saturday in March, 1933, when Hoover turned over the wreck to Roosevelt? You can criticize mistakes that Roosevelt has made. You can criticize him for doing things that he should not have done. But can a nation develop its destiny and improve the lot of its people when the courts step in and say he and Congress can't do anything?

Already the Senate lobby investigation has confirmed suspicions that business men learn nothing about the art of putting the heat on Congress. Every lobby investigation uncovers year after year the same kind of stupidity, the same breed of dumbbells, and the high-pressure hounds who are about as smart as high school sophomores.

The fake telegram drive, however, sets a new low. It seems to prove that lobbyists don't improve with experience but grow worse. They can't even pick up names out of a city directory without getting caught.

Some day the lobbyists may discover that a good argument, clearly and forcefully presented, is worth a dozen clever schemes for tricking Congress and that it can't come back to bite them and that if they have a good case, so much the better. But the chances are that they won't discover this. It is too obvious.

Propaganda against the death sentence has been undone by a few days of investigation. If there ever was a good case for it, it has been caught in bad company.

A new law there makes it impossible to put a third party on the ballot without obtaining 50,000 signatures, distributed throughout every county in the State. That means that the third-party workers will have to get out of Chicago and go down into the farm counties, where everyone is either a Republican or a Democrat. . . . Everything is fixed to slip through the restoration of Spanish War pensions when nobody is looking. It has passed the House, and Senate leaders are waiting for the right moment. Six Traffic Deaths Mark Week Here

Washington contributed six of 149 traffic fatalities throughout the country last week, it was revealed yesterday in figures announced by the Census Bureau.

During the same period—July 6 to 13—in 1934, however, Washington reported no deaths and only minor accidents.

The Census Bureau report showed that Chicago and New York City ran neck and neck for the highest number of traffic fatalities last week. Each city recorded 15 deaths. For Chicago, it was an increase of 8 deaths over the previous week and for New York a decrease of 9.

During the first 28 weeks of this year the Nation's traffic toll reached 4,438 fatalities, census figures showed. This was a report from 86 major cities.

Navy Officers Silent On Case of Middie

Annapolis, Md., July 17 (AP).—Naval Academy officials declined to comment today as to what action would be taken in the case of Midshipman Charles Kenneth Barr, who jumped ship in Oslo, Norway. Rear Admiral David Foote Sellers, superintendent of the Academy, is in Europe.

Midshipman Barr is one of the middies on the European cruise. He was reported missing from the U. S. S. Wyoming at Oslo, but later was found safe at Halden, Norway.

House Returns Security Bill To Conference

The President's social security bill was thrown back into conference yesterday, when the House balked at accepting the Clark amendment exempting company pension systems from the Federal old-age pension tax.

By a 269-to-77 roll-call vote, the House refused to concur in the amendment. Conferees immediately were instructed to insist on the House position, by the nearly identical vote of 269 to 65.

Conference difficulties ahead were foreseen at once, as the Senate reiterated its own insistence on the Clark amendment. Both houses are in agreement on every other feature of the unemployment insurance, old-age pensions and public health program.

Compromise Likely.

While House conferees will attempt to eliminate the exemption in toto, indications were that some compromise will have to be worked out. One that has been discussed informally in the corridors would permit private pension systems to operate free of the Federal tax for a period of, say, 10 years, during which they would adjust their plans to the Federal program.

Chairman Robert L. Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committee, led the attack on the Senate modification, which he said opened the bill to constitutional hazards in the courts. Representative Allen T. Treadway (Republican), Massachusetts, ranking minority member of the Ways and Means Committee, vainly urged its retention.

Foresee Danger.

Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee who opposed the Clark amendment argued that it was "actuarily unsound," that it would encourage discrimination against older employes, with some employers easing off their older workers on the Federal pension plan, while retaining younger workers in their own pension systems at a lower insurance premium. This, it was contended, might bring about the complete collapse of the Federal plan.

On the other hand, Representative Treadway argued that rejection of the amendment "is just another indication of the present intention of the Administration to endeavor to control all business—to concentrate power in Washington."

"You are treading on the thinnest of ice," he said.

Said Chairman Doughton:

"The effect of the Clark amendment would be to cripple or destroy this bill so that its objectives could not be realized. There are some who would be delighted and overjoyed if it could be weakened by the amendment."

Other features of the social security program were agreed to. These provide for administration by an independent social security board. Employes and employers would contribute equally to a fund to be used for pensioning workers after they reach 65. An appropriation of $49,750,000 would be used for starting pensions at once to older workers on a State matching basis. A Federal pay roll tax would swell Government funds to be used in fostering State unemployment insurance systems. Various sums are appropriated for maternal, child and public welfare and a separate pension for the blind, with the Federal Government contributing up to $15 monthly, is provided.

General Motors Paid $553,367.42 to Three

Talmadge Pays Call on President

President to Deny Kingfish Control of U. S. Relief Funds

Announcement Precedes Gov. Talmadge's Visit to White House in Connection With Tangled Highway Allotments in Georgia.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Long, one of the bitterest anti-Roosevelt Democrats, yesterday was put on notice by the President himself that he will have no influence over Federal relief expenditures.

This word came from the White House just a little before Gov. Eugene Talmadge, an equally severe critic, conferred with Mr. Roosevelt on the tangled $19,000,000 Georgia highway allotment. He was accompanied by Clark Howell, publisher of the Atlanta Constitution, who arranged the conference. No final solution was announced.

Although he did not call Long by name, Mr. Roosevelt said at his press conference that laws recently passed by the Louisiana Legislature would make it very difficult to carry out public works projects there. He added that, of course, the Federal Government intended to control spending of its own money, but denied that the legislation would interfere with projects of Harry L. Hopkins' Works Progress Administration.

The President's statement was in reply to an inquiry about a conference he held last week with anti-Long members of the Louisiana congressional delegation. Prior to the Louisianan's recent assertion that he was a "liar" and a "faker," Mr. Roosevelt had left battles with Long mostly to the care of Hopkins and Secretary Ickes. Yesterday he apparently assumed personal command.

In New Orleans, Long was quick to retort:

"We ain't worrying about him down here. States where Roosevelt is supposed to be helping out are so much worse off than Louisiana that we don't want him messing around down here anyway."

Before leaving New Orleans last night for Washington Senator Long issued a formal statement in which he said "so again our answer to Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Ickes is 'Go slap damn to hell!' and I will answer them on the floor of the Senate this coming Friday morning."

PWA officials amplified the President's remarks, saying that in addition to a ban on new Louisiana projects, the $4,000,000 for a bridge at Baton Rouge never would be released.

There were hints besides that Louisiana would find as much difficulty in obtaining its $6,103,896 quota of work relief funds for highway and grade crossing construction as has Georgia.

Talmadge said after his White House call that the President had promised to segregate Georgia's highway money pending a settlement of the controversy.

The President was quoted as saying the Federal Government would not take over the State highway department.

PWA officials said that with the exception of the Baton Rouge bridge all present Louisana projects would be carried out.

In addition to $12,324,000 in projects already completed, Louisiana has $3,530,600 under construction, $688,000 under contract, $499,900 on which bids are being advertised and $262,000 on which agreements have not been completed.

Despite the President's statement, the possibility of the conflict spreading to include Hopkins was seen in some quarters. Hopkins, several months ago, removed Harry J. Early, the neutral Louisiana relief administrator, and replaced him with Frank Peterman, an avowed enemy of Long.

Meanwhile, Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, said yesterday a recent trip across the Nation led him to fear the $19-$94 monthly Federal work relief wage scale would wreck the program and foment labor trouble.

McCarran, author of the defeated "prevailing wage" amendment to the $4,880,000,000 work relief act, said his views were based on conversations with workers and employers during a trip to the West Coast, Chicago and Philadelphia.

He said: "I fear there will be labor trouble throughout the country because of this wage scale. Already it is cropping up in New York, Chicago and the Pacific Coast.

"Union men, out of work, can't accept those wages and remain in the union. And the Government, I understand, is going to tell them that if they don't accept those wages they will be cut off from the relief rolls."

Truman to Review Fort Meade Corps

Citizen Soldiers Will Break Camp on July 27.

Senator Harry S. Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, will visit the C. M. T. C. encampment at Fort Meade today to review 3,000 civilian soldiers in regimental drill.

Scheduled as a semi-final event before the military students "break camp" July 27, the drill will follow a tour of inspection by Senator Truman and post officers.

Elaborate plans have been completed for the final day in camp. The grounds will be open to visitors and the Governors of Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania are expected as guests. Awards will be presented to those who have completed the month's training course and a program of entertainment has been arranged.

Truce Declared In Interior Strike

Electrical Work Deferred Pending Fnal Accord.

A truce was called yesterday in the labor dispute at the Interior Department Building and 500 building trades mechanics returned to work. The tieup resulted from a strike of union electricians ten days ago, who protested against the use of unorganized electrical workers for changing the building's current from direct to alternating.

An agreement was reached whereby the work in dispute will be postponed until other contracts are completed, said John L. Nagle, National Park Service engineer in charge. The strike had forced a halt in installation of air conditioning and in elevator construction.

Intervention by the Labor Department's conciliation service, represented by Howard T. Colvin, brought about the settlement.

Tariff Bargain Plan Defended By Roosevelt

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt made clear yesterday that the Administration's program to expand foreign trade through reciprocal tariff reducing agreements will be vigorously pushed despite some congressional opposition.

Answering attacks on the Brazilian and Soviet Russian agreements by Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, the President declared at his press conference that he saw no valid reason for making any changes in the American foreign trade programs, policies, procedure or objectives.

One phase of Administration tariff bargaining, that with Germany, faces possible failure. The proposed pact now is under discussion in Berlin. The chances for an agreement are viewed here as slim unless Germany does an about-face from a policy of insisting on bilateral balancing of exports and imports.

The German-American trade treaty, the first unconditional most favored nation pact ever concluded by the United States, ends on October 14, and unless a new agreement is concluded before that date it is considered probable that the equality of treatment now accorded Germany will be withdrawn and German goods levied at higher tariff rates than those of other nations.

Under the unconditional most favored-nation policy the United States now grants all tariff concessions made in any pacts to all nations which give American goods equitable treatment.

The President explained yesterday, however, that a protective clause in the agreement makes it possible to withdraw concessions from any country which discriminates against the United States, or to modify provisions concerning specific products if "dumping" results from lowered duties.

Mr. Roosevelt not only opposed McCarran's move to emasculate the Administration's pact-making authority, but paid scant attention to his opposition to reducing the duty on manganese ore. In fact, he predicted the reduced duty granted on manganese ore would put more men to work in other industries and generally benefit the country.

The United States now produces less than 10 per cent of the manganese needed here, and if a high tariff wall excluded all manganese, the President said, it would increase the cost of making domestic manufacture of steel and steel products.

British Ships Rout Robot Plane Attack

King Sees H. M. S. Rodney Bring Down Radio Craft.

By the Associated Press.

Portsmouth, July 17.—King George today saw the British fleet repel an attack by robot planes. The feature of the war game was the fight between the new aircraft guns on the battleships and the radio-controlled "queen bee" flying machines.

As the first of the "queen bees" zoomed over the battleship Rodney, the powerful gun went into action. It scored a direct hit and the plane crashed to destruction.

Target practice with both heavy and light guns preceded the simulated air attack. A squadron of cruisers, led by the London, a new ship, scored 56 hits out of 320 rounds. The target vessel was the Vindictive, wirless-controlled like the "queen bee."

Supporters of the theory that planes can cope successfully with battleships won a point when the "queen bee" actually weathered a hail of shells to pass over the Rodney. It was almost above the ship when the destructive shell hit it.

The ships, stripped of their gala trimmings of yesterday's review, were led to sea by the King aboard the royal yacht Victoria and Albert. After the air maneuvers he returned to port and entrained for London.

on sugar that accounts for the almost instant death of single cell organisms under the most lethl wave lengths of ultra-violet light, which are about the same as those used by Dr. Blank to irradiate the sugars. These single cell organisms—germs, yeast cells and the like—swell up and explode at the touch of the short ultra-violet rays.

Solution of the reason why ultra-violet is so lethal is considered of vital importance for understanding the uses of these ultra short waves of light for treatment of some diseases. In cancer research, in particular, there has been some suspicion that the curative effects of X-rays were due to their formation of ultra-violet rays inside the cancer cells and that it was the ultra-violet light which directly killed the cancer cells.

Long Appoints Ex-Star As Louisiana Censor

Play Parts in Day's Lobby Inquiry

Associated Press Photos.

Bashful Western Union Boy Proves Star Lobby Witness

Union, testified that he believed Elmer got "one or two signatures."

"I got six," he interrupted.

"How did you get them?" asked Senator Black (Democrat), of Alabama, chairman of the Senate committee.

"Why, I asked some people if they didn't want to send some telegrams," said Elmer.

"Who?" asked Black.

"Why, my mother, a boy friend, and a neighbor," replied Elmer.

"What did you tell them?" continued Black.

"I explained the Wheeler-Rayburn bill to them," said Elmer as the hearing room burst into an uproar.

He's Neutral Now.

The boy then, with much stammering and blushing, told the committee that he had been instructed to tell the solicited patrons that "the bill would turn over the utilities to the big men." A merchant by the name of Epstein, however, told Elmer different and thereby confused him.

"What do you believe now about the bill?" inquired Black.

"I'm neutral," said the diplomatic Elmer.

Subsequently, Elmer revealed that for all his efforts he was paid 18 cents by the Associated Gas & Electric Co., through the Warren Western Union manager. The rate was three cents a telegram. The utility representative spent close to $400 for telegrams in that community.

The greater part of yesterday's Senate hearing was taken up with cross-examination of witnesses suspected of having a hand in the burning of the Warren files for June 26 and 27, when most of the telegrams were sent to Driscoll.

The House Rules Committee coincidentally concluded its inquiry into allegations that the Administration had used threatening tactics to obtain votes for the holding company "death sentence" clause. Representative Brewster (Republican), of Maine, produced his secretary to substantiate his story that Thomas Corcoran, counsel of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, had threatened to stop work on Passamaquoddy Dam unless he voted for the clause.

Charges Fake Messages.

Indications that the Senate Lobby Committee would broaden its investigation of the deluge of telegrams sent to Representatives and Senators on the Wheeler-Rayburn bill were apparent as Senator Black ordered Western Union executives to prevent the destruction of further files and to produce data on the number and cost of telegrams handled on the measure.

Senator Black said he is prepared to produce affidavits to show that fake telegrams were sent from a small town in Alabama.

While Western Union officials protested that an accurate count of the power lobby telegrams would be practically impossible, T. V. Kingsbury, superintendent of the Washington office, gave an impromptu estimate that 87,000 lobby telegrams were received in the local office in the week that the House debated the bill. He promised more detailed data later.

Gadsden, chairman of the Committee of Public Utility Executives, who previously charged that his files had been rifled by committee agents, issued a statement during the day. He said in part:

"If subsequent evidence confirms the accusation that representatives of a utility holding company have sent out fake telegrams opposing the public utilities bill, the Committee of Public Utility Executives condemns such action as dishonest just as strongly as any other group in the United States.

"The company to which this action is attributed is a subsidiary of the Associated Gas & Electric Co. The Associated Gas & Electric Co. is not a member of the Committee of Public Utility Executives and has had no connection whatsoever with it."

Senator Minton Replies.

To this Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, a member of the lobby committee, replied:

"The committee of utility executives of which Mr. Gadsden was chairman was just a front for the big lobby. It is common knowledge that Mr. Gadsden's committee would not allow certain of the industry's black sheep to even light in Washington while the congressional committees were holding hearings on the Wheeler-Rayburn bill.

"Apparently the bad boys of the utilities were permitted to do their work outside of Washington in their own way. Mr. Gadsden's holier-than-thou attitude is amusing to those who know the facts."

A. F. Christenson, the simplex operator whom Jack A. Fisher, Warren Western Union manager, suspects of having burned the file of telegrams, steadfastly denied under cross-examination that he conspired with Herron to destroy the records or that he had any part in their destruction.

He admitted starting a fire in the office stove and burning one or two days' files which he picked up at random in the belief that they were a year or more old and, therefore, should be destroyed. This was the first and only time he had taken a hand in destroying records, he said.

Christensen said the files were in disarray when he found them, and he insisted that the July, 1934, records should be burned, although Elmer insisted that they should not be destroyed until August 1.

The simplex operator, now suspended, was alone when he started the fire and burned the files. A few hours earlier he had talked with Herron, although the only portion of the conversation he could remember was that Herron had asked for Fisher; been told that he had gone for a haircut, and that then the bond salesman had paced the floor "like he was worried" until the manager arrived.

Christensen said that Fisher told him Herron was worried because he feared he might be sentenced to prison for 20 years for forgery if it were found out that the telegrams were faked.

Consumers Ignored.

Several times the simplex operator insinuated that Fisher might have had a hand in the destruction of the files or at least opened the way for Herron to destroy them.

Committee members learned much about the manner in which telegraph companies "develop" business when important legislation is pending before Congress when they questioned Frank R. Veale, general superintendent of Western Union for the eastern division, and L. A. Shew, Erie (Pa.) manager.

Shew admitted contacting O'Brien, the A. G. & E. representative, after a few telegrams had been sent on the utility bill. O'Brien subsequently sent about 2,200 messages to Senators and Representatives via Western Union and between 1,600 and 1,700 via Postal, Shew said. The cost he estimated at $1,700 or $1,800.

"Did you make any effort to develop business among the consumers?" asked Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington.

"No," replied Shew.

Veale admitted that instructions had gone out from the New York office to all managers to get their share of the lobby messages, but he emphasized that employes were told to be impartial.

He insisted, under questioning, that Western Union employes could not challenge signatures and said he saw no need for a Federal statute, as suggested by Senator Black, to make it a crime to forge a telegram.

Veale produced out of a pasteboard box the fragments of burnt telegrams which he and Fisher had found in the Warren office stove. As Senators and photographers gathered around, he at first expressed the belief that they were not original copies of wires sent to Driscoll; but were copies of messages used by the messenger boys in soliciting signatures.

When pressed by Senator Black, however, and shown that a signature on a burnt fragment was identical with that on a telegram received by Driscoll, he admitted that the June 26-27 records might have been destroyed. He admitted not knowing where they might be and said the investigation was not closed.

Relates Conversation.

Shew related in detail from notes he had taken in pencil a conversation he had last Saturday with Herron and O'Brien in Erie in connection with the destruction of the Warren records. Shew explained that he was trying to determine if Herron knew anything about the destruction.

It was at this time that Herron and O'Brien both admitted destroying their own records, and that O'Brien suggested replacing the Warren files so that no one would be the wiser. He said that his men would help get actual signatures for the records.

Herron expressed surprise at the loss of the Warren records, Shew said, but suggested that Fisher had become "panicky" when the investigation began and had burned them because many of them had been written on Western Union typewriters. The bond salesman said he would deny having had any hand in sending the messages if a Federal inquiry developed.

Shew revealed that receipts given O'Brien and his aids for the 2,200 telegrams were all made out "To Bearer" upon O'Brien's request. O'Brien furnished all the telegrams, but insisted that his aids had obtained permission to use the signatures.

William P. Bach, acting manager at Warren, testified that Warren office records showed payments by Herron for telegrams on four occasions, aggregating about $375. On each notation were the initials "A. G. E.," which Bach could not explain.

Denies Sending Wire.

John S. Bayer, whose denial of having sent a telegram to Driscoll started the investigation, took the stand to deny having had any hand in sending the message.

He said he made no protest, however, upon learning of the use of his name because the president of the Warren Kiwanis Club told him Fisher "was on the spot because of the phony telegrams he sent."

"I told him I'd stand by my oars, come what may," said Bayer with much dignity. "Two wrongs won't make a right."

Mrs. Gladys E. Loding, clerk in the Warren office, corroborated Fisher's testimony of Tuesday to the effect that Herron dictated most of the telegrams, that Fisher wrote others, and that names were taken out of the telephone directory.

While Representative Oliver Cross (Democrat), of Texas, offered a bill making it a felony to forge names on messages to Congressmen favoring or opposing legislation, Representative Brewster said he was ready to sacrifice his reputation for the Passamaquoddy project.

His secretary, Roy T. Haines, testified that Dr. Harry Corry, of the Public Works Administration, had told him "nothing would be done on the 'Quoddy' project until the holding company bill is out of the way" and that Brewster had better hurry back from Maine as he was holding up the project. Corry subsequently said this story is "absurd."

The House committee adjourned after hearing Corcoran again deny that he used the "Quoddy" project as a threat over Brewster.

To Honor Missionary.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Kilmarnock, Va., July 17.—Preparation is being made for the Shuck Centennial Celebration at Kilmarnock, Lancaster County, Wednesday, August 14, when a tablet will be unveiled in memory of Henrietta Hall Shuck, first American Missionary to China. Text of Utility Firm's Defense

Our knowledge of unauthentic telegrams which, according to testimony before Senator Black's committee yesterday, were sent to Representative Driscoll through one of our local representatives in Warren, Pa., is limited to newspaper accounts which appeared late last evening and this morning. We can make no statement on this instance until we have had opportunity to make an investigation and ascertain the facts.

Mr. Herron, our local representative in Warren, and his superior have been with the system for 7 and 17 years, respectively, without any complaints against them. We propose to stand by them until we have convincing evidence that some other action is warranted.

We have from the beginning opposed the destructive provisions of the Wheeler-Rayburn bill. We have done everything we could do to inform our customers, security holders, and employes of the injury to their interests which lies in this legislation, and have urged them to protest against it to their Senators and Representatives in Congress. We have done our utmost to keep all such opposition ethical and dignified.

We realize that in an organization composed of more than 15,000 employes there may be occasional instances of impropriety where people are either excessively zealous or embittered at the prospect of legislation adversely affecting their own means of livelihood and the organization for which they have worked for years. Nevertheless, in view of the pains we have taken to impress our people with the importance of seeing that only bona fide protests against the Wheeler-Rayburn bill are sent to members of Congress, we are not disposed to comment on the testimony before Senator Black's committee until we are better satisfied of its accuracy.

There has been some comment about lack of knowledge of the utility bill or age of experience of some people who have solicited protests against this legislation. It is not surprising that such lack of familiarity has proved to be little or no handicap to anyone who has undertaken to develop expressions of opposition to this bill.

It has been years since Congress has had under consideration a proposal on which the public has been so well informed. Because of the general feeling of outrage over such an effort to confiscate the property of investors, any person has been welcomed who has offered to assist people in making known their feelings about the legislation to their duly elected representatives in the Senate and in the House.

We intend to continue every effort to defend the interests of Associated customers and investors. We estimate the cost of this defense will amount to about 1 cent for each $9 invested in the Associated Gas & Electric System. The total cost of opposition by the Associated Gas & Electric System to the destructive provisions of the Wheeler-Rayburn bill so far amounts to approximately $700,000.

That amount is insignificant in comparison with the value of the securities, even on the basis of existing low market quotations, which the sponsors of this legislation have undertaken to destroy.

Except for repeated demands by the Administration for the enactment of such a bill, the necessity for this expense would not have arisen. With such influential support from the Administration, however, and the means at its disposal to exert pressure on Congress, the alternative to undertaking this defense was to refrain from opposing the ruthless confiscation of invested savings.

We feel it significant that in the course of our efforts to protect investors' interests and the generous and effective cooperation of Associated security holders themselves, there has come about a substantial improvement in market quotations for Associated securities and a resultant recovery of millions of dollars in the value of investors' holdings.

Court Decision Backing TVA Flayed, Lauded

Conference Battle Looms at Capitol; Norris Is 'Delighted.'

By the Associated Press.

While the Senate and House prepared for a conference battle of their own over new TVA legislation, a mingling of praise and criticism last night greeted the action of the Court of Appeals in New Orleans in declaring the vast project constitutional.

Senator Norris (Republican), Nebraska, father of the Tennessee Valley act, received word of the court's action with a broad smile and a spontaneous, "I am delighted."

"It's just what I expected," he said. "I think it's the only conclusion that any legal, logical mind can reach under the TVA act and the Constitution."

Representative May (Democrat), Kentucky, bitter foe of the TVA, said he had "no doubt" the decision would be "reversed when it reaches the United States Supreme Court."

May expressed surprise that the New Orleans court went into the constitutionality of the act in reversing Federal Judge W. I. Grubb, of the Northern Alabama District.

"Puzzling" Decision.

"Judge Grubb expressly refused to act upon the constitutionality of the act," said May, "and I don't understand why the Circuit Court of Appeals should decide something not raised in the lower court's decision."

Arthur E. Morgan, chairman of the valley authority, and David Lilienthal, a director, both expressed pleasure when informed of the decision, but declined to make any formal statement until they had read the decision.

Meanwhile the amendments to expand and bulwark the powers of the TVA faced a possible deadlock over an attempt to reconcile deep-seated House and Senate differences over the legislation.

The House refused yesterday to go along with the action by which the Senate substituted its own bill, desired by the Administration, for a modified measure passed by the House.

Instead it sent the legislation to conference, and Speaker Byrns named a House delegation, a majority of which has opposed bitterly any further amplification of TVA powers.

Foes Force Action.

He was compelled to do that by an agreement enforced on the House Military Committee by TVA foes before they would permit any TVA legislation to reach a vote.

But in the face of protests from Representative Maverick (Democrat), Texas, against a conference committee "unfriendly" to TVA, Byrns asserted that it was assumed "they will stand for the position taken by the House, so far as is possible."

"That will mean a deadlock," predicted Representative May. "I am sure the conferees, even though most of them do not want even the House bill, will stand by that measure, which is much better than the Senate's."

Both the Senate and House bills would give TVA definite authority from Congress to sell surplus electricity, to construct transmission lines to carry power to markets, and to regulate rates.

Birth Control Is Urged By Lady Astor in House

London, July 17 (AP).—Lady Astor, speaking with all her usual fire, told the House of Commons today England should adopt birth control to reduce maternal mortality due to illegal operations. The Virginia-born members called on the nation "as a Protestant country which should have the courage of its convictions" to accept the doctrine of Dr. Marie Stopes, famed birth control advocate and author of the controversial book, "Married Love."

20 Are Injured As Train Hits Truck in Ohio

P.R.R. Limited Derailed in Accident; D. C. Woman Escapes Injury.

By the Associated Press.

Upper Sandusky, Ohio, July 17.—Twenty persons were injured today in a wreck of the Pennsylvania Railroad's Liberty Limited.

The speeding locomotive plowed into a truck trailer at a crossing and was derailed. It tore up tracks for three blocks, sheared off the loading platform of a freight depot, wrecked several freight cars and then overturned.

Crew Men Hurt.

Two railroaders and the truck driver were injured seriously. They are I. D. Todd, of Fort Wayne, Ind., engineer, scalds and fracture of right arm; R. W. Ritchie, of Fort Wayne, fireman, scalds, and Robert Williams, of Cambridge, Ohio, driver of the truck, rib fractures, cuts and bruises.

Williams stopped his truck at the Main street crossing to permit an eastbound tarin to pass shortly after 5 a. m. As the eastbound train cleared the crossing he drove upon the tracks, not seeing the westbound limited.

The locomotive struck the trailer of his truck, ground it beneath the wheels and then jumped the track. The engineer and fireman were pinned in the wreckage and scalded by steam as the boiler broke. Windows of houses 200 feet from the tracks were broken by stones churned up by the flying wheels.

Cars Stay Upright.

Among those who escaped injury was Mrs. Ray Duke, 45, of 505 Decatur street, Washington, D. C., en route to visit relatives in Chicago.

Heat Wave in West Causes 10 Deaths

2 Added to Death Toll as Southwest Swelters.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, July 17.—Scorching heat claimed two more lives in the Far West today.

The deaths, which brought the total for two days in the Southwest to ten, occurred when E. S. Ensor collapsed on an oil lease near Maricopa, Calif., and Cliff Davis, en route with his family from Hollister, Calif., to Sardis, Miss., succumbed at Salome, Ariz.

Damage was caused in Phoenix, Ariz., by the most severe electrical and wind storm of the season.

Oregon experienced the hottest week-end in its history and a damaging wind and electrical storm yesterday.

Fire raged over more than 2,000 acres of dry grass inland from San Francisco Bay. Emergency crews were pressed into action to save ranch homes, including one owned by Chick Hafey, former major league baseball player.

Nickel-Slot Parking Meters Clear Oklahoma City Streets

Issue of Paying for Time Car Is at Curb Headed for Courts.

By the Associated Press.

Oklahoma City, July 17.—The row over Oklahoma City's new slot machine parking system was headed for court settlement tonight.

Attorney Ed Butterfield—out to "jam the mechanism of the city's parking meter ordinance enforcement"—obtained a district court restraining order to prevent enforcement. A hearing on a permanent injunction was set for Monday.

Butterfield said a second case might be filed in the State Supreme Court "if anybody is arrested" for refusing to drop a nickel in one of the 200 parking meters installed on trial.

Use of the meters puzzled many. A 20-foot space is marked off next the curb adjacent to each meter. The meters, about the size of mantel clocks, are set on upright poles at the edge of the sidewalk. They were invented by Carl Magee, newspaper editor and attorney.

Pranksters quickly found a way to jam the meters to prevent the time dials from working. Magee was patient. He said many problems would arise before public spirit comes to the support of his invention.

The inventor's contention is that parking space rightfully belonging to shoppers has been "hogged" mainly by employes of downtown business houses. He says merchants will benefit by the system.

In the first two days of the experimental period, started yesterday, there was parking space galore for shoppers who wanted to pay their nickels for leaving their cars in various time zones—ranging from 15 minutes to two hours.

Magee, who spent $10,000 developing the meters, said he sold them to the city at cost.

Boise's Max Bear Back In Cage After a Bout

By the Associated Press.

Boise, Idaho, July 17.—Max Bear was back in his cage tonight, but it took the fire department to put him there.

The cub bear broke from his beer garden chains yesterday and shinnied up a tree. He battled all comers successfully until firemen—hook, ladder and all—took a hand. Fireman Avery Fay went up after Max. They sparred. Finally Fay grabbed the bear by a leg. They both came down, uninjured.

Max lost the decision, but won an ice cream cone. Fireman Fay won the owner's gratitude—and a couple of scratches.

9 Men Trapped In Mine Blast In Kentucky

2 Miles From Entrance, Little Hope Is Held for Their Rescue.

By the Associated Press.

Van Lear, Ky., July 17. — Fear that nine men had met death in a gas explosion which trapped them in a hillside mine, nearly 2 miles from its entrance, was expressed here tonight as fire blocked the way of rescue workers.

The explosion occurred this morning in mine No. 5 of the Consolidation Coal Co., one of the largest coal mines in the eastern Kentucky field.

Mine officials declined to discuss the explosion, except to confirm that nine men were trapped in the workings, and to say the mine superintendent, W. M. Gunning, was directing rescue operations.

No one was spared in the fight to save the trapped miners. Rescue crews were brought here from every other mine in this section, one coming as far away as Norton, Va.

The men trapped by the explosion were members of a crew who were taking out railway tracks in an abandoned section of the mine. Three other men, about 600 feet away, were injured but managed to escape.

Kansans Rally To Wage Fight ForProhibition

State Struggle to Put Teeth in Dry Law Is First Move.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., July 17.—Kansas drys were rallying tonight for a State struggle they believe will start a national campaign to restore Federal prohibition.

Their first goal is to put teeth in the State's 54-year-old prohibition amendment—now helpless to stop the flow of 3.2 beer at the tables of more than 5,000 federally licensed dealers.

"We're in for a bitter fight, but we'll win. Our victory will encourage the drys all over the country and perhaps do much to start a new crusade for national prohibition."

The predictions were voiced by the Rev. John R. Golden, of Topeka, chairman of the Kansas prohibition emergency committee. He displayed communications from prohibitionists the State over, offering help.

Kansas drys are pointing for a special session of the Legislature, expected this fall. They will demand passage of a bill outlawing all drinks possessing an alcoholic content of more than one-half of 1 per cent.

In the absence of a State law defining intoxicants, 3.2 beer is being sold freely. It has been given semilegal standing through licensing ordinances enacted by 66 cities and municipalities.

Dry leaders have hinted that should the Legislature fail to outlaw beer, they might "draft" the Topeka minister to run for Governor on a dry platform next year.

The scholarly, quiet-mannered Mr. Golden has been fighting the "liquor racket" more than 30 years. The fight has drawn him into politics several times already.

Newton Elks Win Ritualistic Honors

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, July 17.—The Newton (Mass.), Lodge team won ritualistic honors at the seventy-first annual national convention of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks today. The winners scored 98.57 points in the annual degree team contest.

Monmouth, Ill., was second with 98.19, and Newark, Ohio., third with 97.79.

A gigantic parade of 50 floats and 35,000 persons will climax the convention tomorrow. Grand Exalted Ruler James T. Hallinan, of New York, will review the procession.

California and Florida delegations completed today elaborate and costly floats. The former will carry 5,000 natural flowers and the latter will depict a beach scene bathing beauties, living trees and flamingoes and monkeys.

Frazier Slated To Head New Liquor Board

Leaders to Recommend Virginia Man for Appointment.

By the Associated Press.

Nationally known dry leaders have asserted they will recommend to President Roosevelt the appointment of T. McCall Frazier of the Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board as head of the new Federal alcohol control organization proposed in a bill now pending in Congress.

This statement was made yesterday by reliable authorities who would not allow their identification to be made public.

Frazier's backers have communicated with heads of a foundation which has made a Nation-wide study of the liquor problem in the United States and with Senators Glass and Byrd, who with other Senators will go to the President in his behalf if the bill is passed.

The position is comparable to that now held by Joseph H. Choate, chairman of the Federal Alcohol Administration set up by President Roosevelt to control all of the liquor industry except manufacture and tax collection.

A bill now before Congress would reorganize the administration. There has been a move to place the FACA under the Treasury Department, but this was opposed by both Secretary Morgenthau and Chairman Choate.

One of the most prominent national dry leaders supporting Frazier has investigated the Virginia control plan and declared it to be "one of the best—if not the best—in the country."

State Highway Unit Allots Road Funds

Virginia Allocation Will Require Another Week.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 17.—Another week's time will probably be required by the State highway commission to complete final allocation of approximately $20,000,000 for road projects, Highway Commissioner H. G. Shirley said today at the conclusion of the second day of conferences.

Nearly $7,500,000 of Federal work relief funds is involved, along with almost $13,000,000 of the State's money, which will be allocated according to a compromise plan submitted by Mr. Shirley and accepted by Federal officials.

After allocations have been completed by the board, public hearings will be held on their plans.

Baltimore Woman Killed in Quarrel

Slayer Shoots Himself, in Dying Condition.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 17.—A 30-year-old woman was shot and killed here today by a man who later shot himself and who is said to be dying of his wounds. The dead woman was Mrs. Elsie Young. Police Capt. M. Joseph Wallace said she was shot by Morgan Webster, 37.

The shooting occurred at the home of Mrs. Gwendolyn Clark here. Mrs. Young went there early this afternoon and a short time later Webster and another man, whose name police did not reveal, came to the Clark home.

Capt. Wallace quoted Mrs. Clark as saying Webster requested to speak to Mrs. Young alone.

New Deal Wins On TVA Status In Circuit Court

Alabama Case Is Reversed Sent Back to Grubb for Rehearing.

ers granted to the Federal Government is not in conflict with but is necessarily superior to the dominion over such waters which the States reserved for themselves.

"It leads nowhere to say that the Federal Government, in exercising its constitutional powers, acts within 'State domain' since at the same time it is acting within its own domain as well."

Rehearing Is Ordered.

Judge Grubb had held that in creating TVA, first of the alphabetical agencies sponsored by President Roosevelt's New Deal, Congress had exceeded its constitutional authority. The court reversed and remanded the Alabama jurist's decision and now the case returns to his court for rehearing.

The test case originated from an injunction sought by stockholders of Alabama Power Co., protesting sale or lease of Alabama Power Co. transmission lines to TVA. The TVA act of May 18, 1933, authorized the Government to take over the war-time "white elephant" of Wilson Dam and the nitrate plants at Muscle Shoals, Ala., and build new dams to improve navigation, flood control and generally work for the betterment of the Tennessee Valley.

Possible War Use Cited.

Also—and foremost in public interest—the TVA was authorized to sell to municipalities in the area surplus hydro-electric power available at the dams it operated on the Tennessee River. This current would be distributed over municipally owned systems to citizens at the low "yardstick" rates, which average about half those charged by private utilities in the region.

The Appellate Court said: "The right was reserved by the Government, in case of war, to take possession of the property for the purpose of manufacturing explosives or other war purposes.

"The fact that purposes other than navigation (and national defense) will also be served, could not invalidate the exercise of the authority conferred (by Congress), even if those other purposes would not alone have justified an exercise of the congressional power.

Motives Immaterial.

"It does not appear that TVA is doing or proposes to do anything more than is authorized by the act. This being so, its motives are immaterial.

"The section of the act which provides that the President shall make recommendations to Congress as to the future policy of developing the Tennessee Valley is unobjectionable, as in any event the President can make any such recommendations to Congress as he thinks proper.

"The act is not subject to the criticism that Congress has abandoned all purposes of navigation and national defense, since navigation is now being improved.

Sibley Goes Farther.

"The act provides for the location of Norris Dam, but whether specifically enough as to type is, as we think, immaterial; for Wilson Dam alone, without any assistance from Norris, Wheeler or Pickwick dams, has a surplus after serving the transmission lines which it agreed to purchase from the Alabama Power Co.

"Besides, the Alabama Power Co. has no standing to object even though these additional dams have not been properly authorized by Congress. It is not a riparian owner, or the owner of a dam site which the Government is assuming to take; nor has it any special interests as would entitle it to object to proposed improvement in aid of the national defense or of navigation."

Judge Sibley concurring in the opinion, also added:

"The manner of the disposal of public property and the extent to which it may be allowed to affect private business are within the discretion of Congress. An exercise of legislative discretion is reviewable at the ballot box rather than in the courts.

By the United Press.

Birmingham, Ala., July 17.—Federal Judge W. I. Grubb would not comment today when informed that the Fifth United States Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans had overruled his anti-TVA decision.

The judge said the case would be returned to his court, but he would not forecast the possible date for a rehearing. "Those things are indefinite," he said.

By the Associated Press.

Knoxville, Tenn., July 17.—Chancellor A. K. Mitchell today upheld the legal right of the Tennessee Public Service Co., local utility, to a temporary injunction restraining the City of Knoxville from building a municipal electric power distributing system to use the Tennessee Valley Authority power.

Divorce Suit Charges Reynolds Heir Is Insane

Reno Nev., July 17 (U.P.).—William Neal Reynolds 2d, member of the Reynolds tobacco family, was charged with insanity in a divorce suit filed late today by Mrs. Ruth Hatcher Reynolds, of Winston-Salem, N. C.

She asked appointment of a guardian to represent him in the divorce action. Reynolds, according to her complaint, was adjudged insane by the Virginia courts September 4, 1934, and since has been an inmate of the Craig House, a sanitarium at Beacon, N. Y.

The Reynolds were married at Washington, August 8, 1932. They have no children.

Hostile Senate Adds to AAA's Fear of Courts

legally collected. Passage of the AAA amendments substantially in their present form would ease the situation considerably, it is contended, although it would not remove all doubt of AAA invalidity.

Strike Out Price Fixing.

These conclusions became apparent as Davis and Seth Thomas, AAA solicitor, for more than an hour discussed with newspaper correspondents the opinion of the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals at Boston which held in a suit brought by the Hoosac Mills Corporation that the existing processing taxes were invalid because of unconstitutional delegation of power, if not also because Congress even lacks authority to impose such a levy.

Shortly before the Davis-Thomas conference the Senate reversed its action yesterday in approving a price-fixing provision in the AAA amendments bill and by a vote of 44 to 41 struck that section from the measure. A few minutes later, by a vote of 49 to 33, it rejected a proposed processing tax of 35 cents a bushel on flaxseed.

The friends of the measure, however, later regained control when they retained in the bill a processing tax of 25 cents a bushel on barley. But the vote on that question was 43 to 41. These narrow margins in the voting indicate clearly the hostility existing in the Senate toward the AAA proposals.

The adverse vote on the price-fixing provision caused concern because it was feared that before the Senate finishes with the measure it may whittle down some of its more essential provisions and thus leave the AAA without adequate strength when the issue of its validity must be definitely settled by the Supreme Court.

Quickly Remedied.

Davis at the outset of his conference said he had not fully digested all the implications of the Hoosac opinion but believed the court had invalidated the processing taxes not on the ground that Congress lacked authority to make such a levy, but rather on the ground that it had improperly delegated to the Secretary of Agriculture the authority to levy such taxes.

The administrator added that it was true that the court had engaged in a discussion of the authority of the Federal Government to control the growing of crops and to levy a tax for that purpose, but that it seemed to him it made the question of delegation of authority the keystone of its findings.

If that were correct, he said, the situation would be quickly remedied by the pending AAA amendments before the case even reaches the Supreme Court. Those amendments specify the processing taxes to be levied, provide that such taxes shall be paid into the general funds of the Treasury and redefine more specifically a standard to guide the Secretary of Agriculture.

In addition this legislation outlaws all pending processing tax suits and provides that none of the approximately $900,000,000 processing taxes already paid may be recovered, even though it is held they were illegally imposed. Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, however, has proposed an amendment to strike out those provisions.

Davis said that the Boston decision would not cause any changes in the AAA program pending a determination of the controversy by the Supreme Court. He explained that up to the present time the AAA's acreage reduction contract obligations totaled about $1,600,000,000. Of this sum approximately $900,000,000 had been paid in the form of benefits, an amount approximately equivalent to the sum collected so far from processing taxes.

Obligations already entered into, but for which performance has not yet been made, total about $700,000,000 more, he said. The AAA will continue to carry on and will commit itself to additional obligations as the program may require until the Supreme Court definitely rules the processing taxes invalid, he said.

Davis said he regarded the AAA contracts where performance has been achieved—that is, where farmers have reduced crops or acreage—as "morally if not also legally binding on the Government." Thus should the Supreme Court rule out the processing taxes and direct that the sums collected should be returned to the payers, the Treasury would be confronted with claims of at least $900,000,000 from processors, $700,000,000 from farmers and as much more as the AAA obligates itself to in the next six months or so. If paid, this sum would have to come out of the general fund and would boost the deficit by that amount.

This is based on the assumption that Congress fails to pass the AAA amendments in their present form or that the Supreme Court rules out the proposed prohibition against suits and repayments. Congress, however, could block repayment of taxes already collected by refusing to appropriate for their refund.

Should the Boston decision have the result of reducing the Treasury's income from processing taxes—that is, if other Federal courts, as did one in Philadelphia yesterday, follow the ruling of the appellate tribunal and prevent the collection of such revenues—the Administration may have to delve into the $4,000,000,000 works relief fund. The George amendment to the works relief act authorizes the use of the fund for that purpose.

Davis thought that invalidation of the processing taxes would mean the end of the AAA, because, he added, he believed that the only farm relief scheme with a prospect of success was one under which a crop or commodity paid the cost of its stabilization.

"That is my opinion," he added, "but I do not mean to indicate that I believe the Supreme Court will uphold invalidation of the processing taxes."

10,000 Public Enemies

By Courtney Ryley Cooper

Chapter IV.—Merchandising Crime.

Successes in crime are those who conduct their lives largely along the same lines pursued by the business man who believes in wide acquaintanceship, complete familiarity with all necessary contacts, and in the value of influence, both family and political. No man can succeed in business by drawing off by himself. Exactly the same precepts hold true for the person who chooses to align himself against the law.

Yet organization in crime is only a term, a phrase. Even in the days of Al Capone, there was no such thing as real organization. Mainly Capone ruled—if such can be the term—because he got in on a growing business where there was a tremendous demand for liquor and little call for law enforcement. He made money and made it fast, therefore he could hire thugs to promote his business, attorneys with tremendous political influence to protect it, and bribe almost whom he chose. He had a certain business ability. Yet he was no genius. He got away with it while the going was easy, like a rich prospector with both hands full of money, who is able to buy a town—because he pays for it. When the going became hard, Capone went to prison, and did it with a far greater degree of submission than many desperadoes of the present day.

The effort to place Capone behind bars was for years a farce. He even obligingly dropped in at police stations whenever he heard he was wanted and almost as quickly walked out again. But finally the United State Government decided that he had come within its jurisdiction on an income tax matter. An opportunity then was provided to establish the exact degree of shrewdness and cunning possessed by this alleged emperor of crime.

Capone hitherto had evaded courts by turning the matter over to his attorneys. They in turn had dismissed the annoyance by methods which gangsters' attorneys, especially in those days, seemed to know so well. Therefore, when the Federal court called Capone, he looked upon the summons with his usual disdain.

In all justice to Al Capone, this was not his fault. That responsibility belonged to the American people who allowed him to build up a political machine, to help control elections, and who, in many cases, heroized him because he established a few soup kitchens and gave away food to hungry men during cold winters.

Special Agents Check Al Capone's Health.

Al Capone was called as a witness in a prohibition case before Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson, in Chicago. Capone dismissed the matter and went to Florida, his attorneys submitting an affidavit by a physician of Miami, stating that Capone was recuperating from bronchial pneumonia and that a trip to Chicago would endanger his life.

Excuses of this type had sufficed before in the lesser branches of the judiciary to which Mr. Capone had been invited. It did not satisfy Judge Wilkerson. The Bureau of Investigation was given the task of determining the exact extent of Capone's illness and his inability to attend court.

Special agents therefore were sent to Miami. The investigation was ridiculously simple. They found that Capone's treatment for bronchial pneumonia consisted of frequent trips to the race track and jockey club. Another specific was seaplane trips between Miami and Bimini, in the Bahama Islands, where he went to confer with liquor runners.

The special agents made their report to the court, and for the first time Capone really felt the strength of law. He was sentenced to six months for contempt, which he served concurrently with the term he is now undergoing at Alcatraz Island for income-tax evasion.

The point is not that Capone tried to beat the law. It is the fact that a crook can always find someone to help him in his attempts to defeat justice. In the files of the Bureau of Investigation are countless alibis, or even given perjured testimony regarding questioned documents simply because some criminal asked them to do so.

The crook depends on all that.

As conditions exist, the worthwhile criminal of today knows exactly where to find aid in any city of size in America. He knows what merchant to patronize, what tailor makes clothes with concealed pistol pockets, which hotels and resorts are "right," what cities have politically dominated police. He has the name of the crooked banker or broker or fence who will take ransom money or banknotes off his hands at a discount. He has the telephone numbers and names of doctors who will attend his wounds if he is injured in the commission of a crime and who will keep the fact a secret. He even has a fairly good record of "soft" pardon boards, easy governors and "gill" or loosely run prisons, so that if caught for his crimes, he may plead guilty to something in a State where punishment is not severe and where the parole board is composed of "sisters" who believe that all a convict needs to make him a model of sweetness and gentility is a little more freedom. He even knows what beauty-shop proprietor to patronize to get his hair dyed.

Naturally, these are generalized statements. It will not be difficult to prove all of them. Here is one item in particular. Suppose you should decide that your family automobile should be made bullet proof. Just how would you go about it?

There would be the questions by the police, to inquire just why you desired this car armor-plated. There would be questions from the motor-car company. And if you never have seen a bullet-proofed car, perhaps a description of one might give some idea of the difficulties attendant upon having the job done.

How Armored Cars Are Constructed

The body is of thick steel, so thick that a strong effort is necessary to close a door. Even the top is made of light armor plate. Every bit of glass used in the windows and panels is at least three-quarters of an inch thick and of the nonshatterable variety. The windshield is raised from the bottom, to allow the muzzle of a machine gun to be shoved through with the least possible danger to the person who operates it. The same is true of the rear panel, usually immovable. There are special apertures in the dashboard for automatic pistols, the inlay and woodwork being so carefully done that even the most inquisitive policeman, once the drawer is locked, would pass this receptacle as a factory job. The same is true of machine gun racks concealed in the rear of the front seats.

The tires are filled with a puncture-healing liquid which flows immediately into any hole that may be created by a bullet, thus allowing the car to proceed, no matter how many persons shoot at the tires. The radiator grill is of bullet-resisting steel, and the engine is protected by plating which lies inside the hood.

All of this work is done perfectly, professionally. The trademarks of the car remain as they originally existed. Here, therefore, is a job which requires a tremendous amount of equipment. Where is it all done? Many law-enforcement officers would like to know. They can't find out. But persons in apparently remote places have no difficulty. I remember Joe Roma.

An inoffensive sort of fellow as I knew him. He ran a little grocery store on what is known as the North Side of Denver, and believed in beautiful things. Joe liked to go to church. He loved flowers and music. All the children loved Joe Roma. Parents said it was because he loved children.

There were rumors about Joe. The North Side at that time was Denver's dispensary for what was known as Sugar Moon. The rumors insisted that Joe Roma was at the head of this business and that he had caused the killing of several Italians who had tried to "muscle in" on his trade.

Of course Joe denied all this. He even persuaded a high police official to accompany him on a visit to the managing editor of a newspaper which had hinted that Joe was a gangster—there the police official told of Joe's love of family, of home, of children and of music. This is no reflection on the official; he was sincere. But one day Joe Roma was found dead in his grocery store, shot to death by his enemies in the racket which he had sought to control. His quiet little home was an arsenal: machine guns, automatic pistols, shotguns. And his expensive automobile, in which many persons had taken pleasure rides, was one of those bullet-proofed affairs which I have just described.

Denver is 1,750 miles from New York, nearly 1,000 from Chicago, two cities in which gangster activities might support an armored-car factory. Possibly Joe Roma sent to one of these places for his machine.

Auto Left Factory An Ordinary Vehicle

I do not know the details of the search to learn where Joe had his bullet-proofing done. But I am familiar with efforts in other cases. An armor-plated car was discovered in a garage in Boston, evidently abandoned. Police and Federal officials began the job of tracing. They learned that the automobile had left the factory an ordinary vehicle, just like thousands of others which had come from the assembly line. Somewhere along the list of imaginary owners, the car had gone into a hidden factory there to be transformed under expert workmanship into a traveling fortress. When that place is found, there is every reason to believe that it will be an automobile body-building plant which ostensibly operates as a legitimate business. And the owner probably will be a member of some civic club in the city in which he lives, intensely interested in municipal progress.

Or perhaps I can show by the case of Joe Dunne, convicted with 13 others of running a lottery, how simple it is for one member of the criminal element to contact others in different parts of the country.

The lottery was to be a sweepstakes on the Saratoga Handicap at Saratoga, N. Y. The drawing was to be in Juarez, old Mexico. The officers were in El Paso, Tex. The printing of the lottery tickets was done in Albuquerque, N. M. And agents, many of whom worked under aliases, were appointed as the result of a single three-week motor trip, taken through the country in the same casual manner that a sales manager would go out to appoint representatives for legitimate business.

Within a month, the tickets were being sold in 19 States, from New York to Los Angeles. There was no hesitation anywhere, no skirmishing about. Joe Dunne went into a town, found his men, arranged the financial end of the transaction and drove on again. When indictments were handed down it was necessary to pick up defendants in New Mexico, New York, Illinois, Minnesota, Missouri, Oklahoma, California and Arkansas.

House Offered Bill to Set Up 30-Hour Week

Measure for Licensing Industry, to Replace NRA, Faces Fight.

By the Associated Press.

A new bill to put industry on a 30-hour work week splashed yesterday into the turbulent legislative waters.

The measure, approved by the House Labor Committee, would create a Federal commission to license industries sending goods or commodities into interstate commerce.

Work employes not more than 30 hours a week, provide wages adequate for a decent and comfortable standard of living, accept collective bargaining, outlaw dealings with parties to "yellow dog" contracts and ban workers under 16 years of age and convict or forced labor.

Chairman Connery (Democrat), Massachusetts, said the measure was intended to replace NIRA.

His committee told him to employ every parliamentary strategy to obtain action this session. But when Speaker Byrns was questioned on prospects of a House vote, he said:

"That depends entirely on how long the session lasts. You know they will have to get a rule first."

Privately, another Democratic leader recalled that with a 30-hour week failing to receive White House support, the Rules Committee "has for years held up 30-hour legislation."

Plans to Ask Rule.

Nevertheless, Connery planned to introduce, perhaps Friday, a resolution asking for a rule to bring the controversial bill before the House.

He said that should the Rules Committee fail to approve the resolution, a move might be made to get the legislation on the floor by a petition requiring signatures of 216 members.

The measure would not apply to banks, newspapers and magazines, or to agricultural or farm products sold to the consumer without processing after leaving the farm.

Shouse Raps New Deal As He Sails for Europe

New York, July 17 (AP).—Jouett Shouse, president of the American Liberty League, sharply criticized the Roosevelt Administration and predicted there would be a day of reckoning as he and Mrs. Shouse sailed on the liner Manhattan today.

After charging the Administration with "perverting the form of the American Government" and blaming legislators as well as the President for "this situation," Shouse declined to say just what he thought will happen in 1936.

Germany Asks Spain To Remove General

Madrid, July 17 (AP).—Sources usually reliable said today Germany has demanded the removal of Gen. Ferdinando Capaz as chief of the Spanish intelligence service in Morocco as a result of a recent incident.

Gen. Capaz returned to French authorities for court-martial five German fugitives from the French Foreign Legion who were found hiding at Cabo Juby. The demand was presented to the government by the German Ambassador, it was reported.

Buster Keaton's Wife Files Suit for Divorce

Los Angeles, July 17 (AP).—Mae Elizabeth Keaton filed suit today for divorce against Buster Keaton, film comedian, naming as corespondent Mrs. Leah Clampitt Sewell, who figured recently in the Emerson-Sewell "wife-swapping" divorce suit.

Mrs. Keaton also asked $200,000 damages from Mrs. Sewell.

Tenements May Block D. C. Housing Project

Here is the row of tenement buildings at 121-141 P street southwest which Miss Minnie Keyes, owner, is fighting to save. The Government wants to tear down the buildings to build a $3,000,000 low-cost housing project in Southwest Washington.

$3,000,000 Slum Clearance Is Imperiled by D. C. Woman

she said there was no allegation that the Government and the owner were unable to agree upon the price of the land.

At her home yesterday Miss Keyes volubly defended her position.

"All the better people of this neighborhood," she said, "are against the slum clearance."

She said it seemed very unfair to her tenants as well as herself that "a perfectly good house renting for $12 a month should be condemned and the tenant forced to live in a place not much better, which will cost $25 a month."

Miss Keyes said the Government —"through a Mr. Knouse"—offered her $3,000 for her 11 houses at numbers 121 to 141 P street. In view of the fact that all but three of these houses—a low row of dingy clapboarded dwellings joined together —were rented, bringing her an income of $1,000 a year, she said she felt the Government's offer ridiculous.

Miss Keyes was loud in her condemnation of "case workers" who, she said, bothered her by telling her tenants to get out because the buildings were soon to be condemned by the Government.

"Why, I had just spent a lot of money making many repairs when they told me those good houses were condemned," she said.

Other reasons which Miss Keyes recited, in her petition to the court, were that the "United States Government is without power to exercise the right of eminent domain for the purpose of acquiring property for low-cost housing and slum clearance projects; that such acquisition does not constitute 'public use;' that the leasing or selling of any building to be erected at reasonable prices to persons of low incomes does not constitute a 'public use;' that the fact that unemployment might be aided by the construction to be involved does not constitute 'public use;' that there is nothing in the act to 'serve as a guide to the President in exercising the power conferred on him;' and lastly that there are no limitations or requirements imposed on the Federal emergency administrator of Public Works as to what constitutes low-cost houses and slum clearances nor where they are to be established, nor what amount is to be spent on them."

Supporting their contentions, her attorneys cited the cases which led the Sixth Circuit Appellate Court to decide, in a split decision, that a similarly situated Louisville, Ky., project was illegal and invalid.

They quoted from the Appellate Court opinion: "Equally well settled is it that the right can be exercised where the property is to be taken for a public use. The contention of the Government is that the property here sought to be condemned is to be devoted to public use, because, first, the construction of the project will relieve unemployment during the period of construction, and secondly, the leasing or selling of the new buildings at reasonable prices will give to persons of low incomes an opportunity to improve their living conditions. * * * The sole question of the constitutional power of the United States to acquire through condemnation property of citizens for the purposes and use for which the property involved here is desired" was the turning point of the case, the attorneys said, and on that the Government lost.

Miss Keyes received part of an estate estimated to be worth $4,910 from her boarder when a jury decided the scrawled piece of paper was a legal "last will and testament." Attorney W. Gwynn Gardiner offered the paper for probate. Nettie Lee Gaines, a niece of Hamilton, filed a protest which was withdrawn later and the estate was settled out of court. Attorney Gardiner and Attorney I. I. Solotin represented Miss Keyes in her suit filed yesterday.

Miss Keyes, whose action may block the whole $3,000,000 project launched here by Secretary Ickes, said yesterday that she was the daughter of a Virginia judge and had been brought up in the company of lawyers.

"I have no fear of the law," she said.

Condemnation proceedings were instituted by the Department of Justice last month against 300 property owners in the section where the project is to be located. On Tuesday Secretary Ickes announced that 67 per cent of the land is under option by the Government. He intimated that the condemnations would not be filed immediately.

Reduced Fares For Railroads Urged on ICC

Maximum of 3 Cents Per Mile in Pullmans Is Suggested.

By the Associated Press.

A substantial reduction in railroad passenger fares and elimination of the Pullman surcharge were recommended to the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday as the last effective recourse left the railroads in their efforts to recapture lost traffic.

Reporting on the result of the first comprehensive investigation ever made of the country's railroad passenger rate structure, Examiner Irving L. Koch asserted that the roads have been suffering mounting deficits because of severe losses in passenger traffic revenue since 1923.

"Extraordinary measures are imperative," he added, "in order to regain such traffic and insure to the railroads a reasonable share of the increased intercity traffic of the future. They can not hope to share reasonably in that market except at fares more nearly commensurate with the price and convenience of travel by highway with changed economic conditions."

The report recommended as a maximum future fare basis a rate of 2 cents per mile in coaches and three cents in pullmans, compared with the present basic rate of 3.6 cents per mile.

Advocating removal of the Pullman surcharge—a charge made by the roads amounting to 10 per cent of the basic rate for Pullman travel —the report asserted that it had met with "such marked public resistance that it is resulting in greater injury than benefit to the railroads."

Buttressing its recommendation for reduced fares, the report described unusual gains in passenger traffic and revenue in the West and South where experimental reduced fare bases were instituted in December, 1933.

No action will be taken by the ICC on the reports until after hearings set for October 3 and 4.

Women's Group Writes $27,365,000 Insurance

Cleveland, Ohio, July 17 (AP).—Mrs. Bina West Miller, supreme president of the Woman's Benefit Association, told delegates at its national convention today the association had written $27,365,000 worth of insurance in the last four years.

A prosperity pageant in which 7,000 women and girls were to participate at the Cleveland Stadium brought the convention to a climax tonight.

Moon Eclipse Makes Dog Nervous Wreck

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., July 17.—Andy, a German police dog, was in an animal hospital tonight, suffering from a nervous breakdown, and his owner blames Monday night's eclipse.

Andy began baying at the moon as the eclipse started, Paul Kinkel, his master, said, and by the time the moon was hidden the dog was a nervous wreck.

Quiet and a few moonlight nights, veterinarians said, should cure him.

Union Turns Back Strike Breakers

25 Imported to End Bread Walkout Sent Home.

By the Associated Press.

Des Moines, Iowa, July 17.—A band of 200 union laborers here today sent back to St. Louis 25 men they claimed were imported to "break" the strike of Des Moines union bakers and drivers. Informed by St. Louis labor leaders that the men were brought to Des Moines by Industrial Investigators, Inc., of St. Louis, a company which makes a specialty of helping employers in labor difficulties, Des Moines union leaders mustered forces and met the train.

The Des Moines laborers lined up the St. Louis men, marched them to the Labor Temple here, held them until return train time, and saw that they left town.

Most of the St. Louis workers said they had not been told they were to "break" the Des Moines strike.

A. A. Ahner, head of Industrial Investigators, came to Des Moines with the men.

"They were brought here," he said, "for Des Moines business men to guard Des Moines property."

Gayer Colored Dresses To Be Seen This Year

New York, July 17 (AP).—Of every 100 women who shop for woolen dresses this fall, the National Retail Dry Goods Association predicted today that 25 would buy green, 25 brown, 15 rust, 15 black, 8 purple, 7 wine, and 5 blue.

This, it was said, indicated a season of brighter colors for the ladies. Last year they ran to brown and black. In buying silk dresses, the association foresaw 40 black, 15 brown, 15 green, 10 rust, 10 purple, 5 wine, and 5 blue per 100 women.

Senate Group Approves Bill On Silver Tax

By the Associated Press.

The McCarran bill to eliminate the 50 per cent profits tax on silver transactions was approved yesterday by the Senate Agriculture Committee.

The speedy action followed a meeting of the Senate silver bloc Tuesday night.

"The 50 per cent profit on silver trading killed the market in this country," Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, said. "It transferred the market to London and is keeping it there because foreign trades in silver escape the levy."

McCarran said he would urge early Senate action on the measure, which repeals the tax imposed in the 1934 silver act to prevent domestic silver dealers from making large speculative profits on the white metal.

"The Federal Reserve Bank and the National City Bank in New York City have been buying silver in the London market," McCarran said. "We believe the tax is unnecessary now and that its removal will reopen trading in this country."

McCarran said he transferred the bill from the Banking to the Agriculture Committee to get action. Senator Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, chairman of the Agriculture Committee, is a member of the silver bloc, which contends that farm prices will mount with silver prices.

Hearings Continue On Transit Wages

8-Hour Day Is Demanded by Company Employes.

Arbitration hearings on wage increase demands by 2,700 employes of the Capital Transit Co. continued yesterday before a mediation board meeting in George Washington University law school.

It was indicated that proceedings would last until the latter part of next week. Testimony by Transit Co. officials, explaining schedules, working conditions and wage scales, consumed yesterday's session. Employes are asking for an 8-hour working day, with time-and-a-half pay for overtime work. Time-and-a-half is now paid for work over 11 hours, according to a member of the mediation board.

The board includes Frank W. Swacker, former Interstate Commerce Commissioner examiner, chairman; Charlton Ogborn, union attorney, and Edmund L. Jones, Transit Co. counsel.

Unenlightened Despotism.

As five delegates of the British Legion were being elaborately entertained in Berlin and the German press was commenting enthusiastically upon the "new era" of good will toward the Reich, the most recent wave of anti-Semitic persecution broke out. High officials in Berlin were obviously embarrassed. Hitler himself is said to have patrolled the Kurfuerstendamm Tuesday night as a precaution against further racial riots. Just at the moment when he appeared to be making some progress toward convincing the British that Germany deserves a new place in the sun the sour fruits of his own medieval policy are thus served up to him.

There had been considerable hope in recent months that Nazism would outgrow some of its more barbarous tenets. Some evidence of broadening may be detected in Hitler's point of view since he attained the responsibility of a dictator. Until the recent outbreak, emphasis seemed to have been shifted from racial persecutions to the baffling international problems confronting Germany. But under a regime which is founded on medieval concepts, which muzzles its press, propagandizes its education and cultivates racial hatreds in place of tolerance and good will reversion to prejudice and brutality may be expected.

The Nazi leader has set in motion forces that he may not be able to control, even if his more experienced judgment should suggest a retreat. Hitlerized Germany is still an unenlightened despotism. The movement to restore the Reich to a place of equality among the great nations of the world is inevitably retarded by the tendency of the Nazi to sabotage their own civilization.

Not Surprising.

When the $4,000,000,000 work-relief fund was voted and the President announced his intention of using it to put 3,500,000 persons to work, it was obvious that in the future construction projects of the old PWA type either would have to be severely limited or else Federal funds would have to be supplemented by local contributions. In the hope of inducing States and municipalities to use work-relief funds for public construction, therefore, Administration officials have offered to defray 45 per cent of the cost of approved projects, leaving the remainder to be borrowed through regular banking channels. To date no applications for grants have been received under this arrangement, and so it is inferred that the interest rates on loans are too high.

There are, however, a number of reasons—and very good ones, too—that go far toward explaining this lack of desire to create new State and municipal indebtedness. The Federal Government should have insisted that the States make contributions to the limit of their ability to finance direct relief, but it has chosen instead to assume full responsibility for a vast program of work relief under Federal supervision. Presumably the States will share in this fund in accordance with their needs. Why, then, should they go into debt to develop projects that will employ relatively few men in proportion to the per capita outlay?

If there were any evidence that expenditures for public works would supply a stimulus to industry sufficient to hasten recovery, as has been confidently predicted, the municipalities might be more disposed to develop or devise new works projects of a permanent character. But the disappointing results achieved by the PWA have quite effectually dissipated hope of great accomplishment along such lines. So the States have little inducement to borrow money at any rate—whether it be 4 per cent, 2½ per cent, or less—so long as they are in position to obtain direct Federal grants to support the unemployed.

Instead of going further into debt, indeed, municipal governments would be well advised to restrict their borrowing to an irreducible minimum. Balanced budgets are required to maintain State and municipal credit. Therefore, admonitions to the Federal Government to cut deficits apply with equal force to local governments. Increased local taxation to take care of the unemployables whom the Federal Government proposes to make a charge upon the local communities will be necessary in any case. Moreover, obligations incurred for direct relief, have already added well over $200,000,000 to the debt of ten States, while local and municipal governments have borrowed over $400,000,000 during the past two and one-half years for relief. It is estimated that the total relief expenditures of State and local governments will amount to between $500,000,000 and $600,000,000 during the present fiscal year.

With tax revenues increasing and the financial position of State and municipal governments on the whole greatly improved, it would be folly for them to increase their borrowing beyond amounts that are absolutely necessary. A better policy would be to avoid piling up more debt and to finance unavoidable relief expenditures by increasing taxation.

Lobbying Blunders.

Upon opening its inquiry into the power lobby the Senate investigating committee was told by a witness from Warren, Pa., that hundreds of "fake" telegrams had been dispatched to a Congressman from that State signed with names taken from the city directory. The detailed story of this bungling and dishonest method allegedly employed by a bond salesman for a holding company undoubtedly points a moral, although it has no bearing upon the merits of the regulatory legislation now before Congress.

Tactics of this sort tend to arouse distrust of all lobbyists and lead the public thoughtlessly to condemn measures which they espouse. Consequently some of the worst enemies of the utilities are the kind of lobbyists who resort to underhand methods of influencing legislation. As Chairman Gadsden of the Committee of Public Utility Executives said, referring to the story of the telegrams, "It is acts like this committed by a small number of companies which have brought discredit upon the industry and which have made it necessary for us to come to Washington to defend ourselves against a bill seeking to destroy us."

The blundering and maladroit efforts which have been exposed to senatorial scrutiny are not particularly dangerous, however, because they are easily detected and hence are ineffective. The lobbyist who is worthy of his hire is usually in a position to bear up under scrutiny and hold his own in face of cross-examination. In fact, if he is fair and honest in his dealings, he may render an essential and valuable service for the public as well as for his employers in presenting arguments for or against proposed legislation. It is well that Congress is exposing the fakers, but the odium thus aroused should not be permitted to extend further than is warranted by the facts. Nor should these crude attempts to influence legislation distract attention from the more effective methods which are being used for that purpose by officials of the Government.

It is lobbying in its more insidious aspects that calls for careful investigation. The House inquiry has already shown that both the Administration and the power interests have brought pressure to bear upon Congressmen to secure votes for and against certain sections of the holding company bill. The means employed are open to serious criticism. It has become plain that the line between legitimate propaganda and undue pressure can be easily overstepped when administrative officials have billions of dollars at their command.

Nothing revealed at the hearings, however, has the slightest bearing upon the controversy over the death sentence clause of the holding company bill. That presents an issue about which any intelligent man should be able to form an independent judgment, especially with the aid of the abundant material supplied by the lobbyists of both camps.

Dangerous Recruiting.

Probably the most dangerous thing about the war spirit is the rapidity and the ease with which it spreads. Mussolini is said to have aroused great enthusiasm in Italy for the proposed Ethiopian campaign. The horror and tragedy of war are minimized by propaganda emphasizing the "glory" of armed conquest and the necessity of upholding national "honor." No doubt a similar process of preparing the public mind for a bloody struggle is going forward in Addis Ababa.

Even in this country the war spirit is beginning to assume disquieting proportions. Mussolini's threats against the Abyssinian state, in spite of his obligations under the covenant of the League of Nations and the Kellogg pact, have aroused vigorous resentment among the American people. Beyond that, however, organized efforts are being made to interest American citizens in the defense of that country.

As the crisis approaches it may be expected that the moral influence of the United States will be thrown into opposition against any war of conquest. The State Department has already indicated in unmistakable terms that this Government will stand upon the principle of the Kellogg Pact which renounces war as a means of settling any international dispute. But the mobilization of men within this country to take part in the prospective struggle is an entirely different matter. The Administration can not too quickly suppress that activity.

Recruiting is said to be in full sway in Harlem, New York, in spite of the law forbidding the enrollment of persons within the United States for military service in any other country. The names of "sympathizers" are being systematically listed in Washington. Regardless of the merits of the cause, such activity is intolerable. Congress is studying legislation to prevent the shipment of arms and munitions to belligerents. It is far more essential that the mobilization of citizens or aliens subject to the jurisdiction of the United States be forbidden by strict enforcement of existing law.

Mussolini's premeditated aggression against a supposedly weaker state is utterly indefensible. But the situation can not be improved by surrender to the war spirit in this country. It is such thoughtless provocation of hostilities that tends to magnify a bilateral dispute into a world war.

The American people are determined to maintain their neutrality in this or any other conflict in which they have no part. The exercise of our Government's moral influence in behalf of peace and against aggressive invasion furnishes no excuse for any group to recruit men to fight on foreign soil. Before this movement becomes an international incident, it should be vigorously broken up.

To End An Experiment.

Washington's Parole Board is unquestionably one of the weakest links in the local law enforcement system. It was recently described by its own chairman, Wilbur La Roe, jr., as "a poor, old, unfortunate Parole Board, operating without money, without facilities, running along on three cylinders instead of eight." Accompanying this candid expression was a still more positive statement that the board is "not being successfully operated."

As the House District Crime Committee recently pointed out, this situation is not a reflection upon the personnel of the Parole Board. Rather it is a distressing commentary on the manner in which Congress sometimes functions in its role as city council for Washington. That body enacted an experimental law providing indeterminate sentences for convicted felons, along with liberal conditions of parole. The District was to become a model of enlightened reform in handling criminals. But after prescribing lenient rules for the release of prisoners, Congress refused to provide the essential machinery for operation of the "model" system. As a result it has become an actual handicap to law enforcement.

The purpose of the bill introduced by Representative Randolph is to restore the previous law under which judges could sentence criminals to serve specific terms commensurate with their offenses. Instead of sentencing the perpetrator of an assault with a deadly weapon from two to ten years, the court may require him to serve six, eight or ten years, as the circumstances of the crime suggest. After serving one-third of the sentence the prisoner would be eligible for parole. Long experience on the bench has convinced judges of the District Supreme Court that this plan, patterned after the Federal law, is the best yet devised.

Some disagreement has developed over the proposal to compensate members of the Parole Board. Their work requires a great deal of time and effort. In spite of the commendable public spirit manifested by the existing board, it is not sound public policy to entrust such onerous responsibilities to citizens whose chief interests necessarily lie in their private professions. Mr. Randolph suggests a salary of $6,000 for the chairman and per diem compensation for the other members. Modification of that arrangement may be desirable. The important thing, however, is to set up an independent board of high caliber and give it a staff of trained officers who will be capable of intelligently supervising the activities of paroled convicts. As Mr. La Roe says, the need for parole officers is more acute than for a new board. It would be farcical indeed if the proposed new system should leave 300 paroled prisoners on the streets, with only one supervisor to check on their activities.

An Illogical Amendment.

The House has refused to accept the Clark amendment to the social security bill which would exempt employers having old-age pension plans from payment of taxes levied under the measure. The disagreement on this provision is the only remaining obstacle to passage of the conference bill, but it is a very important one. It has been previously pointed out in these columns that such an exemption would result in discrimination against older employes who would be forced to rely upon the Federal system, while the younger persons, being better risks, would be covered by the private systems. Chairman Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee did not exaggerate when he said that the amendment "certainly interferes with the functioning of the whole bill, if it does not destroy it."

In any case, the bill is seriously defective from an actuarial standpoint because it provides for payment of unearned annuities for older workers. But it would be made a good deal worse by an amendment which would establish a dual system of insurance and increase the liabilities of the Federal system by overloading it with the bad risks. The administrative difficulties of checking the private systems and making sure that they meet the requirements of the Federal law would also be insuperable.

The argument that retention of private systems would be an encouragement to public-spirited employers is no adequate answer to the critics who emphasize the inevitable abuses that would result from retention of the Clark amendment. The Senate, however, has refused to yield to superior logic and has voted again for the amendment. As a result the bill is now deadlocked in conference.

Norman Thomas, the well-known candidate-at-large, thinks the Constitution has died of old age. That must have been vigor mortis in which the high court lately found it.—Detroit News.

Single National Tax Urged.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: George E. Cury's letter exhorting us to support the Chief Physician of a Six Nation and Kelly Miller's advocating a "economic bill of rights" published recently in The Post, were interesting, but, like the NRA, there was apparently no firm foundation for their word-structures.

If our Nation be compared to a person, "the Government" is its nervous system, and its revenue and educational systems are its digestive and blood systems, respectively. In order that our Nation may accomplish its true and all-inclusive purpose "to promote the general welfare," which involves a fair distribution of revenue, the fruit of service, or the gross income of business, it must first accomplish its initial purpose "to form a more perfect union," which means that the foregoing systems must all function efficiently.

However, the antifeds, political ancestors of our Chief Physician et al., including, of course, Senator Costigan and the insurgents, defeated our Nation's initial purpose with their "State rights" doctrine, and thereby gave us our defective revenue system (our hodge-podge tax system) and maldistribution.

Briefly, the cure can not be effected by modifying the Constitution; or by passing unconstitutional laws, but by a single national tax on gross income. It is the only just tax, the only tax based on the principle of "ability to pay," and the only tax system that will make possible a fair distribution.

During the latter part of Hoover's term, a national sales tax on certain commodities was proposed, which was a step in the right direction. But the destructive "old order" was working with a vengeance, the medicine men were on hand with their dope, their chief-elect was "horrified" at the proposal, and the measure was defeated.

And so it came to pass that the electorate having been "weighed in the balance and found wanting" in 1932, we proceeded to build at an enormous expense and waste, an alphabetical structure on a foundation of sand.

An Investor's Protest.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The utility fanatics in Congress, I note, want information as to why Congress has been bombarded with letters from stockholders and employes of such companies protesting against death sentence for holding companies.

It seems that Messrs. Wheeler, Rayburn, etc., can't get it through their heads that there has been a genuine protest from thousands of such stockholders who recognize in the Wheeler-Rayburn bill total loss of their investments if the bill becomes law. After they find out, what everyone knows, that utility companies have expended thousands of dollars, in printing and publicity, to acquaint their stockholders with the true purpose of this death sentence bill, there will be much ado from the esteemed gentlemen regarding such cost. However, before they start "steaming" for the "pepuls benefit" let us remind them that whatever money was spent was not public money, but money of the stockholders who are making the protests against the bill.

It is well-spent money if it accomplishes its purpose and kills their unfair bill. I am wondering how much of the people's money has been spent by the foes of the utility companies in Congress in circularizing the Nation with public printing, investigations, etc. The people are entitled to know that side of the matter, too, much more so, than the other side.

Prize Sucker.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your "Chapter in Silver" of the 11th instant has much interesting information and several points of agreement. Inflation of either or of both metal moneys was a highly questionable experiment, designed, of course, to fit an exigent emergency. The gold standard has served us admirably for 60 years.

In lighter vein your editorial was, to a degree—several degrees, unseasonable. With temperature 100 plus why flick us with irritating quotations from the London Economist, such as "Would the English government be wise to place her currency under the control of so irresponsible a country as America?" Up jumps temperature 10 degrees and exclaims, "England, of all nations, calling America irresponsible!" And why should we feel impelled, at England's request, to buy back 50,000,000 ounces of inflated silver in three days' time or any longer span? England is an admirable censor of decorum, but rather too adroit as a mentor in financial behaviorism.

In choice slang America has been from her birth the prize sucker in the financial stream. She beats the world both in making money at home and allowing the world to beat her out of it abroad. Might it not be a safe guide in our international finances to get the advice of those older European countries that have been playing the game so long they have got the card-table stoop, and then adopt the opposite course?

Could the London Economist's real fear have been that if, in this international agreement, her currency policy were controlled by America, that we might then collect that debt? Intriguing, what?

Importance Of Good Faith.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is, indeed, a sad and disheartening commentary upon social conditions, and indicates the distance the world has traveled the past few years along the road of moral deterioration when the Attorney General of the United States can say, as he did before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee: "The word repudiation does not hurt my feelings. The word does not mean much, anyway."

Repudiation is an ugly word, and carries many unsavory implications, both moral and material. In fact, it was repudiation of solemn treaty obligations among nations and the absence of good faith that brought on the world's great catastrophe. One who advocates repudiation of solemn obligations is clearly suffering from moral astigmatism. That, however, is personal; but to condone or justify it on the part of the Government is of transcendent seriousness, and may be attended with far reaching and disastrous consequences in the social and business world, for character, which embraces honor and good faith, is the most priceless possession of a nation as well as of an individual. The want of it sets a calamitous example to the people, and its inevitable effect is to destroy confidence among men, which is the foundation of business success and social intercourse, and without which there can be no prosperity and social well-being.

This is surely no time to express sentiments that weaken and undermine the morale of the people and impair the foundations of the social order. On the contrary those in authority should now more than ever be exemplars of truth, honor and good faith.

Married Women As Federal Employes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The writer is quite disappointed in the recommendation made by the committee that recently studied the "marital" clause for Government workers, I believe that the abandonment of the restriction on the placement of married women shows a let-down of the general spirit of reform which is being stressed in every sphere of living.

I am impressed because of this stand for the following reasons: (1) I believe that the work performed by the reported 15,000 married women in Government offices is inferior to the production of single girls or women, by whom there would not be as much likelihood of so many disturbing influences, since many of these married women are attempting to take care of their living quarters besides their daily occupation; (2) If these married workers do not care about the "established" home, then it seems to me they have not recognized the sacredness of the bond when they entered, or else they are foolishly blinded to it; (3) We are all aware of the stand which commercial and industrial concerns in general over the country took regarding the situation after the depression came upon us, and that for the most part the married worker, whose husband or wife was employed was dropped from the rolls. This was commendable action in helping to alleviate the economic conditions somewhat. Why should not the base of the Government be as deserving of this praiseworthy move? (4) This seeming prevalence of married women in Government jobs is breaking down the morale, which one will quickly observe if they compare the obvious spirit of this situation as compared with the situation where logical governing is done.

It is the writer's belief that, if heads of offices would take action in regard to this state of affairs, every phase of our Government would be benefited. And, why, with the rapidly increasing divorce rate in our country, should we not be thinking seriously of some remedial action on this basic foundation of our moral life? At this time, if we are to raise higher our general standards of living and help preserve some of the unquestionable standards, then it seems we should not ignore action in this line.

If one's argument on this question is that they are forced to work due to lack of finances to actually establish a home, then, I should think the logical way to expedite such a possibility would be to remain single until that time arrives. In the case of persons who give services without a view to financial remuneration, we are not unmindful of this entirely different situation.

Would not the elimination of this unnatural state of living today help in the solving of the problem of our unemployed youth, as well as many older persons who are capable and who necessarily must earn their living?

He Had A Fine Line

HE SAT beside me in one of Washington's little parks and spilled the thoughts that filled him, and though (or because) there were times when I thought he lied he interested me.

• • • •

I'm what you may call a periodic loafer (he said) and like the periodic drinker I have my preliminary stages. At the moment my case is an incipient one. Before night it will be virulent and I will have taken steps.

I am the general manager of a doggie factory and today the making of doggies bored me. So I rapped a single to center field and am now on first base. Oh, yes, indeed. I have played baseball. I was a professional in my younger days. I used to pinch hit for Honus Wagner when he was pitcher for Carnegie Tech and I am now an umpire in one of the big leagues.

As I was saying this is the first station on the Leaf Line. For an hour or two I'll view the panoramic multitude, all manner of legs, diversely covered, carrying mannikins with worried faces to doggie foundries, and dells with impassive faces to doggie stores. After which I will feed the pigeons.

• • • •

Curiously enough, (for it is an easy thing to be) I am not a millionaire; but I can experience the same righteous glow in feeding pigeons that the very rich man (I am only moderately rich myself) knows when he endows a library; the Jack Horner feeling, theme of so many after-dinner speeches.

Just in a little while I'll telephone Capt. Dank Blash at Clam Bottoms to have somebody meet me at Leonardtown and then I'll take a bus. Dank is one of the finest fishermen there is. And he treats you right, believe me. Talks a little too much at times, perhaps; but that's a weakness a lot of us have. And his boats have all the modern improvements. Take trolling for bluefish, for instance. Every fisherman has an electric windlass and an added device to play the fish before hauling it in. All you do is to touch a button. Many and many a time I have seen a crowd from Leonardtown or Washington or Baltimore playing bridge in the cockpit of one of the Blash boats, idly touching a button now and then, while one windlass after another made a grand slam. Fine fish, the blue fish; tailers we call 'em; the artistocracy among fish; every one that comes aboard has a silver spoon in its mouth.

Then when you tire of trolling, back across the bay you go and anchor off the St. Marys shore and proceed to haul in hardhead and trout. That's what we call switching from a movie to a still. And right there we have another of Capt. Dank Blash's clever devices. He has a dingus that eliminates toad fish the way plugged nickels and iron washers are discarded by a slot machine. You'll see them come floating up to the surface and hear them utter the one pathetic word, "Uncle," before they expire. And the bait is never disturbed in the least.

I remember once when a Washington man called to me from another of the Blash boats: "Any luck?" "Some," said I. "Hardheads?" "A lot of 'em." "Trout?" "Pretty good." "Tailers?" "Just sew-sew." Snappy, what? Well, it comes natural to me. I'm a radio gag man by profession.

• • • •

Well, as I was saying, I'll take a bus for Leonardtown. The bus station is the second station on the Lost line, and an interesting place it is. You can size people up by seeing how they act there. Lots of people strut in stations who wouldn't think of strutting anywhere else. I do it myself. And why not? We are not ordinary people when we are in railroad or bus stations. We are guys who are going places.

But what I enjoy most at the bus station is the announcer calling "Clinton, T. B., Waldorf, Hughesville, Bryantown, Charlotte Hall, Mechanicsville, Helen, Morganza, Loveville and Leonardtown. Gate No. 5. All aboard!" Oh, boy! That gives me a great feeling.

Of course, I don't have to take a bus if I don't want to. I have cars of my own. As a matter of fact, I own a fleet of taxicabs. I started with one of them and drove it myself. I am an exceptionally skillful driver. But I would never take a fare out of the District. That's a mighty curious thing about me. I'm a wonderful driver in traffic, but stick me on a country road and I keep looking for the red and green lights to such an extent that it gets me dizzy. It is positively dangerous for me to go driving in the country where you are liable to go for miles without meeting anybody. Give me crowds, so's I won't get lonely.

Yes, sir, I need people around me, and I get 'em on a bus. And all the places I pass are old friends—Mrs. Surrat's home, Dr. Mudd's place, the private house that used to be a hotel and has to have signs to keep people out; the hennery next door to a Ford service station; Ye Coole Springs and Ye Hotte Dogge. And I talk to the people on the bus about 'em and we get friendly.

Well, I've got to be going. Pleased to have met you. Here's my card. Come down and see me sometime. I'll treat you right.

Stop, It's Too Much!

THE Black committee investigating the utilities lobby moved a step further yesterday toward developing that not only telegrams caused their fellow Senators and members of the House to vote against the so-called death clause in the utilities bill but telegrams from dead persons and telegrams bearing the names of people taken out of the directory.

The influence of Elmer, 19-year-old ruddy-faced messenger boy, in the Nation's affairs was brought out. Elmer, according to his testimony, got six people at Warren, Pa., to send telegrams, one of whom was his mother and one a boy friend. He did this by explaining the highly complicated Wheeler-Rayburn bill which the co-authors can't do themselves. It so happened that Elmer's enterprise didn't influence Congressman Driscoll because he decided to check up on the messages, but one got the impression from the indignant manner in which he related his experience that he almost got burned and that he wanted a law to require all Representatives to check up on their telegrams in the future. It can be imagined what his predicament would be had he not done so in this instance and voted as the messages demanded.

The committee inquiry is proceeding on the theory that when the opponents of the death clause realize the telegrams were from dead people and otherwise not bona fide that they will change their votes because there is no need of their being afraid of dead people or telegrams that are not bona fide. There is a fear in the ranks of the liberals, however, that efforts may be made to suppress the committee before it gets to the point of exposing the letters which the Representatives and Senators wrote back to the dead people and to names just taken from the directory.

Even Senators and Representatives who voted for the death clause realize the danger in this. It is feared there would be an immediate move to abolish Congress. In this day and time when jobs are darned hard to get none of them really wants to go this far. The Black committee, it is assumed, have been promised jobs uptown.

It is assumed, of course, that Mr. Roosevelt wants the inquiry to go on, but there is a sneaking suspicion that his real purpose is to show Congress up in a ridiculous light, and bring about a movement to have it done away with. Those who feel this way point to his fight with the Supreme Court.

As one member said yesterday: "I told my colleagues at the outset of his fight on the court that if he got it then he would be after us." This member is trying to convince his colleagues that Congress and the court had better stick together, that if Mr. Roosevelt ever gets them to fighting each other they are both gone.

• • • •

Yet, it can not be said that information is not developing from the inquiry—information which should be valuable in shaping the Nation's future. Senator Black, for one thing, thinks there should be a Federal law against people signing another person's name to a telegram. J. Edgar Hoover, presumably, will think the same way if he is asked and is given an appropriation of $500,000 and 40 more agents. The greatest enlightenment, however, came to Senator Schwellenbach, of Washington. He found out that the telegraph companies, when controversial legislation is pending here, have been soliciting telegrams to Representatives and Senators.

From the expression on his face and the way he asked if the telegraph companies really did this, the information must have been startling to him.

The Senator was not half as incredulous toward this amazing bit of information, however, as he was to the explanation of the telegraph representative as to why, if they solicited telegrams from those against the utility bill, they didn't get telegrams from the consumers, too—the consumers who are being robbed, or, as Senator Black put in, who pay the bill.

The answer to this is, of course, very plain. If a consumer spends 50 cents to send a telegram to a Congressman he will have largely wiped out the great rate reduction which the New Deal is to bring about.

Hitler's Program Changes

Economic Self-Sufficiency Proves Hopeless In Germany Despite Drive To Foster Reich Industry, Lower Interest Rates And Purchase Only Homemade Goods.

By Mary G. Cary.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Berlin (By Mail).

ONE comes inevitably in a consideration of present-day Germany to the domestic program outlined in "Mein Kampf." Among Hitler's plans were promises to put everyone to work again, to break the "interest slavery," to introduce Autarkie, or the principle of economic self-sufficiency as the guiding principle for business and industry, and to close the department and one-price stores.

It is true that in two and a half years, 3,500,000 people, or about two-thirds of the unemployed, have been put to work. The methods used are well-known, and many of them have been tried in the United States. We must not overlook the fact also that a new party machine came into power and placed its members in office wherever possible. As one official put it, "The 'old fighters' (members of the National Socialist movement since 1923-24) have been put into office as far as we could do so. If they prove incompetent, out they go, but then they cannot complain that they have not been rewarded for their services to the party." This new element has money to spend, they can buy houses and rent flats, purchase new motor cars and make a prosperous appearance generally.

It is true, on the other hand, that wages and salaries have remained almost unchanged since 1933, while the cost of living has mounted steadily. In 1932 it was 118.4 (1930=100), at the end of 1934 it was 122.2, and in May, 1935, the index figures stood at 122.8. In addition to meeting the rising cost of food and clothing, various payments must be made, such as to the Arbeitsfront, (Workers' Front), Frauenschaft (Women's National Socialist Society), Hitler Yugend (Hitler Youth Association), Bund Deutsche Madel (League of German Maidens), National Socialist Volkswohlfahrt (National Socialist Welfare Society), the Winterhilfe (Winter Help Association to relieve the needy in the winter months), the Luftschutzbund (Air Protection League). Besides these payments, there are contributions asked for by special collections for various charitable works of party and churches.

IN regard to the breaking of the "interest slavery" it is true that since 1933 Germany has succeeded in lowering internal interest rates. Before that date 11 per cent was the rate often paid for money. The popularity of foreign loans to Germany before 1931 was largely due to their high rate of interest. Without discussing the reasons for this, we must admit that no country could prosper under such conditions.

In considering Hitler's theory of Autarkie, one realizes its dangers at once, for everybody knows that Germany for the last 60 years has been a highly industrialized country and very dependent on foreign trade. Before the war she bought more than she sold and the difference was taken care of by the interest paid on dividends held abroad. Even after 1914 when she upset her balance of trade—for she recalled all foreign holdings during the war—she continued to borrow for one reason or another, and import more than she exported, thus completely spoiling her chances of a favorable balance of trade. Now she cannot borrow any more money abroad, but she still imports more goods than she sells.

New indebtedness is being created even by the quota, barter and clearing agreements of the past three years. It is quite obvious that the theory of Autarkie will not work for Germany. In 1933, the National Socialist Government urged the people to spend all they had in buying and to buy only German goods. After seeing a mounting unfavorable trade balance, the stagnation of foreign trade and the difficulties in obtaining foreign credits the minister of economics announced in the spring of 1934 that Autarkie was no longer the governing economic principle of the state.

IN repudiating the old principle, the promises to the farmers have been partly abandoned. They were told in 1933 that Germans would eat only German-grown products. Agriculturists, especially the small farmers of west Germany, had suffered greatly during the years of depression. In 1933, with the introduction of strenuous protective measures, food prices rose at once and are still rising. The farm income increased in 1933-34 by one milliard reichsmarks over 1932-33. But the drought of last year and the difficulty of importing the fodder necessary to make up the loss to the domestic market, have raised costs of farm expenditures with serious results to the improved incomes.

Between 1932 and 1935, Germany has made about 20 or more trade agreements with various countries. These were primarily to assist the farmers. The difficulties which the present system of quotas brings to a country like Germany in connection with its food supply, can be understood when one experiences potato, onion and lemon shortages in a city like Berlin, due to the fact that there are no credits available to import these foodstuffs when they are needed, or the quota has already been filled from the country where they are grown.

Other disadvantages of the quota system are that when there are openings from one country, special manufactures are given preference and normal trade like foodstuffs has to wait. Besides this, when Germany makes an agreement with a country with which she has previously had a favorable trade balance, it is usually lost immediately, as to make quotas and clearing systems work for a country with no foreign credits, the trade between the countries must be exactly even. This is an additional handicap for Germany.

TURNING to the promise that Hitler made to close department stores, we come to a point where common sense soon showed the necessity of an altered policy. This promise was originally made as part of the plan for reviving retail trade. It is true that there has been a domestic trade boom in Germany. It lasted from 1933 until the fall of 1934, culminating in a wave of buying for hoarding which was caused by rumors of a shortage of imported raw materials.

The original idea of the National Socialists was to buy in small shops and to buy German-made goods only. It was soon announced in 1933, after boycotts had been tried against large department stores and one-price concerns, that even though these were often owned by Jewish or foreign firms, there were National Socialists employed in them and that the menace of unemployment to these comrades would be most serious if the boycott were continued.

Here again the original plans of the leader had to be altered by the stern rules of necessity. The Housewives League for National Food Consumption is trying to teach the women to eat German foods wherever possible, to serve substitutes when no German potatoes or fruit are on the market, to season with German herbs instead of foreign spices. This is all well and good for the German farmer, but if carried to extremes, will have disastrous results on Germany's trade with agricultural countries like Hungary, Holland, Poland, Spain and Italy, with whom Germany has always exchanged manufactured goods for foodstuffs.

This spring the government is granting 8,000,000 Reichs marks to stimulate the production of sheep, because Germany must find some way of obtaining wool, which she had imported to the amount of over 90 per cent of her entire needs. But even though the land for grazing can be taken from other crop areas, and the people can be taught to eat mutton instead of pork in large quantities, the question will remain how to sell the surplus manufactured products that Germany is equipped to produce without a normal trade balance?

IF one considers the report for the first business and trade quarter of 1935, prepared by the Institute for Economic Research in Berlin, one realizes that necessity may change any part of the National Socialist program for business, if only a way out of the serious situation could be found. To begin with, the government has not yet published its expense account for 1934, nor its budget for 1935-36, a fact that causes great uneasiness in business and financial circles. The main trend of business has been affected adversely by the falling-off in retail buying since last fall. Exports for the first quarter of 1935 were 4 per cent under those of the same time a year ago. The major causes of German export difficulties are conceded by impartial outside observers to be due primarily to the world-wide trade depression and economic nationalism everywhere. These factors are largely outside Germany's control.

The minor reasons for her economic troubles are due partly to political boycott and her own business and financial measures, which have forced up costs of production and made it hard for her to compete on the world market in many lines. The Institute for Economic Research reports that where German industries are again paying dividends, they have not done so entirely by their own efforts. The help of the state has been a determining factor. One-half of the new industrial undertakings have been backed by the state, the report goes on, and where industry is running on its own capital alone, it shows a marked tendency to liquidate wherever possible and to undertake few engagements that involve new financing.

The reasons for this hesitancy are due to two causes: First, costs under present conditions of government control do not allow adequate profits and, secondly, very important new undertakings must be begun, that is, supplies for the army and navy, from which no profits in the narrow meaning of the word, can be expected in proportion to the capital outlay involved in many cases. The only way out of this deadlock seems at present further financing of industry by the state or a general lowering of the German standard of living. As 70 per cent of German industry is supposed to be involved directly or indirectly in supplying the new army, air and naval forces, an immense amount of money must be laid out by the state. This will not bring any real returns if financed by the government out of taxes nor create any permanent buying power.

There have been already loans made to the government by the insurance companies, by real estate owners, by savings banks, by the Workers' Front, and by business and industry. Germans and the creditors of Germany are asking where the next money will come from.

Don't Mention It.

No End of Books

By

Theodore Hall

Rose Red Robert.

NOTHING could be more charming than the delicate way in which the blurb writer introduces Robert Forsythe's little collection of journalistic essays, "Redder Than the Rose" (Covici-Friede, $2). "A new satirist . . . lively and wicked pen . . . malicious eye for windy pretense . . . forthright opinions, sharp invective, violent prejudices . . . voice to puncture over-inflated balloons—so it largely runs, and inconspicuous in the center of the considerable paragraph lies the mild phrase, "Thunder on the Left."

Readers, that blurb writer must think, are so scary. For obviously it would never, never do to intimate that a book to be sold in a bookstore which pays the capitalistic levy known as rent, and which is no doubt owned by the capitalistic device known as stockholders, has been written by the roving correspondent of that radical organ, the New Masses, and is keyed from top to bottom to such a credo as Mr. Forsythe expresses in his last essay—"Capitalism is dead, and you find not even among its most highly paid prostitutes any who will defend it as a philosophic idea. The most they will say is that there is nothing better to take its place. But there is something better in Soviet Russia, faced by the enmity of the world, and there will be something infinitely better in the Soviet world."

It must be clear where the laurel goes for the most pusillanimous blurb of 1935.

• • • •

MR. FORSYTHE deserved something better. For he is, to any reading palate whatever, a treasure. It would be a cosmic pity—and any Conservative, Fascist, Liberal, or Socialist of sporting blood would regret it—to have among their Communist opponents no one but dour, long-haired gentry who have not a grin in their systems, and don't know Harold Vanderbilt from William K. but can only go "Gr-r-r-r!" to both. Let it not be thought that Mr. Forsythe has been napping over his Herald Tribune society sections, his copies of the New Yorker and Fortune, and his aisle seat at "Escape Me Never" and "Clive of India." He seems to know more about the Mrs. Gloria Vanderbilt—Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney fracas than an editor of Time. Which, for an idolater of Marx, Engels, and Lenin, is certainly new style.

The reader who remains somewhat skeptical that the acme of all human wisdom entirely missed the continents of North and South America, Asia, Africa, Australia, and the islands of the South Seas and descended upon these three figures, will yet enjoy "Redder Than the Rose" for a number of reasons. These essays on everything under the sun from Mr. Hemingway as an author ("a man who has been writing in a vacuum and is now ending in a vacuum") to our own fair City of Washington ("a city which is merely a ward heeler's office in extenso") hold a kind of edged and vibrant gayety which is like a good dish of sour cherries to the tongue. Such books as "Washington Merry-Go-Round" having developed our normal human taste for lese majeste. Mr. Forsythe leaps in and improves upon the charter—I started to make a list of the w. k. names he sinks his eye-teeth into, but it proved cumbersome; suffice it that they range from the British royal family to Mr. Woollcott—"Alex the Pooh," as Mr. F. calls him.

From literary criticism (his sole admirations, seemingly, are Pat O'Mara's "The Autoblography of a Liverpool Irish Slummy" and Vincent Sheean's "Personal History," to jibes at the movies, from a demolition of Fiorella H. LaGuardia to an acid vignette of a Yale-Dartmouth football game, Mr. Forsythe glints and slides with the most entertaining aplomb. If the book abounds in non sequiturs, that is merely the stock fault of journalistic writing; if the humor is somewhat often on the plane of "Look at the funny man; he has a silk hat on," that may be forgiven. For here, mirabile visu, is a Communist who writes as gayly as if he had $5,000 a year from Auburn Motors and Allied Chemical.

• • • •

BUT he would scarcely like to be remembered thus, or as a Westbrook Pegler or a Ring Lardner. More to his taste, and it is in such passages as this that Mr. Forsythe's pen digs deep, is the sentence with which he ends his little piece on the joys of "Happy, Happy Noel:" "There is always the likelihood you will get two mink coats and have to exchange one the week after the holiday, but that is essentially more laughable than tragic, and aside from the fact that the saleslady who made the sale has been laid off after the rush, there is really little annoyance involved."

The American scene, it is plain, needs Rose Red Robert like an egg needs salt.

Virginia Native Rose From Bus Boy to High Post; W. A. Beatty Dies.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 17.—Robert Jefferson Cross, who rose from a bus boy on a bay steamer to superintendent of the Provident Hospital, was buried here today after funeral services at the Madison Street Presbyterian Church. He died Sunday of an illness of several months.

Born in King William County, Va., in 1878, Cross at the age of 18 obtained a job in Baltimore as a bus boy with the Chesapeake Steamship Co.

Later he became steward for the company and for the Automobile Trade Association of Maryland. When the Provident Hospital was opened in 1928, he was appointed assistant superintendent and business manager, becoming superintendent on the death of Dr. William Carr in 1930.

William H. Beatty.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Brunswick, Md., July 17.—William A. Beatty, 55, well-known business man, died last night after an illness of four months. He had been a resident here for 30 years and was a Mason, member of the Rotary Club, the Y. M. C. A. and was active in civic affairs. Besides the widow, Mrs. Emma Chambers Beatty, he is survived by one son, William C. Beatty, Brunswick; three sisters, Mrs. Horace Cutsail, Frederick; Miss Bessie A. and Miss M. Stella Beatty, and a brother, Ira B. Beatty, of Burkittsville.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at the Reformed Church, with burial at Park Heights Cemetery.

Mrs. Elizabeth Tabler.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 17.—Funeral services will be conducted at Tabler, tomorrow morning for for Mrs. Elizabeth Jane Tabler, 48, widow of Lewis Alvin Tabler, who died Monday night after a long illness. She was a native of Morgan County, W. Va.

In addition to two sons she is survived by five brothers, H. T. Fuss, of Maugansville, Washington County, Md.; John and Roy, of South Bend, Ind.; Lee, of Martinsburg; Fred, of Columbus, Ohio; two sisters.

Unnecessary Street Noise

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps.

A few weeks ago in Paris I had the pleasure of lunching with Mr. William Phelps Eno, and among the other guests was the Abbe Dimnet. Mr. Eno is an internationally known authority on the regulation of street traffic in big cities, and is also chairman of the board of the Eno foundation for traffic regulation. He came to Paris in response to a request that he would give his expert attention to the question of the suppression of traffic noises, which had become all but intolerable. The Paris newspapers took up the matter with much interest.

Those of us who remember the continuous blowing of motor-horns in Paris a few years ago were impressed by the comparative silence now observable.

• • • •

Mr. Eno, in the Paris New York-Herald, had an article calling attention to the fact that the suppression of the motor-horn had not increased accidents. He gave a series of dates beginning with 1907, showing the gradual police control of traffic. He said also that beginning with May 3, 1934, all Italian municipalities were forbidden sound signals at night. Unnecessary noise has become such a curse in modern life that its effect on the public health is about equal to that of the distribution of disease germs.

Mr. Eno suggests: "The next step should be a determined fight against squeaky brakes, cut-out and accelerator noises, and the rattling of loose parts, and, last, but not least, not allowing vehicles in bad order to be used at all on highways. A word here will not be amiss on noisy motorcycles, which should be excluded from traffic unless they can start and proceed on their way without being public nuisances."

• • • •

In the same newspaper the same week appeared an article by the Abbe Dimnet, headed "Will Paris Be Silenced?" in which he said that the return of William Phelps Eno "is a joy to lovers of Paris; all his visits have been blessings to this city."

Abbe Dimnet has been a member of the Touring Club's anti-noise commission since its foundation in 1929. Yet he says that Paris remains the noisiest capital in Europe. He suggests the substitution of deep, low-toned horns for the violent ones now in use, which bewilder other drivers and all pedestrians. He says:

"The splendid Italian reform has reduced accidents from 174 a month (in Rome) to 72, by substituting for the command 'Toot!' the reasonable injunction: 'Reduce your speed at turnings and keep strictly to your right.'"

He thinks, too, that there ought to be a trial silence week, so that everyone might learn something.

League Ready To Gamble All In East Africa

Session Call Sent Out in Move to Meet Crisis, Prevent War.

Dispatches from Addis Ababa reporting increased Ethiopian military preparations followed yesterday's publication of dispatches from Cairo, Egypt, describing in great detail the African empire's assertedly feverish efforts to get ready for war.

Offsetting Ethiopia's reported preparations was Italy's announced program of large-scale aerial warfare against Emperor Haile Selassie's country.

Three hundred planes will aid the tens of thousands of foot soldiers already designated for East African service, the National Aviation Service disclosed, with Gen. Giuseppe Valle, undersecretary for air, probably commanding them. Twenty-four planes and 80 pilots left for East Africa yesterday.

A government spokesman, however, said Italy, though keenly aware of Ethiopia's military preparation, had not considered immediate severance of diplomatic relations with the African nation. That will come up if and when hostilities start, he said.

Observers believe the spokesman's inference was that the government would not allow itself to be stampeded beyond the confines of its preparedness program already described as thorough and sufficient enough for "any eventuality."

Bad Faith Charged.

The spokesman said Italy believed Ethiopia has been acting in bad faith and had manifested her unwillingness to contribute to peace, asserting this was proved by Ethiopian tactics during recently ended meetings of an Italo-Ethiopian conciliation commission, which broke up when Ethiopia sought to inject boundary questions into the discussions.

Reports from London quoting Malcolm MacDonald, colonial secretary, as saying British military forces in Kenya, adjoining Ethiopia and Italian Somaliland, had been "partially redistributed" in view of "possible contingencies on that frontier" were characterized as without significance.

Britain has assured Italy that there will be no extraordinary concentrations of troops in Kenya, the spokesman said, and Italy has no reason to doubt this assurance.

He said Italy realized that some military provisions in Kenya might be thought necessary in view of the general east African situation.

Observers, however, recalled recent warnings to Italians printed in the controlled press against taking for granted Britain's meek acceptance of an Italian thrust into Ethiopia. The press pointed to Britain's past record and her interests in Africa as possible evidence to the contrary.

Missionaries to Stay.

Meanwhile, the Vatican took official cognizance of the crisis by announcing, through the columns of the newspaper Osservatore Romano, that Catholic missionaries, far from evacuating Ethiopia, were remaining at their posts in Addis Ababa and Kaffa Province. Only four sisters, who were ill, have returned to Italy, the announcement says.

Premier Mussolini, who protested to two American interviewers last night that Italy's east African course had not been properly understood abroad, conferred with the French and Japanese ambassadors yesterday. The latter assured him that Japan, reports to the contrary notwithstanding, had no interest in east Africa and would not intervene.

Reports from Paris were that British and French diplomats continued conferences in an attempt to avert war, though diplomatic negotiations already have been termed useless—and war inevitable—in the officially inspired press.

Bill Would Penalize U. S. Recruits to War

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Dickstein of the House Immigration Committee yesterday announced he would introduce a bill to deprive of citizenship United States residents who left for service in either the Italian or Ethiopian army.

While the State Department took cognizance of recruiting reports, it discounted rumors of large munitions shipments from this country to Italy or Ethiopia. Joseph C. Green, of the department's western European affairs division, told a House committee that "We have no way of knowing exactly, but my impression is that shipments to Italy and Ethiopia either have been negligible or are nonexistent."

England Held Ready To Protect Borders

By the United Press.

London, July 17.—Britain is prepared to protect the frontiers of her African colonies in event of war between Italy and Ethiopia, Malcolm MacDonald, secretary for the colonies, told the House of Commons today.

In a written reply to questioners as to whether Britain is prepared to protect the northern frontier of Kenya Colony, East Africa, he said:

"The colony's military forces have been partially redistributed with a view toward possible contingencies, but it has not been considered necessary to reinforce the troops."

Britain was reported also ready to send forces from Egypt into the Soudan in case Italy goes to war against Ethiopia.

FERA Foreman's Trial As Slayer Opens Today

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Madison, Va., July 17.—Circuit court will convene tomorrow morning for the trial of Ernest Seal, FERA foreman, of Old Rag, Va., charged with the murder of John R. Nicholson, unemployed. Judge Lemuel Smith, of Charlottesville, will preside. Seal's plea will be helf-defense, according to J. Lynn Lucas, of Luray, his attorney. The Commonwealth claims that Seal struck Nicholson in resentment at a remark he made about not being able to get work.

Nicholson died of a crushed skull ten days after he had been struck.

edited the Irish Homestead, farm journal, from 1904 to 1923, becoming editor of the Irish Statesmen in that year. Critics called the latter review the most skillfully edited in Ireland.

His pen name, puzzling to readers, is explained by Darrel Figgis, another Irish writer, in his book on Russell:

"Wanting a new pen name, he subscribed himself as Aeon. His penmanship not being very legible, the printer deciphered the diphthong and set a query for the rest; whereupon the writer, on his proof-sheet, struck out the query and stood by the diphthong."

Others of Russell's published works are: "The Divine Vision," 1904; "The Mask of Apollo," 1904; "New Poems," 1904; "By Still Waters," 1906; "The Candle of Vision," 1919; "The Interpreters," 1922; "Midsummer Eve," 1928; "Vale and Other Poems," 1931; "Song and Its Fountains," 1932, and "The Avatars," 1933, most of them volumes of poems or philosophic musings.

In addition he published several volumes of essays and a three-act play, "Deirdre," besides pamphlets on co-operative farming.

He also found time to paint pictures, engage in economic and political controversy and sit in the Irish convention, during 1917.

Visited in Washington.

George William Russell scaled the esoteric heights of poetic fantasy, but the complexity of Washington's "alphabet soup" was too much for him.

The famed entrepreneur of metric belles lettres was admittedly puzzled by the NRA, PWA, AAA, FERA and other New Deal brain children, a fact that was brought out when he discussed government with Rexford Tugwell during a visit here last January.

Russell stopped off in Washington en route to his native Ireland to give the Agriculture Department a few pointers on co-operative farming.

In Alphabetic Maze.

Wagging his shaggy head in confusion, he confessed that the experimental Federal agencies had him nonplussed; so much so that he wasn't prepared to offer a constructive opinion.

"Your American vigor has lopped off all the words, leaving only an alphabetical sign," he sighed, his eyes blinking behind his gold-rimmed spectacles.

Of Secretary Wallace he said: "He is one of the most thoughtful men in the United States."

During the interview with Tugwell, AE recalled that "because I'd written a book of mystical verse, they asked me to organize agricultural banks in Ireland."

Conscious of his increasing years ("I'm approaching 70 now") the famed writer genially discussed literature and the theater.

Conscious of Age.

The matter of age came up when he remarked that his latest volume of poems, published last November, probably would be his last.

He said that Robert Frost and Edwin Arlington Robinson were "first-rate" poets, though they didn't excite him as Emerson, Thoreau and Whittier did.

He was pleased to hear that the Abbey Players had enjoyed a successful week here a short time before his visit. Along with the playwright, Yeats, "AE" was a founder of the Abbey Theater Society and wrote one of the first plays it produced.

"What was the name of that play?" he was asked.

"Oh, I've forgotten. It was nothing. I had been in a theater twice when I wrote that play. They had me paint the scenery, design costumes and do a number of other things, too."

Water Mains Extended.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 17.—Hagerstown will extend its water system to the Fountain Head area, the water commissioners having been given authority by the mayor and council to extend its mains. Because of increased building during the last few years, this residential area, which is being served from the Fountain Head spring, is threatened with a shortage. Fountain Head is outside the corporate limits.

Bass Placed in Streams.

Baltimore, July 17 (AP).—More than 200,000 small bass have been stocked in Maryland streams in the past few days, it was reported to Judge Robert F. Duer, chairman of the State conservation commission. The fish are from 1 to 4 inches long.

Mrs. Bristol's PartyHonors Mrs. Stanton

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The Massachusetts avenue home of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark L. Bristol was the scene of a small and gay cocktail party yesterday afternoon, when Mrs. Bristol entertained for Mrs. William T. Stanton, of Hongkong, China, who, with her son, Mr. Burgess Fearon, is spending some time with the Bristols before going to Long Island to visit prior to sailing for Europe in several weeks, en route to China to rejoin her husband.

Mrs. Bristol, wearing a cool afternoon frock of black and white mousseline, girdled with green, did honors as both host and hostess, for the Admiral is in Cincinnati on business and will not return until tomorow. They are planning to leave next week for Maine to spend two weeks visiting with friends at various resorts.

Mrs. Stanton, who is brunette and infinitely charming, wore a frock of sheer white linen embroidered in a delicate pattern, and trimmed with narrow lace; a frock reminiscent of the lovely things one always sees in Oriental countries. Her tall, handsome son, who was recently graduated from St. Mark's School, will remain in this country to enter Harvard in the autumn.

The guests flocked in the dining room where there were cocktails and Mrs. Bristol's famous tray of appetizers, and even more gathered in the library, where Mrs. Julia Wheeler, wife of Lieut. Comdr. Wheeler, wearing a black and white printed chiffon and a wide-brimmed red hat, dispensed iced tea with sprigs of mint.

Among others who were there was the Minister of Portugal, Mr. Joao Antonio de Bianchi, who had known Mrs. Stanton and her husband when he represented his country in China, with Mme. de Bianchi, who wore a frock of green and white and black crepe with a large green straw hat. The Minister and Mme. de Bianchi will leave next week by motor for the West Coast, visiting the national parks en route and spending some time in San Francisco and Los Angeles, Mlle. Sibilla Skidelsky, daughter of Mme. de Bianchi, has gone to Bethany Beach, Del., where she will spend the remainder of the summer.

Also at Mrs. Bristol's yesterday were Senator and Mrs. Warren Austin, the latter in cool green and white; Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, wife of Senator Lewis; the Naval Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Sable, Gen. Louis McCarty, U. S. M. C.; Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom and daughter, Miss Vera Bloom, the latter in a frock of pink linen with a smart hat to match; Mrs. James Carroll Frazer, Mrs. Pendleton Mayo, Mrs. Campbell Prichett, who will entertain informally at cocktails this afternoon in the garden of her home on Kalorama road, and Mr. Ralph Snowden Hill.

Also Mr. Turner Battle, of the Department of Labor; Mr. Frank Packard, Lieut. Comdr. Ostrander, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Dion Williams and Mr. William Andrews.

M. Gaucheron Embarks Saturday for Europe

The First Secretary of the French Embassy, M. Roger Gaucheron, will sail on Saturday for Europe, where he will spend several weeks in Paris at the foreign office.

His sisters, Mlle. Simone and Mlle. Madeleine Gaucheron, will remain in this country during their brother's absence, and plan to leave next week on a motor trip through New England, finally spending several weeks in Maine, near Bar Harbor.

Comdr. C. S. Gillette Will Visit Dude Ranch

Commander Claude S. Gillette, U. S. N., will leave Washington Saturday for Wyoming to spend two weeks on a "dude" ranch. He will return to the Capital early in August. Mrs. Gillette sailed for Europe early in May to spend several months with her family in France, her birthplace. She will return to this country in October.

Attractive Visitor In Capital From Cuba

Hessler-Henderson, Inc.

SENORA MERCEDES DESCHAPELLES, who is the guest of the Secretary of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Lara in their apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street, where they recently entertained at a large cocktail party in her honor. Senora Deschapelles is from Havana, the home of Senor and Senora de Lara.

Sally White's Only Attendant To Be D. C. Girl

Patricia Southgate to Take Part in Ceremony in Massachusetts.

Patricia Southgate has been chosen flower girl and only attendant for the bride at the marriage of her cousin, Miss Sally Lancashire White, to Mr. Samuel Gilbert Houghton, which will take place August 2 at the Emmanuel Church in Manchester, Mass. Patricia is the young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Southgate, and the bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Lawrence White, of Beverly Farms, Mass. Mrs. White will be remembered as Miss Harriett Lancashire, a sister of Mrs. Southgate, and the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. Henry Lancashire, of Washington and New York.

Mr. Houghton will have his brother, Dr. John D. Houghton, as his best man, and the ushers will include Mr. William M. Houghton, of Lancashire, Pa.; Mr. Sargent Collier, of Walpole; Mr. E. Laurence White, jr., brother of the bride-elect; Mr. Nathaniel Saltonstall, of Beacon Hill, Boston; Mr. George B. Carpenter, of Chicago, and Mr. Paul Hoffman, of Utica.

After the church ceremony a wedding breakfast will be given in honor of the young couple at Laursalshire, the home of Mr. and Mrs. White. The young couple will leave for an extended wedding trip to England after the marriage.

Parkers Are Guests Of Former Envoy

Visit Padillas at Home in San Sebastian, Spain.

Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Parker and their children, who sailed for Europe several weeks ago, are in Spain as the guests of the former Spanish Ambassador to Washington and Senora de Padilla at their home in San Sebastian. They arrived shortly after Senor Don Ramon Padilla y Satrustegui returned to Washington to resume his duties as second secretary of embassy after an absence of six months.

Mrs. Parker will remain abroad until the autumn and will place her children in school in Switzerland, and Mr. Parker will return to the Capital next month.

Mrs. Helen Beadleston Wed To Count Orssich in New Jersey

Mrs. Frances Miller, Niece of Mrs. Charles A. McKenney, of Capital, Only Attendant of Bride; Ceremony Held in Rumson.

Mrs. Helen Beadleston, daughter of Mrs. Julian McCarty Little, of New York and Rumson, N. J., and the late Mr. Alfred N. Beadleston, became the bride of Count Vincent Orssich Tuesday at the home of the bride's mother at Rumson, N. J. Judge Edward J. Knight officiated at the ceremony. Due to the recent death of Mr. Little, only the immediate family and a few close friends witnessed the ceremony.

Mrs. Frances Marina Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew J. Miller, of New York, and niece of Mrs. Charles A. McKenney, of Washington, was the maid of honor and only attendant, and Count William Wydenbruck, of New York, was best man. A reception and luncheon followed the ceremony. Count Orssich and his bride sailed yesterday aboard the Manhattan for Europe, where they will spend three months. Upon their return they will make their home in New York.

While abroad they will visit the count's mother, Countess Elizabeth Orssich, who divides her time between her residence in Prague and the family estate, Bile Polciany, in the northeastern part of the old kingdom of Bohemia. They also will visit his sister, Countess Schoenborn, in Vienna, where the count received his early education. Count Orssich also attended the University of Prague, and served in the Austrian army in the World War.

This is the bride's second marriage. Her first, to Mr. James A. O'Gorman, jr., son of former Senator and Mrs. James A. O'Gorman, of New York, ended in a divorce recently, after which she resumed her maiden name.

Capital Store Slashes Prices For Novelties

$1 Bargains Include Gladstone Bags and 'What-Not' Baskets.

By Dudley Harmon.
Pinch-Hitting for Ruth Anne Davis.

SALES! There's nothing quite like the feeling they give of getting something for nothing. And this is the season for sales, as the stores prepare to receive the new autumn articles just beginning to come in. This is the ideal time to stock up on important and necessary articles that you can use the rest of the summer—and summer is by no means over yet—or which will stand you in good stead next year. In an E street store which specializes in novelties, there is a sale which would certainly be worth your while to attend. The store has ruthlessly slashed its prices, and is letting many things go for $1. One of the most useful articles offered is a "what-not" basket, which, as its name implies, can be used for anything under the sun. Big and roomy, without being bulky or clumsy, this basket will serve for picnics, as a clothes hamper, or as an egg basket, as it contains removable cardboard holders. And, mind you, it costs only a dollar.

• • • •

Travelers and week-enders will be interested in a stunning Gladstone bag, just right for odds and ends that pockets can't carry. Women will find it exactly what they need for carrying lingerie and make-up. As it has a definite masculine chic about it, men will want to snap it up the minute they see it. Many inexpensive bags, unfortunately, are carelessly finished inside, but every detail of this one is finally carried out, down to the last sturdily sewn seam. It fastens with a strong and secure zipper.

Every ingredient for drinks except the ice and the liquor—that's the latest novelty in cocktail sets, on sale at only $1. Bitters, syrup, grenadine, orange, lemon, lime, rock candy; in short, all the choicest of flavorings, are offered in attractive cut glass bottles, so pretty that you will want to keep them for future use after their contents have been exhausted.

• • • •

Also on sale are some seamless rubber bathing suits for only $1. They come in all sizes and colors, and are just as attractive as any of the more expensive suits we have seen along this line. It certainly is not too late in the season to freshen up your beach wardrobe with a new bathing costume. Surprise your friends, who are probably getting a little tired of the old one. Anyway, you can never have too many bathing suits, and think how delighted you will be to have this when next summer rolls around . . . While on the subject of beaches, we must tell you about the tricky toy set for youngsters which we saw at this same store. It consists of pieces of tin in mold form. With these molds, the child can build the most fascinating forts, castles, walls, churches, and houses, all in sand. That is, he can build them if daddy will let him have a try at the set, for it is so fascinating that we just can't understand how anybody could want to part with it once he got it into his hands.

"Tropical" Make-Up.

CITY DWELLERS who have not yet had a chance to get down to the beach will welcome the new "tropical" make-up which a downtown department store has just received from New York. This make-up comes in a delectable dusky shade of clear golden brown. It will make you look as dusky and sunburned as though you had spent your entire summer lolling about on the beach. A new and unusual feature is the fact that powder, rouge, and lipstick are all matched. Thus you need never fear that your lipstick will clash with your rouge, or vice versa. You can instead be confident that you are looking your very best, with your make-up a harmonious blend of matching shades. A generous box of powder costs only $2, and the lipstick and rouge cost $1 apiece. The cosmetics house which puts these out is internationally known for its fine products.

New Double-Decker Bed.

THE TALK of the town—that's the new double-decker bed which a Seventh street furniture store is featuring this month. This article has already made a tremendous hit out West, and we predict a great success for it here in Washington. This is because it combines three important qualities: It is attractive, it is extremely practical, and it is cheap. It should solve the problem of how to have week-end and overnight guests, and at the same time save space. Composed of two single beds, superimposed one on the other, the double-decker is made of wood, painted brown, and finished with a handsome dull finish. One mounts to the top deck by means of a handy little ladder, made of the same material as the bed, and it can be taken apart to form two twin beds. It costs only $85. Try this on your guests—it will amuse them, and save you many a week-end headache.

Demure Frock Designed Especially for Young Girls

Pattern No. 971.

A YOUNG GIRL will like this charming little frock and she'll find it very easy to make for herself, since it's a one-piece "Sew-Simple" pattern, especially designed for beginners. What could be more flattering than that ruffled collar, like a demure square yoke? Or newer than the skirt, with graduated front and back panels, giving a slight flare to the silhouette? Those short puff sleeves are both pretty and cool.

The pattern is designed in sizes 12 to 20; 30 to 38. Complete yardage requirements are given on the pattern envelope, and a large, easily followed instruction chart is included in the envelope.

What TODAY Means

"Cancer."

IF July 18 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:45 to 11:45 a. m., from 2:45 to 4:45 p. m., and from 8:45 to 10:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:45 to 9:45 a. m., from 4:45 to 6:45 p. m. and from 10:45 p. m. until midnight.

Do not permit a friend to persuade you to do something against your will. It might pay you to practice forbearance this day, especially if you encounter a person who is a decided bore, as his or her friendship is likely to prove of far greater value than you think. New business policies must be carefully considered this day before they are adopted or put into practice, if they are to work out satisfactorily. Be sociable, for through friendly contacts your interests are likely to be advanced, and a monetary gain may result. Any form of social activity should be very successful. Married and engaged couples, and those engaged in courtships should avoid making hasty decisions in matters deserving serious consideration.

If a woman and July 18 is your birthday, your ability to judge people will save you from making many mistakes. You love good, wholesome fun, and your wit probably helps greatly to make any social gathering more enjoyable. People, as a rule, do not hesitate to confide, as well as seek your advice on matters of a personal nature. Your analytical mind should qualify you to do work of a scientific, historical research or legal nature. Disorderliness is probably one of your pet aversions.

Guard against allowing envy to stir up antagonistic feeling, especially where a friendship is involved. Chemistry, law, romantic historical writing, teaching, lecturing and social welfare work, may afford you remarkable opportunities to demonstrate just what you can do. You should be very happily married.

If a man and July 18 is your natal day, you should have excellent taste, recognized powers of discernment and a great deal of discretion. Politics, the literary field, art, educational or legal work may provide the best means through which you can see your ambitions realized.

Film 'Good Samaritan' To Be Shown Tonight

Under the auspices of the Society of Catholic Medical Missionaries, a sound-motion picture, "The Good Samaritan," will be given at 8:15 tonight in Ward Music Hall, Catholic University. The movie, which depicts the life of the Catholic Medical Mission sisters, was written and directed by Father Mathis. The public is invited.

Soviet Women Setting Styles of Distinction

RUSSIAN women who are now tinting their nails and waving their hair are on the way to developing a distinct Russian style of dress. It will be a compromise between the peasant dress and the dress of modern Western women, predicts Elizabeth Hawes, New York dress designer, who has just returned from Russia. Miss Hawes gave a fashion show in Moscow at the invitation of Soviet officials.

Miss Hawes told Russian women they should not attempt to copy the fashions of any other land.

"The Russian women are big and strongly built," she said, "and should have a mode of dress best suited to themselves."

Miss Hawes said the general run of women in Moscow and Leningrad were as well dressed as in New York, but pointed out that she spoke only of dresses in this connection. Shoes, hosiery and hats, she said, were far behind the style and quality of those in America. She reported an increasing demand for perfume on the part of Russian women.

American styles, she said, were moving toward those that Russia had in the past—full skirts, high waists and more radical hip lines.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Should One Accept Hospitality From Long-Time Friends When Dwindling Income Prevents One's Reciprocating Courtesy?

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HATWORTH: My husband and I married right out of school and came here to live. That was about 10 years ago. In the course of a few months, through the help of introductions, we had made a number of interesting friendships with other couples near our own age, and in circumstances similar to ours. My husband had a small inheritance, a good job and a salary that permitted us to live comfortably, entertain frequently, and go about a good deal.

In the years since then, beginning about three years ago, to be exact, things have changed considerably, and for the worse, financially. My husband invested his inheritance, and eventually lost the whole thing. Later, the company he worked for was consolidated with another company and he was kept on, but in a changed capacity and at a much smaller salary. By way of retrenchment, we moved twice, each time into an apartment of smaller size. We now live in a one-room, kitchen and bath apartment. We cut down on clothes, on travel, on entertaining.

Now, this is our problem: We realize we have come to the age where we must give thought to the future, to our old age, to be exact. My husband's salary is adequate to our present expenditure, with a very little left over. If we continue to see our friends, which means, of course, that we must do our share of entertaining, that little will have to be spent as earned, and not hoarded in savings account or in buying additional insurance.

• • • •

My husband and I have had several discussions as to which is the wisest investment against age: A group of friends, or such financial security as we may be able to provide. (Incidentally, I am a woman who doesn't believe in a woman's working when her husband is able and willing to provide for her. I think it kills her husband's spirit; and, moreover, I think it a selfish thing for a woman to do, to take a job she doesn't urgently need, when there are millions of unemployed.)

• • • •

As I say, there are those among our friends who haven't seemed quite so desolated about not seeing us everywhere since our fortunes have declined, but there are others who always urge us to come to their parties, large or small. Up to now, we have managed, by hook or crook, by skimping and sacrificing in personal indulgences and even necessities, to repay all our social obligations in some form or other. But the effort is becoming more difficult.

• • • •

What do you think we should do under the circumstances? Should we just begin to decline invitations on some polite excuse? Should we tell our friends truthfully that we prize them very highly, but that we can not afford to pay our way on the social merry-go-round any longer? Or should we just accept their invitations and trust to their own intelligence to perceive that if we do not entertain in return, it is because we are not financially able to do so? In case we did drop out of the group, and the group didn't protest, what interests could we substitute to fill the gap in our lives, so that we wouldn't get too hopelessly on each others' nerves? Please advise me. Sincerely,

NEWLY POOR.

The Well-Ordered Life.

DEAR NEWLY POOR: As a matter of integrity and common sense, I think it imperative, whenever possible, that everyone order his life within his income so that there exists a saving margin, however small, between that income and his regular expenditure. The folly and futility of anyone's attempting to "keep up with the Jonses" is axiomatic; a household proverb.

Self-preservation, to quote another axiom, is the first law of nature. And existence with self-respect (which is the only tolerable existence for the sensitively aware human being) is very largely a matter of being able to pay one's way as one goes, in this modern world.

• • • •

Those things in life which the intelligent adult cannot, within reason, afford, he very wisely does without. Purposeful and necessary self-sacrifices develops in the individual such qualities as moral strength, self-reliance, resourcefulness and serenity of spirit. Whoever leads a well-ordered life, within the most circumscribed limits, is automatically preparing himself to meet whatever comes with steady nerves and sound judgment.

• • • •

If your friends are persons of real worth, you will suffer no loss of esteem in their eyes by living simply and quietly within your income. Probably they will feel increased respect and affection for you, as a couple possessing courage and character. Be honest in your reason for declining invitations, making your explanation by word of mouth. Genuinely loyal friends will refuse to accept your plea, and from such persons you can accept hospitality with perfect grace, repaying them by inviting them to your home for an evening of bridge, a Sunday supper, or some such informal and inexpensive entertaining. Keep open house for such friends. You will find them dropping in now and then for an hour of quiet talk and it may be you will find yourself knowing them better, appreciating them more, than ever you did when they were only casually contacted in a never-ending social round.

• • • •

What interests can you substitute to fill the gap if you drop off the social merry-go-round, and so prevent your getting on each others' nerves? If you can find a small house in the suburbs for approximately the same price you pay for your apartment, that might be the wisest first move toward reorganizing your lives.

• • • •

I think nothing is more depressing, more guaranteed to develop "nerves" and morbidity in the person accustomed to living an absorbing social life than having to settle down to a routine existence in a small apartment dwelling. On the other hand, the person with an iota of talent for making the most of life, whatever the odds, is bound to respond to the invitation to create a new set of essential values, inherent in living close to grass, trees and sky.

• • • •

Other advantages of living in a suberb include opportunity for cultivating neighborliness, for making new friends whose material circumstances duplicate your own, and for finding an outlet for your social talents by taking an active part in programs for community betterment. For yourself there is always reading, gardening, study perhaps of interior decorating, so as to make the most of your home; of botany, so as to make the most of your garden, even if it should be only a two-by-four kitchen plot; of cooking, dressmaking—the thousand-and-one things with which a woman of limited means and great leisure can profitably and pleasantly occupy her time.

• • • •

Where you find an agreeably occupied, intellectually active, attractive appearing and stimulating wife, you usually find an admiring and contented husband. So it is up to you to set the pace in this necessary effort to reorganize your lives within your income. M. H.

Huge Toll Taken By Rheumatic Fever

Causes 3 Times as Many Deaths Among Pupils as Tuberculosis.

Heart Ailments Can Be Curbed by Proper Care in Childhood.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

IF we would save many hearts from "failure" in later life we must give the closest attention to the prevention of infections in childhood and youth. One such infection is acute rheumatic fever, which causes three times as many deaths among children of school age as tuberculosis, and which looms on the medical horizon as one of the chief destroyers in the early adult period.

For years health organizations have been preaching the gospel of periodic visits to the physician. If anything, such a program is more important with children than with adults.

Without doubt certain children have a predisposition to rheumatic fever. These are often the youngsters who have symptoms of darting muscle pains that mother is prone to classify as growing pains. Within recent years the role of food sensitivity (allergy) has come boldly into the foreground in our search for the basic cause of rheumatism.

The onset of an attack of rheumatic fever may be insidious, that is, it may come on so gradually and slowly as not to be noticed. The patient tires quickly, appears pale, and loses his usual "pep." If rest is insisted upon and some blood tonic is given the attack may pass away, only to recur at a later date. Many children who have a poor appetite with some anemia, who are tired, and who exhibit a low grade temperature are really rheumatic. For these "beginners" nutrition and rest are essential. Only when the temperature has wholly disappeared should any attempt be made to remove tonsils or carry out other operative procedures. Such children should be in bed until the pulse rate is normal, and until there is no rise in temperature following moderate exercise.

Most of us are familiar with the acute manifestations of rheumatism. Here the temperature is usually high—103 to 104 degrees F.—and one or more joints become red and swollen. There is great pain on the least attempt at movement. These joints should be placed completely at rest—this may be accomplished by the use of sand bags placed on either side of the joint or by well padded splints. If this is not done the child unconsciously moves the joint and not only causes pain, but increases inflammation and the possible dissemination of bacteria. Certain hypnotic drugs may be employed if needed. No drug should be used that will cause irritation of the kidneys, as these structures are frequently engorged and sometimes are carrying a heavier load than they can well withstand.

The most serious of all the complications is inflammation of the heart. In spite of all that can be done this will sometimes occur, although its effect will be greatly minimized under expert management. The patient must be kept in bed for a relatively long period of time, weeks beyond the subsidence of all signs of temperature. Nutrition must be maintained at the highest possible level. Both the heart muscle and the lining of the heart may be equally involved. Full activity should be gradually resumed only when the heart rate does not increase appreciably under moderate exercise.

Feminine Slant Needed In Politics, Says Leader

Underwood & Underwood.

MRS. GRETCHEN DAU CUNNINGHAM.

Mrs. Gretchen Dau Cunningham, Economist of NRA, Condemns Women's Desire to Attain Masculine Viewpoint in Public Life.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

SO LONG AS there are as many women as men in the world, the woman's point of view will be just as important, just as significant, as the man's.

"Then why should so many women in public life strive to see problems and settle them as a man would?" asks Mrs. Gretchen Dau Cunningham, economic adviser for the NRA, who is convinced women with so-called "masculine minds" made few unique contributions to public endeavor.

"The average woman is flattered when she's told she has a 'masculine mind,' where a man would be insulted if informed he had a feminine one," she said yesterday. "But that's all wrong. Sex has nothing to do with mentality; but it does—or should—have some influence on one's point of view. An I'm sure there is nothing more important for women in public life than that they retain and develop a feminine slant on their work."

This from a woman who has successfully invaded a field generally given over to men. This from one who has been interested in economics and sociolgy as long as she can remember, and one who has spent less time on domestic pursuits than the average woman.

A widely known economist, Mrs. Cunningham is also a sociologist, because as she explained it, "the two go together. In other words, you can't be a successful economist, you can"s save money, time, and labor for people unless you have a working knowledge of the constitution, phenomena and development of society."

Has Human Viewpoint.

In this connection, she also pointed out that a woman's mind naturally has a sociological trend because "she sees things from the human angle—an angle that was largely overlooked as long as men were the only recognized economists."

She believes the NRA was "one of the greatest sociological experiments in the world," but she is not discouraged because of the Supreme Court's decision, "because people have had time to be educated to a new idea, with the result the human equation in business will never be slighted again."

At present, Mrs. Cunningham is doing research on something that even from an economist's point of view definitely has a "woman's angle." It is the textile industry.

"The subject has been virtually untouched," she explained, "and I'm glad to have this time to study it. As long as I can remember I've been interested in textiles."

Born in Galveston, Tex., she spent much time as a child watching bales of cotton being hauled up over sides of ships "and wondering where they went and how cloth was made from them."

Studied Extensively.

It was through finding out about this that Mrs. Cunningham became interested in the two allied lines of work she has followed since. She "studied in every university in the United States and abroad where there was a professor teaching something I particularly wanted in education, economy and sociology." But she didn't depend entirely on textbooks and teachers. Determined to get some first-hand information on condition of women in industry, she applied for a job in a factory in Cleveland, worked three months and gained an insight into the problems and philosophy of industrial works that could never have been gleaned from textbooks.

Of the many things she discovered from this experience one was that "there is little difference between the way factory women and business women regard their work. With both, if pay envelopes meet expenses, all is well. If not the average woman in a factory or in an office worries and tries to figure out how she can get a better job."

Another thing she found out was that "the background of the foreign factory worker is generally much richer than the American who works with him."

As to women in politics, Mrs. Cunningham believes they have a great future in this field; provided, again, they "retain a feminine point of view."

Observer Sees More Refined Office Conduct

WOMEN are swearing less than they did a few years ago and are showing more refinement in their business manners, Miss Katherine McNelis, editor of Tower magazines, believes. The reason, Miss McNelis points out, is that women "are becoming so sure of themselves they do not find it necessary to imitate the rowdy qualities of some men.

"That means I suppose there is less affectation among women," Miss McNelis said in an interview. "When they are sure of themselves as women, they do not feel that they have to be shocking."

Men generally are greatly shocked when women swear, Miss McNelis believes, and that fact may influence women toward eliminating profanity.

Gladys George, actress, said the word "damn" frequently afforded a woman a harmless means of blowing off steam. "It has often saved me from going into long and unpleasant harangues" she said, and added, "I don't think women at home have nearly so much reason to swear as have workers in professions and businesses."

Tomato Jelly and Egg Salad Is a Cool Dish

Served With Thin Cucumber Sandwiches, It Makes a Nourishing Meal.

By Dorothea Duncan.

YOU WILL FIND cool comfort this summer in dishes that offer a streamline silhouette menu. Keep the calorie count of your food low, so that no unnecessary heat producers are introduced into the menu.

Salads are in favor, especially this one made of a clear cube of tomato jelly whose center is a gold and white hard-cooked egg nested on a crisp green leaf of lettuce. When it is piped all around the bottom with cream cheese that has been stirred up briskly with a little mayonnaise, it becomes a real summer temptation. It is cool, colorful and comforting. It is cool, too, from the cook's point of view because it can be made with a minimum amount of time and effort. Served with thin bread and butter sandwiches, tiny buttered rolls, or sandwiches of thin-buttered whole wheat slices put together with finely chopped cucumbers and a bit of salad dressing you have a luncheon as satisfying as it is nourishing.

Eggs in Tomato Jelly.

4 hard-cooked eggs
1½ tablespoons gelatin
2 tablespoons cold water
1½ cups tomato juice
½ teaspoon minced onion
¼ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons vinegar
1 bay leaf
½ teaspoon sugar
2 packages cream cheese
Mayonnaise.

Add cold water to gelatin and let stand while remainder of preparation is done. Heat the tomato juice with the onion, vinegar, bay leaf, sugar and salt. Simmer for 5 minutes. Strain and pour over softened gelatin, stirring until gelatin is completely dissolved. Pour half the tomato mixture into a square pan that has been rinsed with cold water. Cool. Place the eggs on the gelatin so that there will be one egg for each serving. Pour the remaining tomato-gelatin mixture over the eggs. Chill. When congealed, cut into cubes, using a knife that has been dipped into hot water. Put each cube on a lettuce leaf and pipe around it with cream cheese that has been creamed with mayonnaise.

Instead of hard cooked eggs, poached eggs may be used. When poached in the little poaching pans, either round or square ones, they are most decorative, and their nice flat shape makes them literally sink into the cool sea of tomato. Together, tomato and egg emerge from the refrigerator to give real summer satisfaction.

Combine two large pears which have been sliced with 3 teaspoons of sugar and 4 teaspoons of lemon juice. Add ½ teaspoon of salt to 1 cucumber which has been sliced and tossed together lightly with the pears. Arrange on crisp lettuce. Serve with French dressing. Serves six.

A bit of shredded canned coconut added to a salad now and then, if you pick the right combination, makes a pleasing dish. Crisp two cups of finely shredded cabbage by allowing it to stand in ice water. Drain and dry thoroughly. Toss together lightly with 1 cup canned crushed pineapple, drained, 1 cup coconut, a dash of salt and ¾ cup mayonnaise. Serve on crisp lettuce. Garnish with strips of pimento. Serves six.

Raspberry Mayonnaise.

Break 2 tablespoons of raspberry jam or jelly with a fork. Add two tablespoons of lemon juice, a dash of salt and ¼ cup mayonnaise. Fold into the mixture ¼ cup cream which has been whipped. Makes ¾ cup mayonnaise.

Three Identical Planes to Be Built for China Service.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 17.—Lifting a total load, including its own weight, of 51,300 pounds to an altitude of 18,200 feet, the flying clipper No. 7 today established an unofficial world record for aircraft performance.

The pay load aboard the craft was said by officials of the Glenn L. Martin Co., its manufacturers, to have totaled 24,000 pounds. Ten persons were aboard the huge airplane when the record was broken.

The clipper, with a wingspread of 130 feet and capacity for 46 passengers, is to go on a 3,150-mile "shakedown" flight next week to Miami and return.

H. C. Milburn, vice president and general manager of the aircraft factory, said the trip will take 20 hours. The airline distance to Miami is about 2,000 miles, but the craft will circle the Southern city and Baltimore until the 20-hour period has elapsed.

The record broken today was the international seaplane record established several years ago when 16,608 pounds pay load was taken to an altitude of 6,551 feet above sea level. Since National Aeronautic Association officials did not supervise the flight, the new record is not official, Milburn said. A Department of Commerce inspector, Raymond Quick, was aboard.

The clipper is one of three identical craft under construction for Pan American Airways for use on a trans-Pacific air passenger and airmail service.

Women Denounce Armaments Funds

Peacetime Expenditures Seen As War Aid.

By the Associated Press.

Seattle, July 17.—Large peacetime expenditures for armaments were denounced as leading toward war in a report submitted to the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs today.

The report, which originated in the international relations committee, was prepared by Dr. Grace H. Beardsley, of Baltimore. It was presented to the convention by Miss Emily R. Kneubuhl, of New York.

Without saying large armaments would lead directly to war, Miss Kneubuhl said she believed there would be less likelihood of war if huge expenditures were eliminated.

"If international economic relations can be maintained in fairness and justice, all wars can be prevented," she said. "Large armaments are a direct determining factor in throwing nations into armed conflict, and all women today must support the principle of co-operation and conference in order to eliminate such wars."

Advocating the entry of more women into the consular and diplomatic services of the United States, Miss Kneubuhl said in such positions they could wield great influence toward war prevention.

Two Sisters Adjudged Insane in 'MercySlaying'

Manchester, England, July 17 (AP).—A court's finding that they were insane today saved two weeping sisters, found guilty of killing the younger imbecile brother they had nursed day and night for 20 years, from death on the gallows or imprisonment.

Catherine Walsh, 39, and Mrs. Evelyn Constance Alexander, 35, who told the court "we did it for the love of our brother," were sentenced—according to custom in such cases—"to be detained during the king's pleasure."

The sisters were charged with killing Sylvester Walsh on June 10 "by administering gas and tablets," and they admitted to the court that "we promised our mother we would do it."

Walter Reed Patients Recover From Poison

Fifty patients and three attendants at Walter Reed Hospital, Army Medical Center, who were stricken with food poisoning Tuesday afternoon, were reported as "completely recovered" yesterday.

Officials said the poisoning was probably caused by banana pie, which was served for luncheon. Remnants of the meal were analyzed yesterday by chemists.

The three attendants were stricken first, and shortly after about 50 patients were similarly affected. Lieut. Col. Michael A. Dailey said the poisoning was "very mild."

ChineseBanker Plans to Visit OldSchoolHere

Shanghai Financier toView Boyhood Scenes After 30 Years.

Thirty years ago a Chinese student, named Tao-yu Clarence Sun, was graduated from the Central High School. He had a good record and served as first lieutenant in the cadet corps. Today he will come back to visit his alma mater as one of China's leading bankers and industrialists.

Sun left Central High School in 1905, when it was still on Seventh and O streets. Later he went to Cornell University, completing his training in civil engineering in 1909.

Sun has served as managing director of a number of Chinese railways. He was once vice minister of railways.

Sun, who during his stay here is a house guest of the Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Alfred Sze and Mrs. Sze, came here from London after a business trip on behalf of the Chun Foo Union Bank, a powerful Chinese bank in Shanghai, of which he is president. He will visit Cornell University in a few days.

Interviewed yesterday, Sun, as a banker and financier, discussed the troublesome silver problem. He said that the general tone of the market in Shanghai has been bad since the United States put into force its silver-purchasing policy.

The Chinese farmers were hardest hit as a result of the drainage of the white metal from China. The price of their produce for export has dropped 60 per cent, while farm products consumed in China fell 40 per cent. High silver has also affected Chinese industry.

Sun scorned the theory that high silver would increase the purchasing power of China. No nation buys with money, but with exports. When China's export trade dwindles because of high silver, she must buy less from foreign countries, he declared.

DOES YOUR HUSBAND CALL YOU GROUCHY?

He's truthful if not tactful. Manlike, he is bewildered by your offishness and irritability. He can't understand what you have to be blue about. He wishes that you'd snap out of it. He'd do anything he could to help you. If he knew how good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was, he'd go straight to the nearest drug store and buy you a bottle.

Mrs. Barbara Spears

"My husband says I am my old self again," says Mrs. Barbara Spears, 799 Elma Street, Akron, Ohio. "I was tired and all in with no appetite. Had no pep and was in poor spirits. Your Vegetable Compound eliminated that awful tired feeling."

Potato Strike Eased; Roads Still Picketed

Maryland Growers for Action Independent of Virginians.

By the Associated Press.

Pocomoke City, Md., July 17.—Movement of potatoes from Maryland's Eastern Shore picked up slightly today as the general tenor of indecision among growers eased somewhat.

Pickets were stationed on highways again to see that the $1.60 per barrel price was maintained but there was no trouble and police said none was anticipated. The $1.60 price was set after farmers had clung to a $2.10 figure for weeks with the result that potato shipments were virtually unknown.

Yesterday's shipments, according to reports received here, totaled 53 car loads from Maryland and 174 from Virginia. Today's shipments were expected to exceed those figures.

Growers met in executive session at Snow Hill, Md., last night and decided to continue the program. It was understood, however, that some Worcester County growers favored action independent of that taken in Virginia where the "strike" was started.

Price Rise Reflects Eastern Shore Strike

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 17.—Reflecting the embargo effected by growers in their determination to force prices higher, Eastern Shore cobblers rose from $1.05 to $1.44 per 100 pounds on the New York market during early July, the United States Department of Agriculture reported today.

The statement, emanating from the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, sounded the optimistic note that "some advance in price may be expected during the next few weeks."

Virginia's total crop this year will amount to 11,000,000 bushels, or 17 per cent less than last season and 23 per cent below average, the bureau predicted. The United States total was estimated at 295,000,000 bushels, as compared with 312,000,000 in 1934.

FERA Silent on Plans For Buying Surplus

By the Associated Press.

Officials of the Federal Relief Administration said yesterday that the Administration policy forbade announcement of how much money would be spent, or when it would start buying surplus potatoes on the Eastern Shore of Virginia.

Representative Bland (Democrat), Virginia, was informed that SFRA, under its Surplus Relief Corporation, would purchase a part of the Eastern Shore crop this year in an effort to boost prices for the potatoes, which were down as low as $1.25 a barrel when growers went on a digging strike.

Bland said he had not been informed when the buying would begin, and FERA officials said that the policy of withholding prices and dates in its surplus buying was laid down because the market was affected when this was done.

Child, 2, Near Death After Taking Tablets

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., July 17.—Rachael Mustain, 2-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Mustain, was near death tonight after eating a quantity of headache tablets she found while playing.

The infant was found with the bottle in the crib. Her recovery was viewed as unlikely at a hospital.

Cuban Diplomat Dies In Norfolk Hospital

Norfolk, Va., July 17 (AP).—Salvador Arduin, 57, Cuban consul at Norfolk, died at a local hospital today as a result of a heart attack. He had been suffering from heart trouble for some time and was taken to the hospital earlier in the morning for treatment.

For the last 33 years Consul Arduin had been a consular representative of Cuba, serving in many localities. He came to Norfolk from Havana.

Lynchburg Girl Is Wed.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lynchburg, Va., July 17.—Miss Ruth Hortense Frazier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Frazier, was married Monday to Charlie Wilson Hamilton by the Rev. P. T. Harman, pastor of West Lynchburg Baptist Church. Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton will live here after a bridal trip.

Indian Chief's Arrest Ordered In Drowning of Virginia Girl

By the Associated Press.

West Point, Va., July 17.—Chief Paul Miles, of the Pamunkey Indian tribe, will be given a hearing before Trial Justice F. W. Smith at King William Courthouse July 24 on a charge of involuntary manslaughter in connection with the drowning July 4 of Doris Virginia Melton, Richmond high school girl, county officials said today.

A warrant for Chief Miles was sworn out today on order of Commonwealth's Attorney David Nelson Sutton on complaint of the girl's mother, Mrs. Lewis B. Melton.

Miss Melton drowned in the Pamunkey River when she fell or was pushed from a boat in which she was riding with two other girls. Chief Miles was rowing.

The girl's companions, Margaret Martin, of Cold Harbor, and Charlotte Allen, of Richmond, said Miles made no effort to rescue the drowning girl. This is not a violation of the law. Officers said the Indian offered as an excuse that he was afraid of cramps.

The investigation has been ordered, authorities indicated, to determine how the 15-year-old girl happened to get out of the boat. One officer said "she either was assisted or was pushed out."

The three girls went boating while on a picnic with their families near White House, obtaining the boat from the Indians and hiring Miles to row. He attempted to show the girls how to row shortly before Miss Melton drowned, it was reported.

Slippery Prisoner Cuts Grass in Irons

By the Associated Press.

Hagerstown, Md., July 17.—Horine Welch is cutting grass and wearing leg irons while doing the work.

Welch, who is 49, but who gave no address, escaped from the "city weed gang" on May 24 while serving a ten-day sentence. The "weed gang" is composed of short-term prisoners who are employed cutting grass.

Welch was recaptured yesterday. Police took no chances on his leaving the grass uncut again. They put him in leg irons.

Bier Appointed Fruit Inspector For Virginia

M. A. Hubbard to Supervise Enforcement Under New Set-up.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 17.—Robert Bier, a Federal employe, has been named supervisor of the inspection of fruit and vegetables in Virginia, and M. A. Hubbard has been appointed supervisor of enforcement, the State Department of Agriculture announced today.

Bier and Hubbard will work in cooperation under the general direction of J. H. Meek, market director of the department. Meek said Bier was one of the most experienced supervisors in the United States, and Hubbard, a V. P. I. graduate, had had much experience in Virginia and other States.

This arrangement, it was understood, was designed to end the dissatisfaction of a group of Virginia orchardists under the leadership of W. S. Campfield with the State apple inspection service. A delegation urged Meek's dismissal last winter, but he was exonerated by the commission.

Meek said the appointment of Bier was in no sense a surrender to the fruit growers. Though the actual inspection will be under Federal supervision, he said, the State will enforce the grading standards set by inspectors.

Rites for Moore, Hotel Head, Today

By the Associated Press.

Staunton, Va., July 17.—Funeral services for A. T. Moore, hotel executive, who was killed last night in an automobile collision on the Lee highway, will be held at 4 p. m. tomorrow at Silverbrooks, the home of Mrs. J. Frank Clemmer, his mother-in-law, near Middlebrook.

The services will be conducted by the Rev. Dr. Hunter B. Blakely, of the First Presbyterian Church, of which Mr. Moore had been a member since coming to Staunton. Dr. Blakely will be assisted by the Rev. Dr. John J. Gravatt and the Rev. J. Lewis Gibbs.

Burial will be in Thornrose Cemetery.

Airport Group Named.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., July 17.—A commission intended to make recommendations or suggestions as to the proper management of the Cumberland Airport at Mexico Farms was appointed by the city council. The commission consists of City Engineer Henry W. Schaidt, William J. Johnson and F. Allan Weatherholt. They will serve without pay.

Virginia Lists 7 More Cases Of Paralysis

Increase Falls Below Daily Average Last Week; 1 Death Reported.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 17.—Virginia's reported cases of infantile paralysis continued to increase today, but the seven new cases were below last week's daily average for the second successive day.

Four cases were recorded by the State Health Department and three reported to Richmond city authorities late today had not been included in the State figures. These reports ran the State's total since June 1 to 134, of which 82 have been recorded since July 1.

The four cases registered with the State Health Department were from Albermarle County, 2; Charlotte County, 1, and Prince Edward County, 1.

One death from the disease was reported today, that of Mattie Bates, Negro woman, of Cismont, Albemarle County.

The State Health Department report for the week ended July 13 showed 250 cases of diarrhea and dysentery, an increase of 55 over the previous week. Seventeen cases of typhoid were reported, as against 11 for the preceding week.

Marylanders to Get AAA Wheat Bonus

Benefits to Be Paid Despite Court Ruling on Tax.

The bulk of the $946,000 due the Maryland wheat farmers will be paid, in spite of the ruling of a Federal Court ruling in Massachusetts that the Agricultural Adjustment Administration processing tax is illegally collected, it was learned yesterday.

The first payment of 20 cents a bushel is ready to be paid, according to A. H. Snyder, of the University of Maryland Extension Service. The remaining 13 cents a bushel is scheduled for payment by January 1.

If the Supreme Court upholds the lower Federal court in declaring the tax unconstitutional, the remaining 13-cent payment is problematical, it was said.

Red Men to Meet.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., July 17.—A district meeting of the Improved Order of Red Men, in which Tonkaway and Kiowa tribes of Cumberland; Tioga, of Midland, and Black Hawk, of Westernport, will participate, will be held at Westernport Saturday. Black Hawk Tribe, No. 131, will be the host. John W. Walker, Baltimore, great keeper of records, will speak. Charles H. Schaab, Cumberland, captain of District No. 16, will preside.

One-Armed Woman's Shotgun Ends Ax-Man's Reign of Terror

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 17.—A one-armed former woman trap shooter armed with a shotgun today brought an end to a reign of terror by a 60-year-old farm laborer who threatened his two sisters with an ax, burned a barn and set fire to two dwellings.

Howard L. Young, the laborer, was severely wounded about the head by a charge fired from the shotgun and was captured unarmed by police as firemen extinguished the blazes in the dwellings on the farm of his sisters near Walker, Baltimore County. Young lived with his sisters.

The two sisters, Mrs. D. F. Martin, 66, and Mrs. Rosie Williams, 65, reported to Baltimore County police that they were awakened early this morning by a fire in the nearby barn.

Mrs. Martin ran to the first floor of their home and found that the kitchen was in flames. She said she was accosted by Young, who chased her from the house with an ax.

Her screams awoke Miss Mildred Wilson, their niece, who ran downstairs and found Young pouring kerosene on the floor of another room. Young raised his ax and Miss Wilson ran to another room for a shotgun.

She fired three times at Young, the third shot tearing his cap from his head and wounding him.

The sisters told police Young had been away from home for years, but came back three months ago.

Flag Signals Will Speed Phone Messages to Cruising Officers.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 17. — A system enabling Maryland State police to block all the 39 main roads leading in or out of Maryland within an hour is being worked out by the headquarters here, it was said yesterday at the office of Maj. J. Purdon Wright, superintendent of the force.

The system will make it necessary to transfer some of the men now stationed in small towns, but it will not be necessary to move any of the sub-stations. In cases where criminals are reported to be heading toward the Maryland boundaries, or where a crime has been committed in the State and it is thought that the culprits will try to leave the State, the roads can be blocked within 60 minutes from the time the alarm is received.

Applies to Busy Highways.

Only heavily-traveled highways can be watched, however, as there are not enough men to cover secondary roads which cross the State lines.

Another arrangement being made by the State police headquarters will make it possible to reach patrolmen more quickly by telephone. The Maryland Penitentiary is making 200 yellow flags, bearing the State police insignia, which will be furnished to garages, filling stations and other establishments which are open 24 hours a day.

Flag System Devised.

When headquarters wants to reach a certain patrolman, who is on the road, they may phone the establishment with the flag. The flag, which will ordinarily be kept flying, will be lowered. As the State policeman passes, he will see, by the absence of the flag, that he is wanted and can phone his headquarters. This will save the time now consumed in stopping to ask for phone calls. The men will be forbidden to stop unless the flag is down.

Sterilization Figures Show Virginia Is 2d

1,333 Operations Since 1924; California Lists 8,504.

Old Dominion Law First to Survive Test in Supreme Court.

By the Associated Press.

Virginia is listed by the American Legislators Association periodical, 'State Government' as second only to California in the number of sterilizations among those declared unfit for parentage.

The number in Virginia is given as 1,333 since the enactment in 1924 of the State's law allowing sterilization of persons declared by institutional authorities to be feeble-minded, insane and epileptic.

This figure in 'State Government' was pointed out by prominent Virginians in the National Capital, who recalled that the Old Dominion's statute was the first to stand constitutional and validity tests all the way through the Supreme Court of the United States, which upheld the State law in an opinion by Justice Holmes in the Buck versus Bell case of 1927.

Most of the sterilization laws passed prior to the Virginia act fell under "due process of law" attack, and since the Nation's highest court upheld the Virginia act, numerous State statutes have been patterned after it.

Recent Governors of the State have guarded closely the language of the law, and almost invariably have vetoed all attempts to amend it.

While Virginia trails California in the number of sterilizations, it was shown that in addition to those declared feeble-minded, insane and epileptic, California provides for sterilization of habitual criminals. The compilation of California cases shows 8,504 sterilizations. The California law was passed in 1913.

2 Choirs Feature Fete in Virginia

Singers From Other States Visit Harrisonburg.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., July 17.—One thousand voices—two choirs composed of singers from half a dozen States under the direction of Dr. John Finley Williamson, of the Westminster Choir School—will climax the fifth annual sacred music festival at the Massanetta Springs Bible Conference here Friday night.

The main chorus will sing from Vesper hill and will be echoed by a second group on another hill.

The choir personnel will include members from 30 church choirs and music groups trained by Dr. Williamson and his assistants in Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, North Carolina and the District of Columbia. Indications are that the sacred music festival will be attended by more than 5,000 persons.

10,000-Acre Homestead Asked by Committee

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., July 17.—A subsistence homestead project comprising approximately 10,000 acres in Harrison County, on which 500 or more families can be made self-supporting, is recommended in a resolution forwarded yesterday afternoon to the rural rehabilitation division of the State works progress administration at Charleston.

The recommendation was made by the housing and homestead development committee of the county branch of the Upper Monongahela Valley Association, recently formed at a meeting of ten interior county delegations here, and the resolution was drafted and approved by the county executive committee.

Joint Control Of Toll Bridge By States Urged

Martinsburg Chamber Is Also Working for Free Williamsport Span.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 17.—The Chamber of Commerce yesterday indorsed a plan for joint ownership by West Virginia and Maryland of the Williamsport (Md.) bridge over the Potomac, and efforts are being made to make it tool-free. They will send copies of their action to State Road Commissioner E. L. Bailey, for West Virginia, and Dr. H. E. Tabler for Maryland. Robert G. Coffman, chairman of the chamber road committee, and Lyle E. Haffer will be sent to confer with Maryland Road Commission officials if and when a conference can be arranged.

The chamber's executive committee action followed a report by Haffer, chairman of the Berkeley County bridge committee.

Haffer reported on several meetings held in Hagerstown, Md., to which civic and official groups were invited. These, he reported, are dominated by men who own considerable stock in the Williamsport bridge, and who blocked action to make the bridge toll-free. Washington County Court holds stock in the bridge, he reported, and this is a stumbling block to getting action through official circles.

Efforts have been carried on intermittently for years to make the Williamsport Bridge toll-free. The efforts culminated some months ago in a public meeting, stirred by truckers who object to paying the charges exacted for crossing the bridge. Since then Haffer, J. Nelson Hicks and others named at the public meeting have been seeking definite action. Gov. Harry Nice of Maryland spoke favorably of the proposal while here recently.

Gladys Girl Is Married.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lynchburg, Va., July 17.—Miss Rebecca Thomas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Thomas, of Gladys, was married here Saturday to Dennis M. Leary, jr., of Richmond.

By-Pass Route Hearing Is Held In Hagerstown

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 17.—Mayor I. M. Wertz and members of the city council tonight listened to arguments on construction of a by-pass of Route 40 through Hagerstown at a mass meeting held in the courthouse.

Opposition to the proposed route developed from two angles several weeks ago when Dr. Homer L. Tabler, chairman of the State Roads Commission, and other officials of the department announced plans.

The route would pass through the city park, cutting off a section of the lake, and would pass three blocks from the business section. The Hagerstown Garden Club and other civic organizations opposed to the proposed route on the grounds it would mar the beauty of the natural park and the lake and would result in a hazard for children who play in the park.

A group of business men have also opposed the re-routing of the by-pass out of the business section, contending that tourist trade would be diverted.

Proponents of the proposed by-pass contend that to eliminate three grade crossings at a minimum cost, it will be necessary to follow the route the commission proposes. They also fear Route 40 eventually will be diverted at Huyetts Crossroads and go by way of Williamsport, unless Hagerstown interests agree to the proposed by-pass.

Estate Sold at Auction.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, Md., July 17.—Maycroft, beautiful estate on St. Clements Bay, said to have cost its original owner $50,000, was sold at auction last week to Joseph Saunders, Washington banker.

Hart Guilty, Faces Chair For Murder

Execution Mandatory for Convict Who Killed Guard in Escape.

Defense Will Appeal; Mother Prays After Hearing Verdict.

By the Associated Press.

Gate City, Va., July 17.—Thomas Cole Hart today received a death sentence for the murder of Alton Leonard at the conclusion of a trial under a Virginia statute making capital punishment mandatory for a convict who kills a guard during an escape.

Hart was accused of striking Leonard a fatal blow with an iron pin as the defendant led two other prisoners in a break from a road gang near here September 15, 1932.

The jury deliberated about 45 minutes before reaching a decision, which was signed by C. H. Neely, foreman.

H. E. Hart, the convicted man's brother, has announced he would carry the case to the United States Supreme Court, of necessary, to test the constitutionality of the law governing the escape killing.

It was the first death sentence meted out in Scott County since the electric chair supplanted the gallows as Virginia's method of execution.

Hart's aged mother, grief-stricken at hearing the verdict, uttered a prayer in the courtroom. She soon regained her composure under the ministrations of her three sons, the defendant and H. E. and Bill Hart, who have all been present since the case opened here Monday.

The convicted man accepted the verdict without any outward show of emotion except to waver slightly as his mother gripped his hand during the reading of the decision. His two brothers were calm.

Defense Attorney S. H. Bond immediately entered a motion for an appeal.

County Having Trouble Naming Welfare Board

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 17.—The board of county commissioners is having difficulty in selecting a new welfare board to take over relief activities.

The board has been unable to contact a number of the 12 recommended to it by the State Board of Aid and Charities Monday, while it is reported that several have declined to serve. The personnel will not be announced until all members have been named. The county board will be represented on the welfare board by Commissioner John Ankeney.

Delegates Leave Today.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Roanoke, Va., July 17.—Delegates from the Roanoke and Vinton Lions Clubs will leave tomorrow to attend the annual convention of Lions International in Mexico City, July 23 to 26. Delegates are Dr. E. G. Gill, director of Lions International; W. C. Ikenberry, president of the local club, and Harry Wade, of the Vinton Club and State secretary of Lions.

Conductors Set Meeting.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Roanoke, Va., July 17.—The Conductors' Annual Meeting Association of America will meet here August 26 to 28. The association was organized on the Norfolk & Western Railway in 1914, lapsed in 1917, but was reorganized on a national scale in 1923. A special train will be operated over the N. & W. August 28, to the Grand Caverns of Virginia.

Potato Strike Eased; Roads Still Picketed

Maryland Growers for Action Independent of Virginians.

By the Associated Press.

Pocomoke City, Md., July 17.—Movement of potatoes from Maryland's Eastern Shore picked up slightly today as the general tenor of indecision among growers eased somewhat.

Pickets were stationed on highways again to see that the $1.60 per barrel price was maintained but there was no trouble and police said none was anticipated. The $1.60 price was set after farmers had clung to a $2.10 figure for weeks with the result that potato shipments were virtually unknown.

Yesterday's shipments, according to reports received here, totaled 53 car loads from Maryland and 174 from Virginia. Today's shipments were expected to exceed those figures.

Growers met in executive session at Snow Hill, Md., last night and decided to continue the program. It was understood, however, that some Worcester County growers favored action independent of that taken in Virginia where the "strike" was started.

Price Rise Reflects Eastern Shore Strike

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 17.—Reflecting the embargo effected by growers in their determination to force prices higher, Eastern Shore cobblers rose from $1.05 to $1.44 per 100 pounds on the New York market during early July, the United States Department of Agriculture reported today.

The statement, emanating from the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, sounded the optimistic note that "some advance in price may be expected during the next few weeks."

Virginia's total crop this year will amount to 11,000,000 bushels, or 17 per cent less than last season and 23 per cent below average, the bureau predicted. The United States total was estimated at 295,000,000 bushels, as compared with 312,000,000 in 1934.

FERA Silent on Plans For Buying Surplus

By the Associated Press.

Officials of the Federal Relief Administration said yesterday that the Administration policy forbade announcement of how much money would be spent, or when it would start buying surplus potatoes on the Eastern Shore of Virginia.

Representative Bland (Democrat), Virginia, was informed that SFRA, under its Surplus Relief Corporation, would purchase a part of the Eastern Shore crop this year in an effort to boost prices for the potatoes which were down as low as $1.25 a barrel when growers went on a digging strike.

Bland said he had not been informed when the buying would begin, and FERA officials said that the policy of withholding prices and dates in its surplus buying was laid down because the market was affected when this was done.

Child, 2, Near Death After Taking Tablets

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., July 17.—Rachael Mustain, 2-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Mustain, was near death tonight after eating a quantity of headache tablets she found while playing.

The infant was found with the bottle in the crib. Her recovery was viewed as unlikely at a hospital.

Cuban Diplomat Dies In Norfolk Hospital

Norfolk, Va., July 17 (AP).—Salvador Arduin, 57, Cuban consul at Norfolk, died at a local hospital today as a result of a heart attack. He had been suffering from heart trouble for some time and was taken to the hospital earlier in the morning for treatment.

For the last 33 years Consul Arduin had been a consular representative of Cuba, serving in many localities. He came to Norfolk from Havana.

Lynchburg Girl Is Wed.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lynchburg, Va., July 17.—Miss Ruth Hortense Frazier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Frazier, was married Monday to Charlie Wilson Hamilton by the Rev. P. T. Harman, pastor of West Lynchburg Baptist Church. Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton will live here after a bridal trip.

Chiropodists to Convene.

Frederick, July 17 (AP).—Chiropodists from Maryland, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia will attend a convention here September 14 and 15. The meeting is under auspicies of the Maryland Pedic Association, a branch of the National Association of Chiropodists.

Indian Chief's Arrest Ordered In Drowning of Virginia Girl

By the Associated Press.

West Point, Va., July 17.—Chief Paul Miles, of the Pamunkey Indian tribe, will be given a hearing before Trial Justice F. W. Smith at King William Courthouse July 24 on a charge of involuntary manslaughter in connection with the drowning July 4 of Doris Virginia Melton, Richmond high school girl, county officials said today.

A warrant for Chief Miles was sworn out today on order of Commonwealth's Attorney David Nelson Sutton on complaint of the girl's mother, Mrs. Lewis B. Melton.

Miss Melton drowned in the Pamunkey River when she fell or was pushed from a boat in which she was riding with two other girls. Chief Miles was rowing.

The girl's companions, Margaret Martin, of Cold Harbor, and Charlotte Allen, of Richmond, said Miles made no effort to rescue the drowning girl. This is not a violation of the law. Officers said the Indian offered as an excuse that he was afraid of cramps.

The investigation has been ordered, authorities indicated, to determine how the 15-year-old girl happened to get out of the boat. One officer said "she either was assisted or was pushed out."

The three girls went boating while on a picnic with their families near White House, obtaining the boat from the Indians and hiring Miles to row. He attempted to show the girls how to row shortly before Miss Melton drowned, it was reported.

Slippery Prisoner Cuts Grass in Irons

By the Associated Press.

Hagerstown, Md., July 17.—Horine Welch is cutting grass and wearing leg irons while doing the work.

Welch, who is 49, but who gave no address, escaped from the "city weed gang" on May 24 while serving a ten-day sentence. The "weed gang" is composed of short-term prisoners who are employed cutting grass.

Welch was recaptured yesterday. Police took no chances on his leaving the grass uncut again. They put him in leg irons.

Bier Appointed Fruit Inspector For Virginia

M. A. Hubbard to Supervise Enforcement Under New Set-up.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 17.—Robert Bier, a Federal employe, has been named supervisor of the inspection of fruit and vegetables in Virginia, and M. A. Hubbard has been appointed supervisor of enforcement, the State Department of Agriculture announced today.

Bier and Hubbard will work in cooperation under the general direction of J. H. Meek, market director of the department. Meek said Bier was one of the most experienced supervisors in the United States, and Hubbard, a V. P. I. graduate, had had much experience in Virginia and other States.

This arrangement, it was understood, was designed to end the dissatisfaction of a group of Virginia orchardists under the leadership of W. S. Campfield with the State apple inspection service. A delegation urged Meek's dismissal last winter, but he was exonerated by the commission.

Meek said the appointment of Bier was in no sense a surrender to the fruit growers. Though the actual inspection will be under Federal supervision, he said, the State will enforce the grading standards set by inspectors.

Rites for Moore, Hotel Head, Today

By the Associated Press.

Staunton, Va., July 17.—Funeral services for A. T. Moore, hotel executive, who was killed last night in an automobile collision on the Lee highway, will be held at 4 p. m. tomorrow at Silverbrooks, the home of Mrs. J. Frank Clemmer, his mother-in-law, near Middlebrook.

The services will be conducted by the Rev. Dr. Hunter B. Blakely, of the First Presbyterian Church, of which Mr. Moore had been a member since coming to Staunton. Dr. Blakely will be assisted by the Rev. Dr. John J. Gravatt and the Rev. J. Lewis Gibbs.

Burial will be in Thornrose Cemetery.

Airport Group Named.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., July 17.—A commission intended to make recommendations or suggestions as to the proper management of the Cumberland Airport at Mexico Farms was appointed by the city council. The commission consists of City Engineer Henry W. Schaidt, William J. Johnson and F. Allan Weatherholt. They will serve without pay.

Virginia Lists 7 More Cases Of Paralysis

Increase Falls Below Daily Average Last Week; 1 Death Reported.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 17.—Virginia's reported cases of infantile paralysis continued to increase today, but the seven new cases were below last week's daily average for the second successive day.

Four cases were recorded by the State Health Department and three reported to Richmond city authorities late today had not been included in the State figures. These reports ran the State's total since June 1 to 134, of which 82 have been recorded since July 1.

The four cases registered with the State Health Department were from Albermarle County, 2; Charlotte County, 1, and Prince Edward County, 1.

One death from the disease was reported today, that of Mattie Bates, Negro woman, of Cismont, Albemarle County.

The State Health Department report for the week ended July 13 showed 250 cases of diarrhea and dysentery, an increase of 55 over the previous week. Seventeen cases of typhoid were reported, as against 11 for the preceding week.

Marylanders to Get AAA Wheat Bonus

Benefits to Be Paid Despite Court Ruling on Tax.

The bulk of the $946,000 due the Maryland wheat farmers will be paid, in spite of the ruling of a Federal Court ruling in Massachusetts that the Agricultural Adjustment Administration processing tax is illegally collected, it was learned yesterday.

The first payment of 20 cents a bushel is ready to be paid, according to A. H. Snyder, of the University of Maryland Extension Service. The remaining 13 cents a bushel is scheduled for payment by January 1.

If the Supreme Court upholds the lower Federal court in declaring the tax unconstitutional, the remaining 13-cent payment is problematical, it was said.

Red Men to Meet.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., July 17.—A district meeting of the Improved Order of Red Men, in which Tonkaway and Kiowa tribes of Cumberland; Tioga, of Midland, and Black Hawk, of Westernport, will participate, will be held at Westernport Saturday. Black Hawk Tribe, No. 131, will be the host. John W. Walker, Baltimore, great keeper of records, will speak. Charles H. Schaab, Cumberland, captain of District No. 16, will preside.

One-Armed Woman's Shotgun Ends Ax-Man's Reign of Terror

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 17.—A one-armed former woman trap shooter armed with a shotgun today brought an end to a reign of terror by a 60-year-old farm laborer who threatened his two sisters with an ax, burned a barn and set fire to two dwellings.

Howard L. Young, the laborer, was severely wounded about the head by a charge fired from the shotgun and was captured unarmed by police as firemen extinguished the blazes in the dwellings on the farm of his sisters near Walker, Baltimore County. Young lived with his sisters.

The two sisters, Mrs. D. F. Martin, 66, and Mrs. Rosie Williams, 65, reported to Baltimore County police that they were awakened early this morning by a fire in the nearby barn.

Mrs. Martin ran to the first floor of their home and found that the kitchen was in flames. She said she was accosted by Young, who chased her from the house with an ax.

Her screams awoke Miss Mildred Wilson, their niece, who ran downstairs and found Young pouring kerosene on the floor of another room. Young raised his ax and Miss Wilson ran to another room for a shotgun.

She fired three times at Young, the third shot tearing his cap from his head and wounding him.

The sisters told police Young had been away from home for years, but came back three months ago.

Flag Signals Will Speed Phone Messages to Cruising Officers.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 17. — A system enabling Maryland State police to block all the 39 main roads leading in or out of Maryland within an hour is being worked out by the headquarters here, it was said yesterday at the office of Maj. J. Purdon Wright, superintendent of the force.

The system will make it necessary to transfer some of the men now stationed in small towns, but it will not be necessary to move any of the sub-stations. In cases where criminals are reported to be heading toward the Maryland boundaries, or where a crime has been committed in the State and it is thought that the culprits will try to leave the State, the roads can be blocked within 60 minutes from the time the alarm is received.

Applies to Busy Highways.

Only heavily-traveled highways can be watched, however, as there are not enough men to cover secondary roads which cross the State lines.

Another arrangement being made by the State police headquarters will make it possible to reach patrolmen more quickly by telephone. The Maryland Penitentiary is making 200 yellow flags, bearing the State police insignia, which will be furnished to garages, filling stations and other establishments which are open 24 hours a day.

Flag System Devised.

When headquarters wants to reach a certain patrolman, who is on the road, they may phone the establishment with the flag. The flag, which will ordinarily be kept flying, will be lowered. As the State policeman passes, he will see, by the absence of the flag, that he is wanted and can phone his headquarters. This will save the time now consumed in stopping to ask for phone calls. The men will be forbidden to stop unless the flag is down.

Sterilization Figures Show Virginia Is 2d

1,333 Operations Since 1924; California Lists 8,504.

Old Dominion Law First to Survive Test in Supreme Court.

By the Associated Press.

Virginia is listed by the American Legislators Association periodical, 'State Government' as second only to California in the number of sterilizations among those declared unfit for parentage.

The number in Virginia is given as 1,333 since the enactment in 1924 of the State's law allowing sterilization of persons declared by institutional authorities to be feeble-minded, insane and epileptic.

This figure in 'State Government' was pointed out by prominent Virginians in the National Capital, who recalled that the Old Dominion's statute was the first to stand constitutional and validity tests all the way through the Supreme Court of the United States, which upheld the State law in an opinion by Justice Holmes in the Buck versus Bell case of 1927.

Most of the sterilization laws passed prior to the Virginia act fell under "due process of law" attack, and since the Nation's highest court upheld the Virginia act, numerous State statutes have been patterned after it.

Recent Governors of the State have guarded closely the language of the law, and almost invariably have vetoed all attempts to amend it.

While Virginia trails California in the number of sterilizations, it was shown that in addition to those declared feeble-minded, insane and epileptic, California provides for sterilization of habitual criminals. The compilation of California cases shows 8,504 sterilizations. The California law was passed in 1913.

2 Choirs Feature Fete in Virginia

Singers From Other States Visit Harrisonburg.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., July 17.—One thousand voices—two choirs composed of singers from half a dozen States under the direction of Dr. John Finley Williamson, of the Westminster Choir School—will climax the fifth annual sacred music festival at the Massanetta Springs Bible Conference here Friday night.

The main chorus will sing from Vesper hill and will be echoed by a second group on another hill.

The choir personnel will include members from 30 church choirs and music groups trained by Dr. Williamson and his assistants in Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, North Carolina and the District of Columbia. Indications are that the sacred music festival will be attended by more than 5,000 persons.

10,000-Acre Homestead Asked by Committee

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., July 17.—A subsistence homestead project comprising approximately 10,000 acres in Harrison County, on which 500 or more families can be made self-supporting, is recommended in a resolution forwarded yesterday afternoon to the rural rehabilitation division of the State works progress administration at Charleston.

The recommendation was made by the housing and homestead development committee of the county branch of the Upper Monongahela Valley Association, recently formed at a meeting of ten interior county delegations here, and the resolution was drafted and approved by the county executive committee.

Joint Control Of Toll Bridge By States Urged

Martinsburg Chamber Is Also Working for Free Williamsport Span.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 17.—The Chamber of Commerce yesterday indorsed a plan for joint ownership by West Virginia and Maryland of the Williamsport (Md.) bridge over the Potomac, and efforts are being made to make it toll-free. They will send copies of their action to State Road Commissioner E. L. Bailey, for West Virginia, and Dr. H. E. Tabler for Maryland. Robert G. Coffman, chairman of the chamber road committee, and Lyle E. Haffer will be sent to confer with Maryland Road Commission officials if and when a conference can be arranged.

The chamber's executive committee action followed a report by Haffer, chairman of the Berkeley County bridge committee.

Haffer reported on several meetings held in Hagerstown, Md., to which civic and official groups were invited. These, he reported, are dominated by men who own considerable stock in the Williamsport bridge, and who blocked action to make the bridge toll-free. Washington County Court holds stock in the bridge, he reported, and this is a stumbling block to getting action through official circles.

Efforts have been carried on intermittently for years to make the Williamsport Bridge toll-free. The efforts culminated some months ago in a public meeting, stirred by truckers who object to paying the charges exacted for crossing the bridge. Since then Haffer, J. Nelson Hicks and others named at the public meeting have been seeking definite action. Gov. Harry Nice of Maryland spoke favorably of the proposal while here recently.

Gladys Girl Is Married.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lynchburg, Va., July 17.—Miss Rebecca Thomas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Thomas, of Gladys, was married here Saturday to Dennis M. Leary, jr., of Richmond.

By-Pass Route Hearing Is Held In Hagerstown

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 17.—Mayor I. M. Wertz and members of the city council tonight listened to arguments on construction of a by-pass of Route 40 through Hagerstown at a mass meeting held in the courthouse.

Opposition to the proposed route developed from two angles several weeks ago when Dr. Homer L. Tabler, chairman of the State Roads Commission, and other officials of the department announced plans.

The route would pass through the city park, cutting off a section of the lake, and would pass three blocks from the business section. The Hagerstown Garden Club and other civic organizations opposed to the proposed route on the grounds it would mar the beauty of the natural park and the lake and would result in a hazard for children who play in the park.

A group of business men have also opposed the re-routing of the by-pass out of the business section, contending that tourist trade would be diverted.

Proponents of the proposed by-pass contend that to eliminate three grade crossings at a minimum cost, it will be necessary to follow the route the commission proposes. They also fear Route 40 eventually will be diverted at Huyetts Crossroads and go by way of Williamsport, unless Hagerstown interests agree to the proposed by-pass.

Estate Sold at Auction.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, Md., July 17.—Maycroft, beautiful estate on St. Clements Bay, said to have cost its original owner $50,000, was sold at auction last week to Joseph Saunders, Washington banker.

Hart Guilty, Faces Chair For Murder

Execution Mandatory for Convict Who Killed Guard in Escape.

Defense Will Appeal; Mother Prays After Hearing Verdict.

By the Associated Press.

Gate City, Va., July 17.—Thomas Cole Hart today received a death sentence for the murder of Alton Leonard at the conclusion of a trial under a Virginia statute making capital punishment mandatory for a convict who kills a guard during an escape.

Hart was accused of striking Leonard a fatal blow with an iron pin as the defendant led two other prisoners in a break from a road gang near here September 15, 1932.

The jury deliberated about 45 minutes before reaching a decision, which was signed by C. H. Neely, foreman.

H. E. Hart, the convicted man's brother, has announced he would carry the case to the United States Supreme Court, of necessary, to test the constitutionality of the law governing the escape killing.

It was the first death sentence meted out in Scott County since the electric chair supplanted the gallows as Virginia's method of execution.

Hart's aged mother, grief-stricken at hearing the verdict, uttered a prayer in the courtroom. She soon regained her composure under the ministrations of her three sons, the defendant and H. E. and Bill Hart, who have all been present since the case opened here Monday.

The convicted man accepted the verdict without any outward show of emotion except to waver slightly as his mother gripped his hand during the reading of the decision. His two brothers were calm.

Defense Attorney S. H. Bond immediately entered a motion for an appeal.

County Having Trouble Naming Welfare Board

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 17.—The board of county commissioners is having difficulty in selecting a new welfare board to take over relief activities.

The board has been unable to contact a number of the 12 recommended to it by the State Board of Aid and Charities Monday, while it is reported that several have declined to serve. The personnel will not be announced until all members have been named. The county board will be represented on the welfare board by Commissioner John Ankeney.

Delegates Leave Today.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Roanoke, Va., July 17.—Delegates from the Roanoke and Vinton Lions Clubs will leave tomorrow to attend the annual convention of Lions International in Mexico City, July 23 to 26. Delegates are Dr. E. G. Gill, director of Lions International; W. C. Ikenberry, president of the local club, and Harry Wade, of the Vinton Club and State secretary of Lions.

Conductors Set Meeting.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Roanoke, Va., July 17.—The Conductors' Annual Meeting Association of America will meet here August 26 to 28. The association was organized on the Norfolk & Western Railway in 1914, lapsed in 1917, but was reorganized on a national scale in 1923. A special train will be operated over the N. & W. August 28, to the Grand Caverns of Virginia.

Genuine Mystery Is Provided in "College Scandal," a Fine Film Guessing Game

Breezy Comedy Goes Taut for Closing Punch

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

Those with the gift of deductive reasoning will find a fair outlet for their talent in "College Scandal," the murder mystery with a campus background, when it comes to the screen at the Earle Theater on Friday.

The current incumbents of the local drama desks were put to the test yesterday afternoon—as predicted in this space yesterday morning—when the picture was previewed in the graciously air-cooled projection room in the Earle Theater Building, and batted out a Sherlockian average a little less than the size of your hat!

Of course, orderly processes of reasoning are of no avail in cases of this kind. The authors of these screen guessing games direct all of their tangible evidence against the innocent and then, to make it more intricate, in the last minute of action contrive an entirely new set of clues that pin the crime unequivocally on the only person in the cast who, up to then, could not possibly have committed it.

This is the way it is with "College Scandal." So up to the last minute of play, in any endeavor to solve this puzzling case of two campus murders and an attempted third, any logical process of deduction might as well be tossed into the ashcan.

"Quick, Watson, the Needle!"

Some of the boys and girls sitting in on yesterday's fascinating and futile sleuthing—ratiocination is the word Mr. Whitney, this department's scientific young Greek, has for it—wise to the ways of the cinema, operated on the theory that the only member of the cast who could not have been guilty must have been the culprit, and by such specious "detecting" got the correct answer. One took two cracks at it, and missed both times, and two, guided only by the evidence adduced up to the moment the running of the film was stopped—for the express purpose of exposing the critics' incapacity in such things—were completely and abysmally wrong. So there you are.

All of which only goes to show that, as comparatively plaind lothes men and needle-in-the-haystack-hunter-outers, we of the drama desks still are pretty swell horseshoe pitchers and mumblety-peg players. If there is any ballm in Gilead, it is that you won't do any better.

This shrewdly devised quality of bafflement, however, is not the only aspect of the picture's worth that ought to make it click at the box-office. There is a youthful spontaneity about the whole thing that is rather engaging, even if, at times, both the dialogue and the humor are strained almost to the breaking point to achieve an effect that is defeated rather than promoted by too obvious striving.

Dialogue Not So Hot!

There are some very terrible lines written into scenes of preparation for the presentation of a college musical comedy that are measurably redeemed by a catchy tune or two and some agile hoofing by Wendy Barrie and Eddie Nugent.

It is only during these purely collegiate goings-on, as a matter of fact, that "College Scandal" staggers about a bit. The last half of the picture, while it still more or less preserves the cinema-college atmosphere, goes in principally for the solution of the murders that have been committed and compounds a proportionately higher degree of suspense and dramatic interest.

There are some effective performances turned in by both the younger and more mature members of the cast, the most convincing, perhaps, being that of a bedridden mother, by Mary Nash, a sterling actress full of experience and years, who makes the single error of wearing a too-heavy makeup in the closeup shots. Her ultimate fate is slightly unpleasant to contemplate, everything considered.

More of this in Saturday morning's formal review. I hope no one betrays the plot to the prospective customers in the meantime.

It is Estelle Wentworth, Washington operatic star and voice coach, who is at the other end of the wire when the phone rings to say that Tom Moore is reserving dates in October for the presentation of condensed versions of two of the Savoyard operas on the stage of the Rialto Theater as companion attraction to two major film features.

Miss Wentworth's operatic group will fill the minor roles and chorus parts in support of guest stars of the first rank to be brought down from New York—singers thoroughly schooled and experienced in the Gilbert and Sullivan works.

The two operas to be thus adapted to the uses of a picture house have not as yet been decided upon. It is probable that decision will be left to the public following broadcasts of a considerable number of abbreviated Gilbert and Sullivan operettas. This all dovetails nicely with Mr. Moore's plans, as personally outlined to this desk, for new utilizations of standard works, merging the best qualities of stage, screen and radio. More detailed announcement will be made in due course, so Miss Wentworth confides.

Stars of the Big Show!

The masters of ceremonies and principals in a number of specially written skits for the third annual all-Washington revue, "Going Native," to be staged at Loew's Fox Theater next month, will be representatives of the National Broadcasting Co.'s and the Columbia Broadcasting System's Washington outlets, according to announcement made last night by Publicist Lou Brown on behalf of Division Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's, Inc., and Gene Ford, manager of the Fox, in charge of the home-town entertainment.

These will be Larry Elliott, presidential announcer for Columbia's Station WJSV in Washington, who, with Warren Sweeney, has had the temerity also to put your reporter on the air Wednesday mornings for a couple of winters now; Arthur Reilly, news commentator over National's Station WRC and announcer of the United States Marine Band programs, and Horace and Polly Hunnicutt, who have been heard in the "Salt Water Sweethearts," "Doctor of the Blues" and "The Getter-Upper" programs over the NBC local stations.

On to the Big Time.

This arrangement strikes a new note in the presentation of the "Going Native" revue by relieving any single master of ceremonies of the full responsibility of putting the show on and keeping it moving—almost an impossible task for one person, stage routines being what they necessarily are in an enterprise of this kind.

It will be recalled that Brook Johns was m. c. for the first all-Washington revue at the Fox two years ago, with Arthur Godfrey in the same capacity last year. This year, the exacting duties of mainspringing the show will be tossed around among the Messrs. Elliott and Reilly and Mr. and Mrs. Hunnicutt, thus making it appreciably easier for each of them and affording a greater variety of method and personality for the audience.

The complete list of principles selected for the revue will be made public within the next day or two. Possibly today. So watch this space closely—both of you.

Frances Starr, in private life Mrs. R. Golden Donaldson, of this city, opened in a new play by Robert and Sally Wilder in the New Rochelle Playhouse, New Rochelle, N. Y., last night. The title of the new piece, put on for the first time, is "Stardust." Miss Starr's first stellar vehicle under the management of David Belasco, "The Rose of the Rancho," is being made into a musical screen subject to serve as the initial starring vehicle of Gladys Swarthout, of the Metropolitan Grand Opera Co., whose likeness appeared on this page yesterday. Or should it be referred to as Miss Swarthout's initial starring vehicle?

That Man's Here Again!

Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran of the National Theater is back in town full of chivalry, suntan and Jersey hospitality.

There were some who had begun to suspect that Mr. Cochran had hibernated for the summer in some dark hole and pulled the hole in after him, but it seems that he has been on a semivacation with an empty fountain pen one hour out of New York, at Fairhaven, N. J., where a great many show people acquire their sunburn. Or maybe that pen wasn't empty. At any rate, it was not filled with ink!

However, Mr. Cochran explains the "semi" part of his vacation by stating that at least half of his time has been devoted to the agreeable task of assembling a route for the forthcoming tour, under his management, of Ethel Barrymore in a revival of W. Somerset Maugham's "The Constant Wife," which she did here so successfully in May.

The tour will get under way at Princeton, N. J., on Monday, September 30, then proceed through the South and Middle West, ending in the East in the spring. Miss Barrymore, who has a warm spot in her heart for Washington, probably will appear as guest star with the National Theater Players in their next spring and summer season in a revival of several of her former successes and possibly a new play or two.

New Season's Outlook.

Master Cochran also goes to some pains—it evidently is a painful subject to him after all these repetitions—to spike the recurrent rumor that he is to sever his connection with the National Theater. When Miss Barrymore's tour is safely launched, he will devote his entire attention, as he has in the past, to the conduct of Washington's foremost temple of the living drama, where he began his career in the theater as a program boy 30 years ago, in 1905.

Speaking of the National's new season, as practically everybody will be sooner or later, it will open rather earlier than usual this year. According to present plans, the opening gun will be fired about the middle of September.

Among the attractions booked for early presentation are Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne in the Theater Guild's production of Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew," which will be the first of the American Theater Society's subscription offerings; Eddie Dowling and his musical revue, "Thumbs Up;" the Warner Brothers' picturization of Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," produced under the personal supervision of Max Reinhardt, and Philip Merivale and Gladys Cooper in "Othello."

Nice going, Mr. Panjandrum, nice going.

Incidentally, and of interest to his many friends in the National Capital, that eminent avant courier, bon vivant and globe-trotter, Mr. Charles Warren McClintock, who served as advance publicity man for Miss Barrymore during her original tour in "The Constant Wife," once more will be her representative "ahead of the show" next season, with Tommy Bodkin, acting as her personal company manager "back." This, I may say, is not the "Odds Bodkin" you have heard so much about. Probably just one of the Jones boys!

Fanfare and Drums!

Big time vaudeville acts, radio "names" and famous "bands" are scheduled for early appearance on the stage of Loew's Fox Theater, according to announcement just made by Division Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's, Inc.

Among the outstanding name bands coming in are Don Bestor and His Orchestra, already well known to Washington music lovers by virtue of his original local engagement at the Rialto Theater some years ago and his repeat visit to the Capital last fall. Dial-twisters, of course, can hear him any time.

Others, whose names are familiar in one field of amusement or another, include Ben Blue, screen comedian; Billy House and Co., "Sharley" Cliff Hall, famous stooge for Jack Pearl, on the air; Sid Marion, the Saxon Sisters and Sid Gary.

Identification Card.

Reverting momentarily to Miss Barrymore's company manager next season, if you don't want to bother about his full name, you can just call him Bodkin, that's awl!

Arts Club

Offering a varied program of plays and dramatic readings, the Arts Club of Washington last evening held another of its informal entertainments in the club's garden.

The program was opened with Lidia Larrimore's "Toast and Tea," with Ruth Dabroe, Dorothy Simpson, Ella Stowell, Elizabeth Finn, Louise Mayo, Daphne Anderson, Gertrude Goodman and Mae Williams playing the several roles in this mild satire on feminine popularity and the social amenities.

"The Proud Lady," a knight-and-the-lady-fair story in rhyme, was read by its author, the youthful Meriam Truesdell, whose works are not unknown to the readers of this journal.

The Bard Included.

Robert Browning's "A Tale" was effectively interpreted by Louise Mayo.

As Catherine, Hester Walker Beall excellently read the Queen of England's excoriation in the trial scene from Shakespeare's "Henry VIII." Maurice Jarvis was seen as Cardinal Woolsey, and Elizabeth Cassell as the page. Despite the modern dress, the scene was powerfully played.

Returns to the American Screen

Fresh from triumphs in England, on both the stage and screen, Lillian Bond's beauty once again is to illumine the American silver sheet, when she appears in Irving Thalberg's production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer of "China Seas." In this exciting subject, Miss Bond, slightly more mature than on her last appearance in this country, will be in fast company, so to speak. The stellar trio in "China Seas" is composed of Clark Gable, Wallace Beery and Jean Harlow. All three are said to be perfectly cast.

Orchardists Urge Pest Control Fund

200 Growers Attend Meeting at Hagerstown.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 17.—An increase in Federal and State allotments for Japanese beetle control was asked in a resolution passed at the summer meeting of the Maryland State Horticultural Society yesterday at Smithsburg. Two hundred fruit growers from all sections of the State attended.

A tour of orchards was made in the morning and a business session was held in the afternoon following lunch at the Gardenhour packing shed.

Orchardists were welcomed by Mayor I. M. Wertz of Hagerstown. Among the subjects discussed were the advertising of apples as a means of developing a better market, spray methods, codling moth control, removal of spray residue from fruit and biennial bearing of apples.

The Women's Community Club of Smithsburg served lunch. The meeting was in charge of A. F. Vierheller, secretary of the society. Fulton Allen, Salisbury, Md., president of the society, attended.

Candidate for Sheriff.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., July 17.—Howard S. Honodel, of Washington Township, today announced his candidacy for sheriff of Franklin County on the Democratic ticket. Honodel's name will come before voters at the primary in September.

Watching Them Make Pictures

Hollywood, July 17.

JOHNNY WEISSMULLER is giving his Tarzan yell again, and has returned to the Metro jungle in the flicker called "Tarzan Returns." It is a fairly authentic jungle, if you wish to take the word of this writer, who has never been in a jungle and doesn't intend to visit one. This studio jungle is genuine enough for me.

It is a vast layout to the rear of the main studio. Bordering on the fringe of the jungle is the Metro Zoo. Here they have the lions, tigers, hippopotami, etc., in cages which don't appear too strong. Entering the jungle there are a number of trees, and then a tall, rugged studio-made series of cliffs. It is a good tumble from the top. There were a number of savages with white paint streaked across their faces, and they were fierce enough to scare me, until I saw Slickum, the Metro bootblack, who has charge of this section of the talent.

And there, sitting on a rock with two large bath towels, one white and one blue, wrapped about him, is Johnny Weissmuller—Tarzan himself. Johnny, strong and bronzed, looks to be in condition to face any danger that Maureen O'Sullivan may get into. He even looks strong enough to subdue Lupe.

Then comes the order from Director James McKay, and Weissmuller mounts to the topmost peak of the cliffs. The camera is ready to turn. Johnny tosses off the white and blue towels and stands there displayin' his physique.

THERE is a lagoon beneath the cliffs, and it is in this water that Weissmuller will go swimming and compete with a hippopotamus, alligators and other animals. Of course, Johnny will be protected from these animals, who don't fully realize that they are play acting.

However, there is a certain amount of danger even with the wire netting protection, which is supposed to keep the alligators in their sector of the lagoon. Weissmuller told of an incident which happened the other day. An alligator managed to get into that section of the lagoon reserved for Johnny. Now Weissmuller was once the fatest swimmer of them all, and many of his records still stand, although a few of the new swimmers have topped some of his marks. But no swimmer could have beaten Weissmuller when he discovered himself in the same water with an alligator. They tell me it was like watching a streak of lightning flash on the water and disappear. Weissmuller insists that he broke all his records making for shore.

To return to civilization, if Broadway can be called that. A gorgeous night club roof, with the lights of New York twinkling in the background, has been erected on a sound stage for a big musical number in "The Broadway Melody." One of the hits of this musical will be Frances Langford singing "Broadway Rhythm."

In this musical, the country girl, played by Eleanor Powell, gets a chance on Broadway and makes good overnight. For the past three weeks, Director Roy Del Ruth has been filming the sequences in which Miss Powell makes good overnight.

• • • •

THE Marx lads are hard at "A Night at the Opera." This particular sequence is the filming of the Metropolitan Opera House orchestra playing an overture. Director Sam Wood gives the signal, the orchestra leader raise his baton and the musicians start playing. Two of the musicians in this orchestra are Chico and Harpo. The music no sooner begins than Chico and Harpo stand and toss a baseball to each other. The orchestra forgets the classical music and goes into "Let's Go Out to the Ball Game."

Harpo, oddly enough, plays a flute in the orchestra and not the harp. As Groucho remarked, "It was very difficult to keep Harpo from playing the harp in this scene." But Harpo sits next to the harpist, and it is the first time that a harp has been played correctly near Harpo.

In the large tank, an important set at the Paramount Studio, there has been built a battleship for the flicker, "Annapolis Farewell." It is this battleship which provides the big clamax of the picture, for it is blown up in target practice with Sir Guy Standing on board. Sir Guy, playing the role of a sea captain, is devoted to this warship. He doesn't realize the ship is being used as a target in a sham battle, and stands on board, alone, to give real battle. Director Al Hall gives the signal. The workmen dynamite this prop battleship in the tank, and Sir Guy Standing sits next to Director Hall, watching himself being blown up with the ship.

Postmastership Sought For James C. Shriver

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., July 17.—The Democratic State central committee of Alleghany County has announced support of James C. Shriver for postmaster here. The recommendation was forwarded to Representative David J. Lewis after a conference attended by John P. Schellhaus, chairman; John J. Meyers, jr., secretary; Mrs. Joseph F. Barnett, Harold Powell, Bernard Hughes, of Frostburg, and Michael O'Laughlin, of Westernport.

The committee also recommended that Frank Wilson be appointed acting postmaster in Flintstone. Dennis Bennett, postmaster, will be asked to resign, committee members said.

$316,426 in Taxes Due.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chambersburg, Pa., July 17.—Outstanding taxes of $316,426.61 were reported yesterday by County Treasurer J. H. Linn in a quarterly statement of Franklin County finances. Tax collections during the period totaled $61,703.35.

New Chain Letter Scheme Is Foiled

Norfolk Fines 2 Men, Bans 'Copyrighted' Plan.

By the Associated Press.

Norfolk, Va., July 17.—An attempt to revive the chain letter scheme—this time by a plan purported to be "copyrighted"—was scotched here today with the fining of two men from Memphis, Tenn.

The defendants, Lloyd Edwards, 33, and Ben Jack Hilburn, 20, who were arrested several days ago as operators of the "Benevolent Bureau of America," were given the minimum fine of $25 by a police court justice on condition they close their office and leave the city.

Justice Spindle ruled the scheme, almost identical with the chain letter systems, was a violation of the lottery ordinance of Norfolk.

Evelyn Goss Married.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Western Port, Md., July 17.—William Andrew Allen, Baltimore group leader at the CCC camp at Swallow Falls, Md., and Miss Evelyn Goss, Mountain Lake Park, Md., were married Sunday at the parsonage of the Church of the Brethren here. The Rev. Newton D. Cosner officiated. They will reside at Mountain Lake Park.

Breezy Comedy Goes Taut for Closing Punch

By Nelson B. Bell.

Those with the gift of deductive reasoning will find a fair outlet for their talent in "College Scandal," the murder mystery with a campus background, when it comes to the screen at the Earle Theater on Friday.

The current incumbents of the local drama desks were put to the test yesterday afternoon—as predicted in this space yesterday morning—when the picture was previewed in the graciously air-cooled projection room in the Earle Theater Building, and batted out a Sherlockian average a little less than the size of your hat!

Of course, orderly processes of reasoning are of no avail in cases of this kind. The authors of these screen guessing games direct all of their tangible evidence against the innocent and then, to make it more intricate, in the last minute of action contrive an entirely new set of clues that pin the crime unequivocally on the only person in the cast who, up to then, could not possibly have committed it.

This is the way it is with "College Scandal." So up to the last minute of play, in any endeavor to solve this puzzling case of two campus murders and an attempted third, any logical process of deduction might as well be tossed into the ashcan.

"Quick, Watson, the Needle!"

Some of the boys and girls sitting in on yesterday's fascinating and futile sleuthing—ratiocination is the word Mr. Whitney, this department's scientific young Greek, has for it—wise to the ways of the cinema, operated on the theory that the only member of the cast who could not have been guilty must have been the culprit, and by such specious "detecting" got the correct answer. One took two cracks at it, and missed both times, and two, guided only by the evidence adduced up to the moment the running of the film was stopped—for the express purpose of exposing the critics' incapacity in such things—were completely and abysmally wrong. So there you are.

All of which only goes to show that, as comparatively plain clothes men and needle-in-the-haystack-hunter-outers, we of the drama desks still are pretty swell horseshoe pitchers and mumbletypeg players. If there is any balm in Gilead, it is that you won't do any better.

This shrewdly devised quality of baffiement, however, is not the only aspect of the picture's worth that ought to make it click at the box-office. There is a youthful spontaneity about the whole thing that is rather engaging, even if, at times, both the dialogue and the humor are strained almost to the breaking point to achieve an effect that is defeated rather than promoted by too obvious striving.

Dialogue Not So Hot!

There are some very terrible lines written into scenes of preparation for the presentation of a college musical comedy that are measurably redeemed by a catchy tune or two and some agile hoofing by Wendy Barrie and Eddie Nugent.

It is only during these purely collegiate goings-on, as a matter of fact, that "College Scandal" staggers about a bit. The last half of the picture, while it still more or less preserves the cinema-college atmosphere, goes in principally for the solution of the murders that have been committed and compounds a proportionately higher degree of suspense and dramatic interest.

There are some effective performances turned in by both the younger and more mature members of the cast, the most convincing, perhaps, being that of a bedridden mother, by Mary Nash, a sterling actress full of experience and years, who makes the single error of wearing a too-heavy makeup in the closeup shots. Her ultimate fate is slightly unpleasant to contemplate, everything considered.

More of this in Saturday morning's formal review. I hope no one betrays the plot to the prospective customers in the meantime.

It is Estelle Wentworth, Washington operatic star and voice coach, who is at the other end of the wire when the phone rings to say that Tom Moore is reserving dates in October for the presentation of condensed versions of two of the Savoyard operas on the stage of the Rialto Theater as companion attraction to two major film features.

Miss Wentworth's operatic group will fill the minor roles and chorus parts in support of guest stars of the first rank to be brought down from New York—singers thoroughly schooled and experienced in the Gilbert and Sullivan works.

The two operas to be thus adapted to the uses of a picture house have not as yet been decided upon. It is probable that decision will be left to the public following broadcasts of a considerable number of abbreviated Gilbert and Sullivan operettas. This all dovetails nicely with Mr. Moore's plans, as personally outlined to this desk, for new utilizations of standard works, merging the best qualities of stage, screen and radio. More detailed announcement will be made in due course, so Miss Wentworth confides.

Stars of the Big Show!

The masters of ceremonies and principals in a number of specially written skits for the third annual all-Washington revue, "Going Native," to be staged at Loew's Fox Theater next month, will be representatives of the National Broadcasting Co.'s and the Columbia Broadcasting System's Washington outlets, according to announcement made last night by Publicist Lou Brown on behalf of Division Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's, Inc., and Gene Ford, manager of the Fox, in charge of the home-town entertainment.

These will be Larry Elliott, presidential announcer for Columbia's Station WJSV in Washington, who, with Warren Sweeney, has had the temerity also to put your reporter on the air Wednesday mornings for a couple of winters now; Arthur Reilly, news commentator over National's Station WRC and announcer of the United States Marine Band programs, and Horace and Polly Hunnicutt, who have been heard in the "Salt Water Sweethearts," "Doctor of the Blues" and "The Getter-Upper" programs over the NBC local stations.

On to the Big Time.

This arrangement strikes a new note in the presentation of the "Going Native" revue by relieving any single master of ceremonies of the full responsibility of putting the show on and keeping it moving—almost an impossible task for one person, stage routines being what they necessarily are in an enterprise of this kind.

It will be recalled that Brook Johns was m. c. for the first all-Washington revue at the Fox two years ago, with Arthur Godfrey in the same capacity last year. This year, the exacting duties of mainspringing the show will be tossed around among the Messrs. Elliott and Reilly and Mr. and Mrs. Hunnicutt, thus making it appreciably easier for each of them and affording a greater variety of method and personality for the audience.

The complete list of principles selected for the revue will be made public within the next day or two. Possibly today. So watch this space closely—both of you.

Frances Starr, in private life Mrs. R. Golden Donaldson, of this city, opened in a new play by Robert and Sally Wilder in the New Rochelle Playhouse, New Rochelle, N. Y., last night. The title of the new piece, put on for the first time, is "Stardust." Miss Starr's first stellar vehicle under the management of David Belasco, "The Rose of the Rancho," is being made into a musical screen subject to serve as the initial starring vehicle of Gladys Swarthout, of the Metropolitan Grand Opera Co., whose likeness appeared on this page yesterday. Or should it be referred to as Miss Swarthout's initial starring vehicle?

That Man's Here Again!

There were some who had begun to suspect that Mr. Cochran had hibernated for the summer in some dark hole and pulled the hole in after him, but it seems that he has been on a semivacation with an empty fountain pen one hour out of New York, at Fairhaven, N. J., where a great many show people acquire their sunburn. Or maybe that pen wasn't empty. At any rate, it was not filled with ink!

However, Mr. Cochran explains the "semi" part of his vacation by stating that at least half of his time has been devoted to the agreeable task of assembling a route for the forthcoming tour, under his management, of Ethel Barrymore in a revival of W. Somerset Maugham's "The Constant Wife," which she did here so successfully in May.

The tour will get under way at Princeton, N. J., on Monday, September 30, then proceed through the South and Middle West, ending in the East in the spring. Miss Barrymore, who has a warm spot in her heart for Washington, probably will appear as guest star with the National Theater Players in their next spring and summer season in a revival of several of her former successes and possibly a new play or two.

New Season's Outlook.

Master Cochran also goes to some pains—it evidently is a painful subject to him after all these repetitions—to spike the recurrent rumor that he is to sever his connection with the National Theater. When Miss Barrymore's tour is safely launched, he will devote his entire attention, as he has in the past, to the conduct of Washington's foremost temple of the living drama, where he began his career in the theater as a program boy 30 years ago, in 1905.

Speaking of the National's new season, as practically everybody will be sooner or later, it will open rather earlier than usual this year. According to present plans, the opening gun will be fired about the middle of September.

Among the attractions booked for early presentation are Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne in the Theater Guild's production of Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew," which will be the first of the American Theater Society's subscription offerings; Eddie Dowling and his musical revue, "Thumbs Up;" the Warner Brothers' picturization of Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," produced under the personal supervision of Max Reinhardt, and Philip Merivale and Gladys Cooper in "Othello."

Nice going, Mr. Panjandrum, nice going.

Incidentally, and of interest to his many friends in the National Capital, that eminent avant courier, bon vivant and globe-trotter, Mr. Charles Warren McClintock, who served as advance publicity man for Miss Barrymore during her original tour in "The Constant Wife," once more will be her representative "ahead of the show" next season, with Tommy Bodkin, acting as her personal company manager "back." This, I may say, is not the "Odds Bodkin" you have heard so much about. Probably just one of the Jones boys!

Fanfare and Drums!

Big time vaudeville acts, radio "names" and famous "bands" are scheduled for early appearance on the stage of Loew's Fox Theater, according to announcement just made by Division Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's, Inc.

Among the outstanding name bands coming in are Don Bestor and His Orchestra, already well known to Washington music lovers by virtue of his original local engagement at the Rialto Theater some years ago and his repeat visit to the Capital last fall. Dial-twisters, of course, can hear him any time.

Others, whose names are familiar in one field of amusement or another, include Ben Blue, screen comedian; Billy House and Co., "Sharley" Cliff Hall, famous stooge for Jack Pearl, on the air; Sid Marion, the Saxon Sisters and Sid Gary.

Identification Card.

Reverting momentarily to Miss Barrymore's company manager next season, if you don't want to bother about his full name, you can just call him Bodkin, that's awl!

Arts Club

Offering a varied program of plays and dramatic readings, the Arts Club of Washington last evening held another of its informal entertainments in the club's garden.

The program was opened with Lidia Larrimore's "Toast and Tea," with Ruth Dabroe, Dorothy Simpson, Ella Stowell, Elizabeth Finn, Louise Mayo, Daphne Anderson, Gertrude Goodman and Mae Williams playing the several roles in this mild satire on feminine popularity and the social amenities.

"The Proud Lady," a knight-and-the-lady-fair story in rhyme, was read by its author, the youthful Meriam Truesdell, whose works are not unknown to the readers of this journal.

The Bard Included.

Robert Browning's "A Tale" was effectively interpreted by Louise Mayo.

As Catherine, Hester Walker Beall excellently read the Queen of England's excoriation in the trial scene from Shakespeare's "Henry VIII." Maurice Jarvis was seen as Cardinal Woolsey, and Elizabeth Cassell as the page. Despite the modern dress, the scene was powerfully played.

Returns to the American Screen

Fresh from triumphs in England, on both the stage and screen, Lillian Bond's beauty once again is to illumine the American silver sheet, when she appears in Irving Thalberg's production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer of "China Seas." In this exciting subject, Miss Bond, slightly more mature than on her last appearance in this country, will be in fast company, so to speak. The stellar trio in "China Seas" is composed of Clark Gable, Wallace Beery and Jean Harlow. All three are said to be perfectly cast.

Broadway

The Reviewing Stand

New York, July 17.

Males, not femmes, hold most Broadway box office records . . . The all-time record at Paramount Theater is held by Buddy Rogers . . . Making a personal appearance, with "Roadhouse Nights" occupying the screen, Rogers hung up an all-time high of $94,000 in one week . . . Nobody has ever touched the single week's receipts of $134,000 rolled up by Victor McLaglen and Edmund Lowe's "What Price Glory" at the old Roxy (in three weeks, it grossed $386,500) . . . Loew's State defers to record-breaker Jack Dempsey, with a single week's take of $42,000 . . . The RKO Palace never equaled the 1932 New Year's week of $41,576 credited to Cantor, Jessel, Burns and Allen . . . Rivoli high goes to George Bancroft with $77,000 . . . Greta Garbo is tops at the Capitol, "Anna Christie" grossing $109,000 . . . Katharine Hepburn, with "Little Minister," set a $111,000 peak at Radio City Music Hall.

Orchardists Urge Pest Control Fund

200 Growers Attend Meeting at Hagerstown.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 17.—An increase in Federal and State allotments for Japanese beetle control was asked in a resolution passed at the summer meeting of the Maryland State Horticultural Society yesterday at Smithsburg. Two hundred fruit growers from all sections of the State attended.

A tour of orchards was made in the morning and a business session was held in the afternoon following lunch at the Gardenhour packing shed.

Orchardists were welcomed by Mayor I. M. Wertz of Hagerstown. Among the subjects discussed were the advertising of apples as a means of developing a better market, spray methods, codling moth control, removal of spray residue from fruit and biennial bearing of apples.

The Women's Community Club of Smithsburg served lunch. The meeting was in charge of A. F. Vierheller, secretary of the society. Fulton Allen, Salisbury, Md., president of the society, attended.

Candidate for Sheriff.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., July 17.—Howard S. Honodel, of Washington Township, today announced his candidacy for sheriff of Franklin County on the Democratic ticket. Honodel's name will come before voters at the primary in September.

Watching Them Make Pictures

Hollywood, July 17.

JOHNNY WEISSMULLER is giving his Tarzan yell again, and has returned to the Metro jungle in the flicker called "Tarzan Returns." It is a fairly authentic jungle, if you wish to take the word of this writer, who has never been in a jungle and doesn't intend to visit one. This studio jungle is genuine enough for me.

It is a vast layout to the rear of the main studio. Bordering on the fringe of the jungle is the Metro Zoo. Here they have the lions, tigers, hippopotami, etc., in cages which don't appear too strong. Entering the jungle there are a number of trees, and then a tall, rugged studio-made series of cliffs. It is a good tumble from the top. There were a number of savages with white paint streaked across their faces, and they were fierce enough to scare me, until I saw Slickum, the Metro bootblack, who has charge of this section of the talent.

* * * *

And there, sitting on a rock with two large bath towels, one white and one blue, wrapped about him, is Johnny Weissmuller—Tarzan himself. Johnny, strong and bronzed, looks to be in condition to face any danger that Maureen O'Sullivan may get into. He even looks strong enough to subdue Lupe.

Then comes the order from Director James McKay, and Weissmuller mounts to the topmost peak of the cliffs. The camera is ready to turn. Johnny tosses off the white and blue towels and stands there displayin' his physique.

THERE is a lagoon beneath the cliffs, and it is in this water that Weissmuller will go swimming and compete with a hippopotamus, alligators and other animals. Of course, Johnny will be protected from these animals, who don't fully realize that they are play acting.

However, there is a certain amount of danger even with the wire netting protection, which is supposed to keep the alligators in their sector of the lagoon. Weissmuller told of an incident which happened the other day. An alligator managed to get into that section of the lagoon reserved for Johnny. Now Weissmuller was once the fatest swimmer of them all, and many of his records still stand, although a few of the new swimmers have topped some of his marks. But no swimmer could have beaten Weissmuller when he discovered himself in the same water with an alligator. They tell me it was like watching a streak of lightning flash on the water and disappear. Weissmuller insists that he broke all his records making for shore.

To return to civilization, if Broadway can be called that. A gorgeous night club roof, with the lights of New York twinkling in the background, has been erected on a sound stage for a big musical number in "The Broadway Melody." One of the hits of this musical will be Frances Langford singing "Broadway Rhythm."

In this musical, the country girl, played by Eleanor Powell, gets a chance on Broadway and makes good overnight. For the past three weeks, Director Roy Del Ruth has been filming the sequences in which Miss Powell makes good overnight.

* * * *

THE Marx lads are hard at "A Night at the Opera." This particular sequence is the filming of the Metropolitan Opera House orchestra playing an overture. Director Sam Wood gives the signal, the orchestra leader raise his baton and the musicians start playing. Two of the musicians in this orchestra are Chico and Harpo. The music no sooner begins than Chico and Harpo stand and toss a baseball to each other. The orchestra forgets the classical music and goes into "Let's Go Out to the Ball Game."

Harpo, oddly enough, plays a flute in the orchestra and not the harp. As Groucho remarked, "It was very difficult to keep Harpo from playing the harp in this scene." But Harpo sits next to the harpist, and it is the first time that a harp has been played correctly near Harpo.

In the large tank, an important set at the Paramount Studio, there has been built a battleship for the flicker, "Annapolis Farewell." It is this battleship which provides the big clamax of the picture, for it is blown up in target practice with Sir Guy Standing on board. Sir Guy, playing the role of a sea captain, is devoted to this warship. He doesn't realize the ship is being used as a target in a sham battle, and stands on board, alone, to give real battle. Director Al Hall gives the signal. The workmen dynamite this prop battleship in the tank, and Sir Guy Standing sits next to Director Hall, watching himself being blown up with the ship.

Postmastership Sought For James C. Shriver

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., July 17.—The Democratic State central committee of Alleghany County has announced support of James C. Shriver for postmaster here. The recommendation was forwarded to Representative David J. Lewis after a conference attended by John P. Schellhaus, chairman; John J. Meyers, jr., secretary; Mrs. Joseph F. Barnett, Harold Powell, Bernard Hughes, of Frostburg, and Michael O'Laughlin, of Westernport.

The committee also recommended that Frank Wilson be appointed acting postmaster in Flintstone. Dennis Bennett, postmaster, will be asked to resign, committee members said.

$316,426 in Taxes Due.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chambersburg, Pa., July 17.—Outstanding taxes of $316,426.61 were reported yesterday by County Treasurer J. H. Linn in a quarterly statement of Franklin County finances. Tax collections during the period totaled $61,703.35.

New Chain Letter Scheme Is Foiled

Norfolk Fines 2 Men, Bans 'Copyrighted' Plan.

By the Associated Press.

Norfolk, Va., July 17.—An attempt to revive the chain letter scheme—this time by a plan purported to be "copyrighted"—was scotched here today with the fining of two men from Memphis, Tenn.

The defendants, Lloyd Edwards, 33, and Ben Jack Hilburn, 20, who were arrested several days ago as operators of the "Benevolent Bureau of America," were given the minimum fine of $25 by a police court justice on condition they close their office and leave the city.

Justice Spindle ruled the scheme, almost identical with the chain letter systems, was a violation of the lottery ordinance of Norfolk.

Evelyn Goss Married.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Western Port, Md., July 17.—William Andrew Allen, Baltimore, group leader at the CCC camp at Swallow Falls, Md., and Miss Evelyn Goss, Mountain Lake Park, Md., were married Sunday at the parsonage of the Church of the Brethren here. The Rev. Newton D. Cosner officiated. They will reside at Mountain Lake Park.

Nats Overcome 3-Run Deficit, Go On to Trounce Browns, 8-4

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

WHEN Joe McCarthy scribbled his signature the other day on the contract that named him manager of the New York Yankees for 1936 and 1937, he probably wrote Babe Ruth out of big league baseball forevermore. The management of the Yankees in the near future had loomed as the Babe's last port of call in the big leagues, but, with McCarthy safely anchored to the job for two more seasons, Ruth's baseball future is in a distinct haze.

POVICH.

The only method by which Ruth appears to have a chance of staying in major league baseball is by buying into a club, and he does not want to do that. He might, of course, procure a financial angel and gain control of a franchise, but in the eight months since he first announced his retirement from the Yankees there has been nobody to rush to the front and volunteer to back Ruth financially.

Ruth's services as either player or manager were spurned by every big league club twice within the last year—first when he was released by the Yankees and later when he was given his unconditional release by the Braves after waivers were obtained on him. That ought to be a fair indication that no club owner is going to be killed in the rush to sign Ruth as a manager right away.

And the Babe probably will find it difficult to procure financial backing. He has never proved satisfactorily that he could manage himself, much less manage a big league team, and folks are not usually willing to trust such a character with the fortune required by a big league franchise investment. The Babe apparently can divide his time between golf and the races, as he has been doing, without interruption from people who want him to go back to baseball.

WITH only $200,000 required to buy a controlling interest in the Braves, the Babe did not want to risk his money. He is living comfortably off a half-million dollar trust fund and is wisely making no move to disturb his financial security and independence. He has repeatedly turned down propositions to put his own dough into baseball, and none can blame him for that.

But, oh, how different it might have been! The Babe might even now be playing his golf and watching the races in the knowledge that he was to manage the Yankees in 1936. Col. Ruppert had strongly intimated last season that Ruth would succeed to the management of the Yanks in tribute to his long and brilliant service for the club when McCarthy's contract expired at the end of the 1935 season.

But the child-like, impulsive Babe couldn't wait. He told Ruppert he wanted the job at the start of the 1935 season, else he would retire. He wasn't content to stay with the Yankees as a pinch-hitter and week-end ball player until McCarthy's contract expired at the end of this season. He'd quit the Yankees first.

Alas for Babe, he overestimated himself. It was all right with Ruppert if he did quit, and Ruppert gave him his release, with no strings attached. A brief fling with the Braves, a brilliant exhibition tour, a batting slump, and then the ungovernable Babe quit the Braves amid charges of double-dealing and double-crossing and added the final sour chapter to a career that, on the field was unparalleled, off the field was something else again.

SPEAKING of the fight situation (or wasn't I?), Promoter Joe Turner is even now thinking seriously of rematching Harry Dublinsky and Bob Wilson for a Griffith Stadium show despite the one-round knockout of Wilson by the same Dublinsky on Monday night.

Turner had abandoned all thought of a return match until yesterday, when Wilson, still smarting from his sudden defeat, submitted a novel proposition that called for consideration. Wilson wants to fight Dublinsky again, with the winner to receive both fighters' share of the purse in the event of a knockout.

If Turner can sign Dublinsky on those terms he will do it. He is impressed by the evident good faith of Wilson, who is offering the closest thing to a winner-take-all proposition since the Corbett-Sullivan affair. And the 3,000 fans who jeered the referee's action in stopping the fight last Monday might well be induced to pay their dough again for the satisfaction of, perhaps, getting satisfaction.

Speaking of Turner, he is the District's greatest one-man benevolent society. The show he is staging next Monday night for the benefit of the family of Sterling Calhoun, the Negro who lost his life in a vain attempt to save two white children from drowning, is a typical Turner promotion. One-half the profits of the show will go to the Calhoun widow, "And if the profits are only a coupla hundred dollars," said Turner, "we'll give it all to the widow."

Old Order Passeth, New Stars Rise to Fame in Swim Battles

By Paul Gallico,

A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, July 17. — The newspapers for the next four days will be more or less devoted to printing photographs of attractive young ladies in one-piece bathing suits, flying through the air, cleaving through water, swimming on their backs, swimming on their stomachs, standing on springboards, falling off springboards, single ladies, ladies in groups of two, three, four and 20.

The Women's National Swimming and diving championships are with us again, this time presented by Manhattan Beach in their Oriental pool. Next to the big water circus at Jones Beach two weeks later, August 2, 3, 4, it is on of the outstanding national sports events. Nobody ever gets excited about the men's outdoor championships. But how we do steam up over the girls.

The old order passeth. There will be another Olympic trial for the girl swimmers next summer, on the order of these forthcoming nationals, and with few exceptions, the famous names that ran through the papers during the last Olympic games wil be missing. Missing from these nationals here will be Eleanor Holm, the loveliest thing that ever paddled her way to records with the threshing graceful back stroke. Eleanor is down in Dallas with her husband Art Jaret singing, "Every Little Doggie Has His Day." Eleanor has had her day. Perhaps she will come back to train and try to compete on one more Olympic team. But there are new stars coming up so quickly. You will see two of them at Manhattan Beach—the Kompa sisters.

Gone from the headlines and the spotlights is golden-haired charming Georgia Coleman, the Los Angeles springboard and tower diver. Serious operations have ended Gorgeous Georgia's diving days forever. Now she is Mrs. Roof Gilson and she will watch the Nationals and the diving from the sidelines. Yes, they marry off quickly—the famous mermaids, especially the lovelier maids.

Gone, too, and almost vanished without trace is the Brunnhilde of the swimming lanes, Helene Madison, the big powerful girl with the chestnut hair (they tell me it's red now) who was unbeatable over any distance from 100 to 800 at the Olympic games. Unbeatable, but

Stone Leads In 12-Hit Attack

Ed Linke Settles Down After Fifth, Holds Foe Scoreless.

By Shirley Povich.

THE last-place St. Louis Browns, who recently startled themselves by winning two straight games, went native yesterday, chucked away a three-run lead, and succeeded in bringing to a grinding stop the Nats' two-game losing streak.

Except for their pitchers, who were distinctly guilty parties, the Browns became innocent bystanders after the fifth inning when they managed to tie the score. With Ed Linke turning St. Louis back scoreless in the last four innings, the Nats found the inspiration to win the ball game, 8 to 4.

They had routed Joe Knott out of there in the fourth inning with a four-run splurge, but it was Russ Van Atta and Merritt (Sugar) Cain who finally eased the situation for the Nats in the final innings with an exhibition of relief pitching that mangled every remaining hope of the Browns.

Van Atta Walks Two.

What ultimately proved to be the winning run was placed on base by the left-handed Van Atta when he sunk a pitch deep into the ribs of Cliff Bolton in the sixth inning. Still wild, he walked Bluege. Joe Kuhel's single and Johnny Stone's double drove 'em home with the runs that gave the Nats a 6-4 lead.

Cain pitched the eighth, gave the Nats two gift runs, and delayed the dinners of the ladies' day crowd of 5,000. He pitched singles to Kuhel and Stone and eventually filled the bases by walking Manush. The Nats strolled into their last two runs when Cain walked Travis and Bolton to force runners across the plate.

Johnny Stone was the leader of the Nats' 12-hit attack with a pair of singles and a double against Van Atta and Cain, but Buddy Myer, with a pair of doubles against Knott, pressed him for the honors. Linke issued ten hits to the Browns.

Browns Take Lead.

After three scoreless innings, the Browns gave Knott a 3-to-0 lead in the fourth, when Coleman singled, West walked and Hemsley, Clift and Knott, himself, followed with singles, but Knott pitched four runs at the Nats in the latter half of the inning.

Linke promptly permitted the Browns to tie the score at 4 to 4 in the fifth when Solters singled past Travis and Right Fielder Stone loafed on Coleman's double, but thereafter the Browns could get only one man as far as second base.

Giants Finally Beat Reds With Hubbell

Pop Bottles Fly as Umpire Displeases Populace.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, July 17.—The Giants ended their three-game losing streak and cut off Cincinnati's string of seven straight victories today as they pounded out a 6-to-3 victory over the Reds, to the accompaniment of flying pop bottles.

The shower of glassware from the right field pavilion furnished the most exciting interlude in the long game, which was marked by much bickering on both sides. The missles were aimed at Umpire Beans Reardon because of his ruling in the seventh inning that Gordon Slade hand interfered with Dick Bartell when the latter was trying to make a double play at second.

The Reds, trailing by three runs, had the corners crammed at that juncture. Jim Bottomley rolled a grounder to Hughey Critz, who tossed to Bartell at second. The shortstop and the runner collided and both were knocked down and Bartell's claim of interference was allowed, giving the Giants their twin killing and ending the rally.

Newsom Faces Sox In First of 5 Games

The third-place Chicago White Sox, whose failure to descend into the second division still has the American League gaping in surprise, move into Washington today for a five-game series with the Nats.

For the first time in 12 years, Washington fans will not be gazing upon Al Simmons in the role of a regular. In a drastic attempt to bolster the White Sox attack, Manager Jimmy Dykes has benched Simmons, who is hitting 80 points under his life-time average with his anemic figure of .260. George Vernon Washington has replaced Simmons in the Chicago outfield.

Manager Bucky Harris today will send Buck Newsom to the mound. Newsom will face the White Sox twice during the series, having applied for the pitching job on Sunday also and having his request granted.

Red Sox Win, Climb Into 4th Place

Trim Indians, 13-5,3-1; Werber, Berg Lead in Double Attack.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, July 17.—The Boston Red Sox regained a first division berth at Cleveland's expense today by turning back the Indians twice, 13-5 and 3-1, before a delighted crowd of 16,000.

Bill Werber set the pace, with four consecutive two-baggers, when the Croninmen came from behind in the opener and blasted four enemy hurlers for a total of 18 hits. Werber drove in four runs and Rick Ferrell drove in three more with a single, double and a homer.

The Indians spotted Mel Harder, out for his thirteenth win, a four-run lead but the Red Sox drove him off the mound in the fifth, when they put over two tallies to gain a 6-5 lead. Joe Cascarella started for the Red Sox but yielded to Rube Walberg in the third, who held the Indians to six hits during the remainder of the game.

Berg Stars in Second.

Bob "Lefty" Grove gained his eleventh win in the second game, when Moe Berg drove in all of the Boston runs. "Bing" Miller tripled in the second and scored on the relief catcher's long fly, and two more runs came over in the fourth when Berg singled with the bases loaded.

Monte Pearson went the distance for the Indians and gave out only five hits. Grove was nicked for eight, but he kept them well scattered behind the flawless fielding of his teammates.

Manager Walter Johnson had Earl Averill, his firecracker-casualty outfield star, back in the lineup and in the second game the pilot benched Hal Trosky because of his light hitting.

Gripping his stomach in pain after being hit by a fast ball pitched by Russ Van Atta in the second inning yesterday, Cliff Bolton is seen on the ground as Ossie Bluege, of the Nats, and Catcher Rollie Hemsley bend over him. Trainer Mike Martin is rushing to his aid as Umpire Bill McGowan looks on. Bolton was able to take his base.

Savoldi, Sonnenberg Grunt While Tonight

By George Considine.

A COUPLE of chemists named Joe and Gus—Savoldi and Sonnenberg—took some virility from football, blended it with the stupidity of the wrestling game and then topped off the mixture with an uncertain quantity of grade-A buffoonery. For a price or a pass you may see these same gentlemen repeat their ignoble experiment tonight at the ball park.

Both principals are "easy copy," as the writing boys might not say. Mister Savoldi is the same guy who gladdened the heart of the immortal Knute Rockne a few years ago when he scored touchdowns by the ton.

After our hero left Notre Dame, however, he went from bad to worse. For a while Joey professionalized his gridiron prowess and then took to rasslin'. What tragedy! He was such a good boy, too.

All Except O'Mahoney.

But, maybe we shouldn't shed too many tears. After all, in the last four years, the guy has made more money than Rockefeller, Morgan and your correspondent (ha-ha) combined. And while he has been collecting the aforementioned sheckles, the drop-kicker extraordinaire has licked the stuffings out of every top-notch rassleman except O'Mahoney.

Now, Sonnenberg is the man who single-handedly revolutionized the whole rassle racket. Fresh off the Dartmouth football field back in 1928, Dynamite Gus displayed his now famous flying tackle. In the short space of two years he butted his way to the world's champeenship, which he later lost to Jeems Londos.

Neither Is Favorite.

Tonight's battle 'twixt the two crown princes of Rassledumb gives indication of being nearly as good as Joe Turner's publicity department says. Neither man can be considered a slight favorite—a sitchyashun unprecedented in the local history of the game.

Mrs. Vare Reaches Golf Semifinals

By the Associated Press.

Eastern Point, Conn., July 17.—The chase for the Griswold Cup in the Shenecossett Women's Invitation tournament had narrowed down tonight to two former winners and a pair of youngsters.

Survivors of a topsy-turvy day of quarter-final firing included Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, of Philadelphia, six times winner of this event, and Jean Bauer, of Providence, 1934 champion and medalist.

Mrs. Vare weathered an erratic three-hour round to defeat Mrs. Jonathan Thorne, of Stamford, Conn., metropolitan champion, 2 and 1. Miss Bauer triumphed over Mrs. Charles E. Brainard, of Hartford, Conn., 4 and 2.

Byrd Spikes Rumor Maryland Will Oust Faber as Grid Coach

By Lewis F. Atchison.

THE movement to oust Jack Faber, youthful instructor in bacteriology at the University of Maryland, from his position as head football coach expired quietly yesterday after a brief existence of a few hours. How it started and why has not yet been determined.

H. C. (Curly) Byrd, acting president of the university and himself former head coach of the team, dispelled the rumors that Faber was slated to go with a statement that his youthful successor's work last season had been entirely satisfactory and that no change was contemplated.

Byrd, who last year helped prepare the Terps for one of the toughest schedules the Old Line ever faced, was supposed to be acting in a purely advisory capacity. The lure of the gridiron was too strong for him, however, and he spent many hours on the field. But this season his new duties will preclude all possibility of having him help coach and Faber will be entirely on his own.

A product of Maryland, where he starred at quarter back a decade ago, Faber has been an apt pupil of Byrd's football methods and also a deep student of the game. In his first season at the helm, after several years in the capacity of assistant, he directed the squad to eight victories in ten games, losing only

Silas and Rock Vie Tonight At Arena

District Lad Is Underdog in His First Attempt at Comeback.

A STILL-YOUNG fighter attempting the start of the long struggle up the come-back trail and a veteran trial horse will meet tonight in the American Legion's ten-round feature fight at Fifth and Florida avenue northeast. Tony Rock is the human test tube and Sid Silas, the youngster who will attempt to jump from the deep well into which discarded battlers are tossed.

Experts fear that Silas, Police Boys Club instructor, who was nearing the top among welters when illness, fostered by too much ring activity, ruined him, is facing an extremely steep hurdle in Rock. The latter has been highly regarded here ever since his clear decision over Phil Furr, District champion at the time, and has fought just about the best competitors in the East. Tony makes somewhat of a specialty of ruining assorted hopes and, while the crowd tonight will be distinctly pro-Silas, Brother Rock will be a betting favorite.

Prolonged Rest.

For the last few months, however, Silas has been training seriously and with a single aim, that of getting back into the thick of the welters and snatching a bit of revenge against former managers and handlers, whom he believes scarcely gave him what he deserved. He points to the fact that Rock fought a great battle against Frankie Bruno, Brooklyn's outstanding contender for Barney Ross' crown, in Madison Square Garden last year, but lost, while he himself was able to draw Bruno in a previous encounter.

Silas also has the advantage of a prolonged rest and plenty of training incidental to his job of teaching midgets and juniors the fine art

Bliss Shoots 142 to Win Medal

Goodman Is Among the Qualifiers; Evans Fails With 157.

By the Associated Press.

COLORADO SPRINGS, July 17. Rodney Bliss, of Omaha, won the medal in the Western Amateur golf tournament here today by posting a par 70 for a 36-hole total of 142 during a mountain thunderstorm that delayed play and sent scores soaring.

Bliss abandoned his ball on the inundated home green, 10 feet from the pin during the heavy downpour. An hour later, when the water had drained he missed the putt that would have given him a 69 and a total of 141 for the qualifying test.

As medalist he succeeds Zell Eaton, of Oklahoma City, the defending champion, who shot the low qualifying score the last two years. Excused from qualifying, Eaton practiced today.

One stroke behind the medalist with 143s were Jack Gaines, of Los Angeles, former California champion; Earle Berryhill, of Sapulpa, Okla., and Paul Leslie, of Jefferson City, Mo., Southern intercollegiate champion, from Louisiana State.

Jackson Cards a 70.

A stroke behind were Walter Emery, of Shawnee, Okla., and Paul Jackson, of Oklahoma City, who brought in a par 70 shortly before the storm broke for a final score of 144.

Next came Bob Conliff, jr., Oklahoma City, 145; Neil Smith, of Dallas, who shot 17 straight pars and 3-putted the eighteenth to go over for the first time, 146; Johnny Goodman, Omaha's former United States Open champion, 147; Charley Reaser, of Duncan, Okla.; Larry Trickett, jr., of Kansas City, and Tom Dwyer, Stanford University, 148 each; J. Elmer Malm, of Denver; Ed Anderson, of Houston, Tex., and Jack Malloy and Logan Van Zandt, both of Tulsa, 149.

Among those who failed to qualify was Chick Evans, of Chicago, who was seeking the title for the twenty-sixth time. Playing what he called a "heart-breaking" game marred only by misjudgment in the selection of clubs, the veteran blew himself out with an 81 for a total of 157. It was the first time the 45-year-

Outsider Puts on Speed in Stretch to Take $2,495 Purse.

SUFFOLK DOWNS, Boston, July 17.—Before a midweek crowd of 20,000, Mrs. J. Chesney's 4-year-old brown filly, Incandescent, came from the ruck of the field to capture the Plymouth Rock, the mile and 70 yards feature for 3-year olds and upward here today.

The winner was an outside horse in the betting and paid $53.80 for a win ticket. The purse was worth $2,495 to the winner.

Stainforth, Open Range and Gentle Knight were bunched closely together in the rush down the back stretch, but the winner, a little sluggish in the early stages, had too much stretch running power.

The favored Thomasville held off the early pace just back of the first trip, but was outrun when the real racing was under way.

Empire City, N. Y., July 17 (AP).—The light blue, dark blue hooped silks of George D. Widener came into prominence here today as Chicstraw and Go Quick both scored handy victories to give the Philadelphia sportsman and Jockey Jimmy Hunter a double. After Go Quick had taken the third event, Chicstraw showed the benefit of a recent race under his belt and registered by two lengths in the Larchmont Handicap of 1 mile and 70 yards.

Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Black Gift was second, daylight in advance of Alvin Untermyer's Gold Foam. Chicstraw carried 118 pounds and displayed the courage and class that marked his performances in past seasons. He was a 9-to-5 choice and covered the distance in 1:44 flat.

EVERNEAT	115	6	4	5²	5²	7½	8	Winters	36.30

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MY KIN, $3.80, $2.60, $2.20; REMINDING, $4.40, $3.00; FREE AGAIN, $2.80.

MY KIN, in nearest pursuit of the pacemaker for the first quarter-mile, went to the front when called on, drew clear, but was roused several times in the stretch and was never threatened. REMINDING, slow to settle into his stride and outrun until reaching the stretch, closed with a rush and was going stoutly at the end. FREE AGAIN, forwardly placed all the way, weakened slightly in the last three-sixteenths. NED'S AFFINITY was well up all the way. SOCIETY COLUMN was unable to reach the leaders. MISS SPARK closed some ground. EVERNEAT, on the inside, weakened in the last quarter-mile.

SECOND RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:00. Off at 3:00½. Winner, Mrs. M. J. White's b. g. (5), by Chilhowee—Golden Autumn. Trained by F. J. MacDonald. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:48 3-5, 1:14, 1:41 2-5, 1:48 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLAT ROCK, $19.00, $8.60, $5.40; MATHIAS, $9.00, $5.40; SOCIAL CLIMBER, $3.40.

FLAT ROCK, outrun until leaving the back stretch, began moving up steadily thereafter and, coming to the outside in the stretch, closed with a rush and was up in the closing strides. MATHIAS, under steadying restraint while following the pace, responded gamely to pressure in the stretch and closed with good energy. SOCIAL CLIMBER forced the early pace and, moving to the front when the pacemaker began tiring, was unable to withstand the closing bids of the first two. PASS moved up steadily after reaching the back stretch, but faltered in the last furlong. SOUND MONEY, hard ridden was unable to reach the leaders. WANDREL closed some ground. YANCEY tired after racing well placed early. SKIPSEA stumbled at the start and was unable to reach serious contention. RADIATOR had good early speed, but stopped badly.

THIRD RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:29. Off at 3:34½. Winner, Apache Stable's b. g. (4), by Chatterton—Crimson Rambler. Trained by E. F. Russell. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49 2-5, 1:14 3-5, 1:40 3-5, 1:47 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PROPAGANDIST, $26.60, $9.60, $6.20; REGARDLESS, $5.60, $4.20; DIGNITARY, $6.80.

PROPAGANDIST dropped back after straightening out on the back stretch, began moving up steadily leaving the back stretch and, closing with a rush, was up in the closing stride. REGARDLESS, under steadying restraint while following in near pursuit of the pace, moved up stoutly in the last three furlongs, took command in the stretch and just failed to last. DIGNITARY, unruly at the post, forced the early pace, took command when AL NEIMAN began tiring and fought it out gamely to the end. HOGAN'S FOX showed good speed the entire way. AL NEIMAN faltered after establishing the pace for the first five furlongs. ALADDIN'S DREAM closed a good gap. MIDSHIPMAN was unable to reach the leaders.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Class B Handicap. Purse, $1,200. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 4:12. Off at 4:13. Winner, S. Buckland's ch. m. (6), by Stimulus—La Gioconda. Trained by J. M. Buckland. Value to winner, $800; second, $250; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:47, 1:12 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GLORY GREENOCK, $3.00, $2.20, $2.40; TONY'S WIFE, $2.60, $2.60; GLYNNA, $3.60.

GLORY GREENOCK, under steadying restraint while racing with TONY'S WIFE, shook the latter off when reaching the stretch, and drew out steadily for the remainder of the way. TONY'S WIFE showed good speed, raced on the inside of the winner, was roused repeatedly in the last five-sixteenths, but was unable to keep pace in the closing test. GLYNNA went prominently placed all the way. NARISE was going well at the end though never able to reach the leaders. THE MILLAY weakened after going the first five-sixteenths. MILD MANNERS was a trailer throughout.

SEVENTH RACE—Six furlongs. Graded Handicap, class C. Purse, $1,200. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:56. Off at 5:58. Winner, P. M. Pike's ch. f. (3) by Panter—Unfurled. Trained by T. Horning. Value to winner, $800; second, $250; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47, 1:13.

CHILIAD	116	3	4	2²	2¹	6½	5	8	Stout	17.10

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KOWTOW, $10.00, $3.60, $2.80; WEE TUNE, $3.00, $2.40; RENAISSANCE, $3.00.

KOWTOW, kept within striking distance of the leaders, went to the front when reaching the stretch and held safe the closing bid of WEE TUNE. The latter, away well, dropped back in the first quarter-mile, began moving up gradually thereafter and, closing with a rush on the outside in the stretch, was going gamely at the end. RENAISSANCE, away fast, lacked speed to maintain his position, but finished with a rush in the stretch. LIBERTY OAK displayed keen speed in racing with CHILIAD and faltered in the stretch run. CHILIAD, much used in forcing the pace, weakened in the final drive. OUR MAE, hard ridden, tired in the last furlong.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 6:30. Off at 6:33½. Winner, S. S. Friedlein's b. g. (3), by Dominant—Arcentia. Trained by A. Swenke. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:48 3-5, 1:14, 1:41, 1:48 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALL BAYS, $11.40, $5.20, $4.60; CATINO, $7.00, $5.40; PATCHEYE, $8.00.

ALL BAYS moved up on the outside in the run down the back stretch, took command when CENTER LANE began tiring, lost command to CATINO in the stretch, but coming again, was along in the last few yards. CATINO, well placed early and under slight reserve, went to the front in the stretch and, despite holding on gamely, was unable to stave off the closing bid of the winner. PATCHEYE dropped back in the run through the back stretch and closed going stoutly in the stretch run. RETRIBUTION worked her way up gradually and closed with good courage though unable to reach the leaders.

Student Riders Get Chance In Show

Several Events Arranged for Novices Saturday at Chevy Chase.

STUDENT riders and green horses will be afforded plenty of opportunity to capture a share of the $500 in silver trophies that await the winners in the charity horse and pony show which the American Legion will give in Rock Creek Park, at Chevy Chase, Md., Saturday as a benefit for the Montgomery County Hospital.

Neither group, as a rule, is shown much consideration in the ordinary run of shows, but Chairman F. Larmour Oyster and his committee aids have arranged a number of events for novice riders and nonribbon winning mounts.

One of the classes in this category is the ladies' novice saddle class for horses that have never won a blue ribbon in a saddle class ridden by ladies who have not won a blue ribbon in any show.

Bridle Path Class.

Another is the bridle path hack class in which only amateur riders will be permitted to exhibit horses. The event will be ridden at a walk, trot and canter as in other types of saddle classes.

The Legionnaires also have made provision for a green hunters' class. Only horses which have not won a blue ribbon over regulation 4-foot fences are eligible to perform in this competition. Three-year-old mounts will jump 3 feet 6 inches, while older horses will go at 4 feet.

Silver trophies are offered for both first and second places in the three classes, as in other classes for horses, and many riders who frequent the bridle paths in and around Washington, but are rarely seen in the show ring with their more experienced contemporaries, are expected to turn out for these events.

Majestic Nine to Pitch Sullivan in Sunday Tilt

Joe Sullivan, young Eastern High hurler who has not lost a game in the local high school series during the last two years, will make his debut with Majestic Radio Sunday against the Annapolis A. C. on the latter's field. All Majestic players will leave from Tenth and H streets northwest at noontime.

Herndon Faces Quantico.

Herndon will meet the Quantico A. C. at 3 p. m. Saturday on the latter's diamond. For games with Herndon call Herndon 87.

Mrs. Otto Thacker Shoots Net 168 to Win Muncaster Golf

Mrs. Roney's 170 Takes Second

Mrs. Goodwyn Is Actual Victor, but Chooses Low Gross Prize.

MRS. OTTO THACKER won the Muncaster Cup tournament yesterday at Washington Golf and Country Club. She had 103—109—12—44—168 to take the honor by a two-stroke margin from Mrs. G. C Roney, who finished with 105—99—204—34—170 for the two-day event.

Mrs. W. C. Goodwyn, pacesetter on Tuesday, actually won the prized cup with a 61 net, but elected to take the low gross prize instead. Mrs. Goodwyn had a 93 the first day and came back to shoot 44—48—92 yesterday for 185 gross.

Mrs. R. N. Sutton won third low net prize by virtue of her 100—103—203—32—171.

Mrs. Betty Palmer Meckley, of Indian Spring, Maryland State champion, who pans to play in the national women' championship at Minneapolis in September, shot an 82 yesterday s Kenwood while playing with Mrs. Jack Scott, Congressional champion; Mrs. A. A. McEntee, of Kenwood, M. Fitzgerald and D. Herman.

Mrs. Meckley went out in 40 after starting 5-6. She is hitting the ball better than ever. A few mistakes with her irons cost her a 79.

Miss Elizabeth Houghton, of Chevy Chase, former Washington Post match play handicap champion, is expected to make the trip to the National with Mrs. Meckley. Miss Winifred Faunce, of Manor, District champion, also plans to compete.

The mixed Scotch foursome scheduled Sunday at Congressional Country Club has been postponed until July 28 due to the exhibition match featuring Wiffy Cox, new Kenwood pro; Roland Mackenzie; Fred McLeod and Bob Barnett. The match will start at 2:30, the committee announces.

Mrs. Frank Kramer was the winner of the "White Elephant" tournament at Beaver Dam Country Club yesterday. Other prize winners were Mrs. Joe Balestri, Mrs. Charles Buck, Mrs. D. W. Smith, Mrs. A. W. Tucker, Mrs. Charles Young, Mrs. R. F. Donaldson, Mrs. Charles Range, Mrs. Albert Haas and Mrs. A. McCormack.

of gracefully slinging punches. Hard-boiled ringsiders would say that he has nothing to lose if he flops tonight, but Silas himself replies that he has everything to gain and if he fails to show well against Eock he may have no opporutnity to gain anything at all for a long, long time.

In the eight-round semifinal, Carey Wright, another attempting to resurrect himself, meets Buster Brown, Baltimore lightweight. Wright is slightly favored.

Two African maulers, "guaranteed to bring 'em up from the floor from gong to gong," will open the show in a brawl to go four rounds or less—probably less.

Rappahannock Stars Defeated by Springs A.C.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., July 15.—Losing for the first time this season, the Rappahannock All-Stars of the Fauquier County League were defeated yesterday by the Springs Athletic Club, 4 to 3. The Springs club, late making a start, took their game last week and repeated Sunday in one of the fastest games witnessed on local fields. Warrenton Wanderers defeated Midland, 26 to 3; Rectortown won, 10 to 6, from the Remington Baseball Club. The East End-Remington Athletic Club game was rained out.

Junior Softball Crown Is at Stake This Week

Evans Has 157, Fails First Time Since 1906

By the Associated Press.

COLORADO SPRINGS, July 17. Chick Evans sat disconsolately in a locker room today and between sips of lemonade replayed "the most heart-breaking round of golf I ever shot in my life."

The Chicago veteran had just ushered himself out of the qualifying round of the Western Amateur Tournament with an 81 that brought his 36-hole total up to 157. It was his first failure since he started playing in the Western in 1906.

"What makes it so disappointing is that I was hitting the ball well—never hit it better in my life," he said.

"I was hitting every shot sweetly, but it was all a case of misuse of clubs—of lack of judgment, I guess."

Checking back on his fingers, Evans figured this was his twenty-sixth Western tournament; that he qualified in 25. He won the championship eight times, four of them in succession, and was a quarter-finalist at Oklahoma City last year.

"I'll keep playing until the day I die," Evans smiled. He said he would celebrate his forty-fifth birthday tomorrow, probably on the train en route back to Chicago.

The graying Evans shot a 76, 6 over par, yesterday and the experts believed he could have squeezed into the qualifying round by cutting off a stroke or two from his first round, but he was 3 over par at the turn this morning and kept slipping back.

"I didn't dub a shot," Evans declared, "but I was hitting them far better than I had been in previous rounds here and consequently I was over the green with my second time after time. My putting was fair—nothing extra, but good enough."

Fight Muddle Is Deepened By Cables

Schmeling to Fight Both Baer and Louis in Fall, Messages Say.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 17.—Moxie, Moxie, who's got der Moxie? "I have," pipe up Jimmy Johnston and Mike Jacobs, rival New York promoters, in one voice.

"O. K. boys," blithely cables Joe (Heil Hitler) Jacobs from far away Berlin. "Each of you wins."

As if to make certain it would stay complicated until he returns some time next week, Joe Jacobs sent word to both Johnston and Mike Jacobs that Max Schmeling would fight under the auspices of each in September.

Both Boast Cables.

Jacobs, in Chicago, flashed a cable from Berlin saying Schmeling would meet Joe Louis, Negro heavyweight, for the Twentieth Century Sporting Club either on September 17 or 18.

Johnston, in New York, was showing everybody another cable from "Yussel Joe" reading: "Everything O. K."

"Which means," said Johnston knowingly, "that Schmeling will fight Max Baer in the Madison Square Garden's bowl on September 26. It's in the bag. Jacobs and Baer both have agreed."

So there you are, boys. You pay your money and take your choice.

Gardner-Denslow in Net Play Semifinals

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 17.—Gardner and Denslow reached the semifinals in the top-bracket of the Washington County tennis tournament, the former defeating Larrick, 7—5 and 6—4 and the latter Green, 6—1, 2—6 and 7—5. The semifinals will be played tomorrow on the St. James court with Denslow meeting Wright and Gardner meeting the winner of the Lyon-Beyard match.

In the junior semifinals to be played Saturday Wolfe will meet Reisner and Cassel meeting Ludwig. The finals will be played Sunday.

Charlottesville Men To Vie in Golf Tourney

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., July 17.—Seven golfers from the Farmington Country Club here will attend the seventh annual tournament and meeting of the Virginia Seniors' Golf Association to be held at the White Sulphur Springs August 5, 6 and 7. They are: Dr. M. L. Rea, Hollis Rinehart, John S. Walker, J. Dean Tilman, Edward Coles, Maj. W. L. Lowe and Harry A. George.

The seventh State match between the Virginia Seniors and West Virginia Seniors will be played on the second day of the tournament. The players will be rated and matched in accordance with scores made in the first 18 holes of tournament play. The match will be played in foursomes, on the Nassau system of scoring.

The Hermitage Facing Busy Links Year

Beaver Dam Team Will Be First Foe; Others to Be Scheduled.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

RICHMOND, Va., July 17.—The Hermitage, champion of the South in team play, will inaugurate a busy links campaign starting the latter part of this month and continuing until late fall, it was learned today. Team matches are being lined up and the first opponent will be the Beaver Dam Club in Washington on July 28.

The Farmington Club, of Charlottesville; the James River Club, of Newport News, and the Washington Golf and Country Club have been lined up as still other opponents with the dates in doubt.

H. N. (Quee) Beck has been named captain of the Hermitage forces.

Highly Successful.

Hermitage golfers have been highly successful in their campaigning this year. Bobby Riegel, the No. 1 performer; Dave Ewell, jr., and John Chappell have played chief roles. Such stalwarts as Tom Prescott and Harry Thompson have been unable to play so far, following illness and an automobile accident, respectively, but Prescott probably will be in shape for the late summer campaigning.

When golf centers of Dixie brought their teams here for competition in the Southern amateur, Hermitage was back in the ruck after the first day only to stage a great comeback and tie with Chattanooga for the top. This was despite a misunderstanding in lining the team up—one of the best players being left out by Southern officials, when his inclusion would have meant a clear-cut victory. However, Chattanooga did not wish to play off and withdrew in favor of Hermitage.

Doubs Extends Streak, Beating Meridian, 6 to 3

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Doubs, Md., July 17.—The Doubs baseball team continued its winning streak by defeating Meridian Athletic Club of Washington, 6 to 3. Scagnellie started on the mound for the Meridians, but gave way to Webster in the second inning after the home team had rolled up a four-run lead.

Hallahan Replaces Dean Boys As Cards' Outstanding Hurler

By the United Press.

ST. LOUIS, July 17.—Bill Hallahan, who has replaced Dizzy Dean as the most effective hurler for the St. Louis Cardinals, is one of the principal reasons for the Cardinals' 13-game winning streak, which has put the team within four games of the league-leading New York Giants.

Hallahan, a star moundsman when Dizzy was running about in short pants, regained his old-time form of July 2, and since then has won four straight games, two by shut-outs. Here is his record:

July 2—Defeated Pittsburgh, 3-0, on three hits.

July 6—Defeated Cincinnati, 4-2, on five hits.

July 13—Defeated Philadelphia, 4-0, on two hits.

July 17.—Defeated Boston, 2-1, on four hits.

"No, I haven't suddenly found a new formula for pitching good baseball," Hallahan said tonight. "I've just been having a little success.

"Those three games were good ones, and I'm glad they're in the win column, but maybe it's just like they say, 'Nothing succeeds like success.'"

The burly portsider, who has been a member of the Cardinals' mound staff for eight years and through four world series, gave principal credit to his teammates.

"The other boys have been playing great baseball. No pitcher can win without good fielding and a lot of hitting. And the Cardinal pitchers are getting both these days."

Hallahan gained his nickname in 1930 when he issued 126 bases on balls. This season, however, he has issued but 22 walks in 64 1-3 innings pitched. He has fanned 26 enemy batters and allowed 64 hits. Hallahan's three-year contract with the Cardinals ends this fall.

Young Oliveri Extended in Golf Test

ANDY OLIVERI, medalist; Bob Leapley, co-favorite with Oliveri, and Alfred Shorb and Bob Morris yesterday entered the semifinals of the District junior municipal golf championship at East Potomac.

Barrel-chested Oliveri, who shot a brilliant 71 the opening round of the National Public Links sectional trials last week at Rock Creek, was given the scare of his young life by Teddy King, Tech High captain, before winning, one-up.

Leapley put out his boon companion, 15-year-old Buddy Sharkey, in a ding-dong struggle, 2 and 1, and, in so doing, shot a form-fitting 72.

Shorb Beats Garlem.

Alfred Shorb, a 17-year-old golfer with a sound swing and a bagful of shots, furnished a mild surprise by eliminating Ernie Garlem, one of the better known younger public links players, on the nineteenth hole. Tuesday Garlem fired a birdie three on the first extra hole to defeat little Bobby Bowers. Yesterday Garlem knew how Bowers felt, for Shorb threw him a dead stymie on that nineteenth green, and Garlem failed to negotiate it. The result was that Shorb, a few feet from the pin in two, was down for his birdie 3 and won the match.

Shorb, all even with Garlem at the turn, scored a 72 for the D and B courses, and Garlem had a 74.

Final Round Today.

In the semifinals this morning at 9 o'clock Oliveri and Leapley, rivals in many a friendly match, will clash and Shorb will oppose Morris. The finals will start at 1 p. m.

Oliveri was 3-up and 4 to go against King. At the seventeenth Oliveri had the match dormie. King won the seventeenth with a 3 to become one down. On the eighteenth King looked over a 10-foot putt that would have given him a birdie 3 and win the hole. His ball hit the cup and danced out and he halved the hole in 4 with his chubby-faced conqueror.

Results:

First flight—Andy Oliveri defeated Teddy King, 1 up; Bob Leapley defeated Buddy Sharkey, 2 and 1; Bob Morris defeated Russ Sullivan, 5 and 3; Alfred Shorb defeated Ernie Garlem, 1 up.

Second flight—Byron Bear defeated Bob Ruane, 2 up; Bob Mertle defeated John Stadtler, 7 and 6; Leroy Zink defeated F. Burtis, 6 and 4; Mil Stein defeated Bill Leapley, 1 up.

Orange Noses Out Elks in 10th, 2 to 1

Is Held to Four Hits, But Beats Fredericksburg.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., July 17.—The Orange Valley Leaguers took a 2-to-1 decision from the Fredericksburg Elks here this afternoon in ten innings. Lohr, on the mound for Orange, allowed eight hits, while Joe Garvey held the visitors to four, two of them in the tenth.

The Fredericksburgers failed to take advantage of several excellent opportunities to score and missed their best chance in the sixth when Lohr weakened to allow three safe blows. However, they managed to get across one run to tie the score. Orange had scored in the second. The game remained in a 1-1 tie until the tenth.

Garvey, whom Culpeper beat so decisively several days ago, was in rare form this afternoon, but two singles and a walk in the tenth forced him to accept defeat.

Waynesboro Tops Charlottesville, 8-5

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Va., July 17.—Waynesboro snapped a losing streak of eleven consecutive games here today by coming from behind to defeat Charlottesville, 8 to 5. Hulvey and Connell led the local's attack on three athletic hurlers, while Fary's homer featured for Charlottesville. Wolfe, big Waynesboro right-hander, succeeded Moyers in the third and kept four Charlottesville hits well scattered. Today's loss places Charlottesville three games behind the leading Culpeper team, with only four games remaining on first-half schedule.

O'Steen Enters Playground Net Finals

SOUTHEAST WASHINGTON'S dark-horse entry in the girls' singles elimination tennis tournament sponsored by the Department of Playgrounds yesterday outplayed her semi-final opponent and now goes into the final on Friday as odds-on favorite to win the city's playground title.

Willie O'Steen, 17-year-old student at Wilson Teachers' College, representing the Virginia Avenue playground, had little trouble winning her first set, 6—1, from Charlotte Decker, Janney, on the Chevy Chase courts yesterday as Miss Decker had been considered a sure player in the finals and her backers took heart when she won the second set, 8—6.

Effects Change of Pace.

However, Miss O'Steen tightened her service in the third and final set. Along with the better service, the Southeast girl effected a change of pace in her returns, using now and again a chop stroke and then hardly driven straight-from-the-racquet smashes. This type of play was too much for Miss Decker and she "went down swinging," 6—2, in the last set.

In the other semi-final match, Helen Orme, Burroughs, had little difficulty defeating Mary Hunter, Georgetown, 6—3, 6—2.

Softball Players Set All-Star Tilt

Game Slated Week From Friday at Stadium.

"If the major leagues can have an all-star game, so can we."

The inimitable softball pitcher Abe Rosenfield was talking and before you could think of a wise crack he had named the players who will participate in the softball game to be held at Griffith Stadium a week from next Friday at 8:45 p. m.

Inasmuch as Rosenfield has pitched four consecutive shutouts this season and is generally accredited to be the greatest softball pitcher ever produced here, one might say that he knows whereof he speaks. In the game, which will be sponsored by the Athletic and Recreational Association of the Department of Agriculture, the following stars have been invited:

Second base—Jacobson, Sports Center.
Shortstop—Abe Povich, Geodetic Survey; Valenzo, State Department.
Pitcher—Hill, Sports Center; Molyneaux, Internal Revenue.

Staunton Beaten By Harrisonburg

Five-Run Rally in Eighth Wins Game, 7 to 6.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., July 17.—Lefty Hutchison's hit which cleared the bases climaxed an eighth-inning rally by the Harrisonburg Valley Leaguers last night and enabled them to nose out Staunton, 7 to 6.

Harrisonburg, apparently held in check by Billy Roberson, shoved over five runs in the eighth on four hits and two errors to win. Roberson gave way to the veteran Johnny Stephens, who was charged with the loss.

In piling up an early lead, Staunton drove Bob Long from the mound and Lefty Hutchison, who succeeded him, was tapped for two runs. Staunton collected 15 hits to 10 for Harrisonburg but a double was the only extra base blow.

Banks Acquire Insull Stocks Held for Loans

Central Hanover and the Guaranty Trust Bid in Large Blocks.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 17.—The Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co. today gained formal possession of certain Insull collateral held to guarantee loans made to the Insull Utility Investment Co. and the Corporation Securities Co. of Chicago.

Various parcels of the collateral were put up at auction and the bank bid in 12,300 shares of capital stock of Commonwealth Edison Co. for $1,008,600; 27,352 shares of capital stock of Peoples Gas, Light and Coke Co. for $902,616 and 700 shares of common stock of Public Service Corporation of Northern Illinois for $25,900.

The bank was the only bidder for the Commonwealth Edison and Peoples Gas securities, but it met some competition when the Public Service of Northern Illinois shares were offered. However, its bid of $25,900 for this lot topped the $25,000 tender of Mitchell, Hutchins & Co., Chicago brokers.

As a legal formality the Central Hanover put in a single bid of $1,937,116 for the three lots, which was the sum paid for the collateral.

The Guaranty Trust Co. acquired 22,238 shares of Peoples Gas on its bid of $733,854; 16,512 Commonwealth Edison shares at a bid of $1,353,984; 200 shares of Public Service of Northern Illinois, $60 par, for $6,800 and 7,900 no par shares of Public Service of Northern Illinois for $292,300.

Cotton Is Firm With July 12.01

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 17.—Cotton was steady today. Offerings were light and prices responded to a moderate demand from the trade and covering. The close showed net advances of 2 to 11 points except the May delivery, which was 2 points net lower.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was firmer today on covering and commission house buying prompted by the strength in lard and the advance in grain. After showing gains of 8 to 12 points there were partial setbacks under realizing. Final prices were 1 to 7 points net higher with sales of 71 contracts.

Food Prices Lower, Except Ham and Eggs

By the Associated Press.

A one cent drop in retail food prices in the two weeks ended July 2 is reported by the Labor Department. Food which cost $1.23 the previous two weeks cost $1.218 the two weeks ended July 2. Meat was 2.1 per cent lower, except sliced ham and bacon. Fruit and vegetables dropped 2 per cent and butter 3.2 per cent. Eggs went up 1.6 per cent.

Power Output At 1929 Level

Production Advances in Past Week to High for Year.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 17.—The Associated Press adjusted weekly index of electric power production advanced 0.9 of a point for the past week to 100, a new high for 1935.

The level for the week ended July 13 also was above a year ago, when the index stood at 96.6. The index, based on 1929-30 as 100, is adjusted for seasonal and long-term trends. The range for recent years follows:

	1935	1934	1933
High	100.0	97.4	91.9
Low	94.9	91.9	80.2

The Edison Electric Institute today placed the power output in the United States for the week ended July 13 at 1,766,010,000 kilowatt hours, 6.7 per cent higher than the previous week and 7.2 per cent above the corresponding week of 1934. For the week ended July 6, the gain over the same week of 1934 was 6.4 per cent. The Pacific Coast was the only section reporting a loss for the July 13 week from the previous year.

National Biscuit Net Gains in 2d Quarter

New York, July 17 (AP).—National Biscuit Co., in a report for the quarter ended June 30, shows net profit of $2,385,318, equivalent after dividend requirements on the 7 per cent preferred stock to 31 cents a share on the common stock.

For the first quarter, net profit was $1,848,565, or 22 cents a share of common stock and in the June quarter last year profit was $3,198,231 or 44 cents a share. For the first half net profit was equal to 53 cents a share on the common stock against 86 cents a share in the first half of 1934.

Market Moves Of the Day Seen In Brief Review

What the Stock Market Did.

Advances	405	238
Declines	157	296
Unchanged	198	184
Total issues	760	718

Stocks—Good news of many sorts pushed stocks to the year's best levels with sharply increased turnover. Half year earnings reports, increased power output and good steel and gasoline news helped the gains. Sales, 1,393,340 shares.

Bonds—Corporates spent much of the session in an uncertain frame of mind but finally joined the upward urge exerted by junior bonds and untilities. Federals were steady throughout. Transfers off to $9,577,000.

Curb—Specialties led prices in a moderate upturn. Singer Manufacturing was the feature with a 5-point rise. Approximate sales, 180,000 shares.

Grain—Swift spread of the dreaded black rust lifted wheat prices as much as 5 cents in Minneapolis and 3⅜ in Chicago. Closes were strong. July wheat at 85¼ and July corn at 84½.

Cotton—Trade demand kept prices firm and the closings were 2 to 11 points higher, July last at 12.01.

Coffee—Spot coffee was quiet. Rio No. 7 final at 6⅞ and Santos No. 4 last at 8.

Cudahy Co. Plans $25,000,000 Issue

The Cudahy Packing Co., of Chicago, has filed a registration statement with the S. E. C. for the following issues:

Twenty million dollar First Mortgage Sinking Fund Bonds, Series A, 3¾ per cent, due September 1, 1955, to be dated September 1, 1935.

Five million dollar Convertible Sinking Fund 4 per cent Debentures, due September 1, 1950, to be dated September 1, 1935.

The proceeds from the issue are to be used approximately as follows, according to the registration statement: To retire First Mortgage 5 per cent Gold Bonds, $6,248,605; to retire Sinking fund 5½ per cent Debentures, $10,457,562.50, and to use the balance to reduce current borrowings and for other corporate purposes.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, July 17.—Paying no great attention to the persistence of Wall Street market letter writers to the effect that the stock market ought to go down for a while, prices continued to nudge along, rising quickly in a few favored spots and holding steady to strong in others. Turnover increased and advanced well beyond a million shares. Bonds were quiet and firm and commodities improved. September wheat closed 3¼ cents higher at 85⅞ cents a bushel.

Stocks groups to catch the fancy were the steels, shipbuilding, chemicals, motors and motor accessories. Most of the activity in the steels was among the independents. Preferred stocks were especially strong. Otis preferred made about 6 points. Crucible, Gulf States, Pittsburgh, Jones & Laughlin and Republic preferreds were buoyant. Acme, Otis and U. S. Steel commons rose a point or so, the majority of the gainers entering new high ground.

Shipping stocks rose for obvious reasons. American Shipbuilding, Electric Boat and both classes of New York Shipbuilding went up fractions to 3 points. The motor group had a return of activity. New high prices were reached by General and Chrysler. Packard continued active. The motor accessories pressed on relentlessly. Houdaille-Hershey B, Motor Products, Murray (and the bonds as well), Timken, advanced 1 to 3 points. Briggs was somewhat easier.

Rail Issues Quiet.

Although railroad carloadings for last week picked up well from the holiday week, the railroad issues were rather quiet and irregular. The market seemed undecided how to treat the proposals that passenger fares in the East be cut to 2 cents a mile and that the Pullman surcharge be discontinued. Rail equipments also were less ebullient. Airplanes kept fairly active and moderately higher.

Miscellaneous stocks to go forward were: Swift, in its busiest session since listing; Schenley, Libby-Owens, Armstrong Cork, Manville and the Cans. Cuban-American Sugar preferred sagged.

With the summer dull season half spent, trade news is palpably more cheerful than it was a year ago. The knockdown in the steel industry at the holiday was sharp, but now, as the Iron Age observes, the recovery is faster than has been seen in a summer month for years. Along with the pick-up in orders, steel scrap prices are rising, a good omen. Production of electricity last week stepped up briskly, reflecting in part the activity at the motor manufacturing plants.

Little of moment took place in the foreign exchange and money markets. Confidence in official quarters continues to mount, and the Netherlands Bank again cut its discount rate, this time to 3 per cent, or to within ½ per cent of the level at which it stood before the flight from gold began. Even Italian currency looked better, although the futures market for it is skeptical.

Political Outlook Foggy.

On the political side the outlook continued foggy and rather dreary. Disclosures with regard to public utility propaganda were not calculated to help the case against the holding companies now in a delicate condition before Congress. Presidential press interviews furthermore threw no encouraging light on the general situation. The reference to the bad case of those who sought a tax legislation delay was far from convincing, inasmuch as the extreme haste with which the Administration has sought to "put over" the new tax laws likewise smelled rather stoutly of a poor case and an unwillingness to have any public ventilation of the matter.

From a market standpoint the main significance in all that was the hint it gave of presidential animosity toward business as such, and toward any section of the press that seemed to oppose New Deal policies. Just the same, the temper of the country probably is changing a bit, with steady dilution of the vindictive spirit; and the reports here and there of increasing orders and earnings in the heavy industries are highly encouraging. It is, in short, beginning to look as though recovery were going ahead strongly, if slowly, in spite of the handicaps encountered at Washington.

If the pace is to be quickened, certain positive measures could be taken. They include reopening of the capital market, through amendment of the new securities act and the banking act, to permit bank underwriting and to lessen the restrictions on corporations as well as on the banks; an end of pump priming along consumption goods lines and a serious attempt to put the budget into balance; and the highly important announcement of a sound money policy that will have nothing to do with further dollar devaluation.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

Building and loan associations operating in the District have for the first time in their history exceeded the $100,000,000 mark for combined assets, William S. Quinter, secretary of the Washington Building and Loan League, disclosed last night.

According to the yearly reports sent by each of the 28 local organizations to the Comptroller of the Currency on the last day of June, total assets of the companies operating in the District increased more than $7,000,000 during the past 12 months. On June 30, 1934, the aggregate assets were set at $93,350,000.

Loans on real estate carried at the end of the fiscal year had mounted to more than $92,000,000 from a total of $84,594,337 reported a year ago. New loans during the first six months of 1935 amounted to $11,241,655, of which more than $2,500,000 was granted during June.

Shareholders in the building loan firms increased by 405 during June for a grand total of 107,000. During the first six months of this year, 3,397 new accounts were added. January and February were the peak months for new accounts, both periods recording more than 1,000 new members.

Seventeen of the local concerns are members of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League. All make loans only on improved or on improvement of District of Columbia real estate.

On every $100 that is loaned, the borrower pays $1.00 per month. Fifty per cent of this is in interest, while 50 cents goes to reduce the principal of the loan. Limits of loans are 12 years.

Following are individual associations that are licensed here: American Building and Loan, Anacostia Building and Loan, Brookland Building and Loan, Citizens Equitable Building and Loan, Columbia Building and Loan, Columbia Permanent Building and Loan, District Building and Loan, Eastern Building and Loan, Electric Building and Loan, Enterprise Serial Building and Loan, Equitable Co-operative Building and Loan, Fidelity Building and Loan, Home Building and Loan, Home Loan & Savings Building and Loan, Home Mutual Building and Loan, Interstate Building and Loan, Kenilworth Building and Loan, Metropolis Building and Loan, Montgomery Building and Loan, Mutual Building and Loan, National Permanent Building and Loan, Northeast Building and Loan, Northern Liberty Building and Loan, Oriental Building and Loan, Perpetual Building and Loan, Progressive Building and Loan, Prudential Building and Loan, Washington Permanent Building and Loan.

President E. C. Graham of the Hamilton National Bank yesterday reported to stockholders that the book value of the bank's stock had increased from $27.31 to $29.40 per share during the six months preceding June 31.

Graham reported net earnings from purely banking operations during the six months at $84,887.74, or $1.69 per share. These operating results were increased by net profits from transactions in Government bonds and other securities and miscellaneous non-operating credits, totaling $59,268.25.

The bank charged off losses and established reserves for contingencies and other purposes amounting to $16,995.40, leaving a net profit from all sources for the half year of $127,160.59.

During the first six months of 1935 branch operations as a whole resulted in net profits of $12,613.74, only one branch showing a moderate monthly loss.

Gen. Electric Orders Up 13% in Half Year

By the Associated Press.

Schenectady, N. Y., July 17. Orders received by General Electric Co. in six months of 1935 amounted to $104,542,946, compared with $92,154,642 for the first six months last year, an increase of 13 per cent, Gerard Swope, president, announced today. Profit available for common dividends was 40 cents a share, compared with 28 cents in the first six months of last year.

Blight Spreads, Wheat Soars

Swift Advance of Black Rust Lifts Prices 5 Cents.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 17.—Wildfire spread of black rust damage reported from sections of spring crop territory swept wheat values upward fast today, 5 cents a bushel at Minneapolis. Drought damage complaints from parts of the Canadian prairie provinces, together with word of acute need of rain in large areas of this country, gave additional impetus to soaring of wheat prices.

Wheat in Chicago closed nervous, 2¼@3¾ above yesterday's finish, September, 85⅝@85⅞; corn, unchanged to 1⅛ higher; September, 76⅞@76½; oats up ¼ to ⅞.

Brisk Upturn Makes Steel Level 40.5%

Rise of 4 Points in Week Regarded by Trade as Spectacular.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 17.—An increase of 4 per centage points in the operating rate of the steel industry this week gave it "one of the most spectacular gains ever experienced in mid-summer," said Iron Age today in its weekly review. For the current period the schedule is placed at 40½ per cent of capacity.

This followed a substantial rise in the previous week, which was, however, viewed as a normal rebound from the low rate of operations in the Independence Day week.

"The gain in steel output is all the more significant," asserted the summary, "because it was apparently accomplished without the aid of the automobile companies, whose purchases are barely holding their own, if not tapering off.

Contrasted With 1934.

"The situation is in definite contrast with that which prevailed a year ago when steel output was at 28 per cent and headed for an almost uninterrupted decline extending over two months.

"This year improved activity in August was already a foregone conclusion, and it now seems nearly as certain that the upturn is now getting under way a full month ahead of general expectations.

"The sharp increase in steel production in the middle of the summer when output had been expected to be approaching its slowest level of the year, may be attributed largely to improved business in bars, structural steel and tin plate.

"Forecasting higher steel-making operations, scrap prices have risen at Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit and Buffalo and are strong in other important consuming centers. The Iron Age composite for scrap is now at $10.83, against $10.75 a week ago. The pig iron and finished steel composites are unchanged at $17.84 a ton and 2.124 cents a pound, respectively."

Singer Mfg. Jumps 5 Points on Curb

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 17.—Specialties led the Curb Market in a moderate upturn today. Profit taking in the final minutes of trading shaded gains among some of the industrial favorites. Transfers, which approximated 180,000 shares, were about the same as yesterday.

Singer Mfg. spurted 5 points on light buying while Dow Chemical rose 4. Pittsburgh Plate Glass finished 2½ points higher and gains of fractions to around a point were recorded by Swift International, Allied Mills, Bunker Hill & Sullivan, Distillers Corp., Seagrams and Newmont Mining.

On The Air Today

After all these years, another personality from the stage makes a radio debut. Gladys George makes her first appearance in a dramatic sketch tonight, WRC, at 7, in Vallee's variety show. It will be light and gives full rein to Miss George's comedy talents. Roy Smeck, the "wizard of the string," also guests with Vallee.

Marian Meitzler proudly carried her new silver cup to the mike Monday night when she was awarded at Club Habana in the regular after-show visit of the "Judging the Stars" cast. Marian won the first month's competition by a generous margin. Bill Coyle, WMAL's barytone announcer, was second; Henry Nestor, of the Police Department Nestors, was third; Tony Lane and Ira Myer were fourth and fifth. The voting continues to see who gets the big gold cup, and a new competition is now on to name a winner for the second month's silver cup.

• • • •

Random localizings: Shannon Allen, N. B. C. production manager, got a basket of flowers and Henry Nestor got a batch of votes in the "Judging the Stars" contest Monday . . . the sender evidently respecting Allen's production talents as much as Nestor's singing . . . Conover is not the name of WJSV's new announcer . . . as the young fellow himself decided his real name would be difficult to make clear on the air . . . Monday night we had dinner with Uncle Arthur Godfrey . . . Tuesday morning we were advised that Godfrey had ptomaine poisoning . . . All day Tuesday we waited for something dire to happen . . . Nothing did.

Kate Smith has been hinting at a new high in foolish radio antics and tonight is the night it's to come off. It's the championship Jackass Soft Baseball contest between the Lions and Kiwanis Clubs, of New Rochelle, N. Y. It will be described by Ted Husing. Thomas Bryon George, Bob Trout and Hugh Conrad. All players except the pitcher, catcher and batter are mounted on jackasses. Kate sings "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice" somewhere in the course of the hour. WJSV, at 7 p. m.

• • • •

Hmmm! Hmmm! Ramona sings "Weather Man" in the Music Hall tonight, at 9, WRC. And the Whiteman band plays Hoagie Carmichael's too seldom heard novelty number, "Washboard Blue" . . . Helen Jepson contributes the "Gavotte" from "Manon" . . . The Portland Symphony shares the half-hour honors, 11 to 11:30 p. m., with the "Three Little Words" at WJSV . . . The "Words" get the first half and the symphony gets the second . . . and you probably will get two recorded "jingles" for extra good measure.

The wide range of listener preferences—the No. 1 selections—continues to amaze us as the Sunday Post radio page poll forms continue to roll in. "One Man's Family," Maj. Bowes Amateur Hour, and Jack Benny continue to lead in an unofficial survey of the forms received thus far. The entire range of entertainment features are represented as first choices. If you haven't the form at hand, list your five preferred programs and mail to the Radio Editor, care of The Post, and they will be tabulated for The Sunday Post radio page next Sunday.

Prominent radio names will be featured in this year's edition of "Going Native" at the Fox. They include Larry Elliott, WJSV announcer; Horace and Polly Hunnicutt, heard through WMAL and WRC, and Arthur Reilly, newscaster. The Hunnicutts, we learn, will go to New York after the revue, in August, for bigger and better opportunities in radio.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

(This is the twelfth of a series on foreign civil service and the second on France.)

PERSONNEL administration of the central government of France is scattered through more than 30 agencies. Differing from Anglo-American practices, there is no main personnel board or civil service commission, and apparently none is planned.

BAKER.

Even in the departments, except the Foreign Office and the P. T. T. (Postes, Telegraphes, Telephones), there is no single permanent official responsible for the internal functioning of the departmental family. The typical departmental hierarchy has at its head not one, but several directors or chiefs, ranking as division chiefs. This group meets frequently, usually weekly, to discuss departmental policy. However, there is lacking any one official with the power to supervise and unify the work of the department as a whole.

When a political minister happens to have outstanding ability and is interested in personnel administration, he may fill this need. But unfortunately he rarely remains in office long enough from one political upheaval to another to establish an efficient system.

Each department or bureau has its own personnel office, directed by a chief who is appointed by the minister for an indefinite period. These offices are usually part of a larger division, such as personnel and accounting or personnel and material. In the ministry of finance there are ten personnel offices; and in the ministry of public instruction there are six.

French personnel officers are usually career men with many years of experience in public service. They seldom are appointed under 50. The appointment is frequently the stepping stone to a directorship of a division where more prestige and a wider range of influence are available.

While the set-up and functions of departmental personnel offices are not cut on the same pattern, they have many features in common. They perform such duties as are assigned by the ministers for execution by the hierarchy.

Such duties include:

1. Maintaining personal records.

2. Handling all phases of examination procedure for entrance and promotion, including certification for appointment.

3. Assisting promotion boards in the preparation of annual and supplemental promotion lists.

4. Making recommendations to the appropriate authority in cases where employes request transfer, reassignment, or reinstatement.

5. Preparing the departmental pay roll for the Treasury.

6. Handling such miscellaneous matters as the administration of accident compensation, sick leaves, vacations, and the selection of employes for decoration as a reward of meritorious service.

In many cases the personnel officer also sits as a departmental representative on the central disciplinary council which alone can inflict such serious penalties as demotion, suspension and dismissal.

The decline of patronage in the French public service will be discussed tomorrow.

A large group of Government Printing Office employes enjoyed a moonlight trip down the Potomac last night, under sponsorship of the G. P. O. baseball team. George Mosedale (P), manager, announces plans are under way for other team benefit affairs during the summer.

Labor Affiliation Voted.

Affiliation with the Central Labor Union was voted this week by the Interior Department Lodge, American Federation of Government Employes. Kenneth Meiklejohn (C), and Felix S. Cohen (C), were named delegates. George A. Warren, lodge president, was elected delegate to the national convention to be held in Cincinnati, September 9 to 12. Francis M. Shumaker will be alternate.

John F. Cassil (P), Federal Reserve Board, is entertaining his parents and sister from Kendallville, Ind., this week.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF F, P or C follows your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Dairy editor today between 3:30 and 5 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: (F), Loew's Fox (stage, Frank and Milt Britton and Band, Sylvia Mannon Revue and other acts; screen, Washington's Lynne Overman in "Men Without Names"); or to (P), Loew's Palace (second week of William Powell and Luise Rainer in "Escapade"); or to (C), Loew's Columbia third week of Joan Crawford and Robert Montgomery in "No More Ladies."

If we want to get back our old leave
It means plenty hard work, pray believe,
So clerks, don't delay,
Get busy today
And the success we deserve we'll achieve.
J. L. O'C. (F), Treasury.

12 Sections Consolidated.

Consolidation of 12 NRA Industry Division sections into five is announced at NRA. The new sections with their chiefs follow:

Basic Materials, Construction and Forest Products, Wayne P. Ellis; Manufacturing and Equipment, Maj. A. Heath Onthank; Textiles and Chemicals, Walter Mangum; Distributing Trades and Food, Harry C. Carr; Public Utilities, Amusements, Graphic Art, Public Agencies and Service Trades, Leighton H. Peebles.

Vote Near on Leave.

It was regarded as certain on the Hill last night that the Ramspeck annual and sick leave bills (H. R. 8458 and 8459) would go to the House Rules Committee today. In the event the rules are suspended so that the Speaker may recognize Mr. Ramspeck, chairman of the Civil Service Committee, a vote will follow immediately.

Dr. R. E. Snodgrass (P), Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, has recently had published his 656-page book on "Principles of Insect Morphology."

Justice Postetics.

Mrs. Cecelia Moore is enjoying her vacation at Ocean City, Md.

Mrs. Edith Schwartzbach was recently called to Wilkes-Barre, Pa., by the sudden illness of her mother-in-law.

Mrs. Doris Staken is confined to her home by illness.

Mrs. Grace A. Johnson (C), is back from a vacation, part of which she spent with her parents at Frederick, Md.

All employes of AAA interested in swimming are urged by Yank Robbins (F), Cotton Option Section, to contact him for membership in the AAA Swim Club. The club holds frequent swimming parties at the Crystal Pool, Glen Echo.

Dr. Truman Michelson, Bureau of American Ethnology, is on an extended field trip to the Hudson Bay region of Canada, where he is making ethnological and linguistic studies among the Indians.

Miss Nora Reiter (P), and Miss Dorothy Dockterman, Office, Chief of Engineers, War, have returned from New York. Both report an enjoyable time, especially the visit to Jack Dempsey's restaurant, where they saw the former champion.

Foreign Markets.

London, July 17 (AP).—Trading was moderately active on the Stock Exchange today. Gilt-edged securities strengthened on the success of the railway finance loan plan. Industrials and home rails were supported by investors and gold shares were also harder. The closing was quiet.

In Paris—Economy decrees quieted fears of monetary manipulations and rentes advanced about one and one-half points. Industrials, however, declined under prospects of lower profits because of new taxation. International shares remained steady and the Bourse closed irregular.

Berlin—Prices on the Boerse declined as business became limited due to warnings from the banks. After fluctuating, prices recovered and closed at about Tuesday's levels.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

In New York the British pound sterling held unchanged at 4.96¼ and during earlier transactions in London the dollar sold at 4.96⅞ to the pound.

In Paris the dollar held at an equivalent of 6.626 cents to the franc and in later transactions in New York the French unit declined .00¼ of a cent to 6.63 cents. Other gold currencies were narrow.

Reichsbank Statement.

Berlin, July 17 (AP).—The Reichsbank statement as of July 15 shows the following changes in reichsmarks: Gold and bullion increased 8,106,000; reserve in foreign currencies increased 4,367,000; bills of exchange and checks decreased 97,288,000; silver and other coins increased 43,580,000; notes on other banks increased 3,914,000; advances increased 2,036,000; investments increased 477,000; other assets decreased 11,071,000; notes in circulation decreased 73,968,000; other maturing obligations increased 25,138,000; other liabilities increased 3,951,000. Total gold holdings, 93,930,000. Note coverage, 2.79 per cent. Rate of discount, 4 per cent.

Dried Fruit Prices.

Steel Prices Unchanged.

Montreal Silver Futures.

Montreal, July 17 (AP).—Silver futures closed steady, 15 to 20 points lower. Sales, four contracts.

AUCTION SALES

TUESDAY, AUGUST 6, 1935—
THOMAS J. OWEN & SON, Auctioneers.
1431 Eye Street Northwest.

Trustee's Sale of Valuable Apartment Hotel Known as "The Cavalier," Located on 14th Street Northwest Between Oak Street and Otis Place.

NOTICE OF FORECLOSURE AND SALE.

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, holding an Equity Court. David H. Blair, successor trustee under deed of trust dated November 1, 1928, executed by the Cavalier Corporation, plaintiff, vs. The Cavalier Corporation, et al., defendants, Equity No. 53668. Notice is hereby given that in pursuance of a decree of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, dated March 7, 1934, in the above entitled cause, the undersigned, appointed by said decree as trustee hereinafter called the trustee, to make the sale therein provided, and in accordance with the terms of the aforesaid deed of trust, will offer for sale without valuation, appraisement, redemption or extension, at the front door of the Courthouse of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, in the City of Washington, District of Columbia, on TUESDAY, AUGUST 6, 1935, AT TWO O'CLOCK IN THE AFTERNOON, all of the real estate and personal property which is subject to the lien of the first and refunding mortgage trust or mortgage made by the Cavalier Corporation to Columbia Trustee & Registrar Corporation, corporate trustee, and David H. Blair, individually, dated November 1, 1928, and recorded November 23, 1928, in Liber 6254, folio 285 et seq., of the land records of the District of Columbia (under which said first and refunding mortgage David H. Blair is now successor trustee) directed by said decree to be sold and therein described as follows: All that certain lot or piece of land situate in the District of Columbia, described as follows: Lot numbered forty-three (43) in Morris Carlile's subdivision of square numbered twenty-six hundred eighty-eight (2688) as per plat recorded in the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia in book 31, page 120, together with any and all buildings, improvements and appurtenances now standing upon said land, or a proposal thereof, and all furnishings, fittings and fixtures of every kind, which the trustee is authorized to sell and convey. The property, both real and personal, in and by the decree directed to be sold shall be sold as an entirety, subject to all taxes and assessments constituting a lien of a certain underlying deed of trust or mortgage and of certain bonds issued pursuant to and secured thereby, and to the rights of the American Security & Trust Company, as successor trustee thereunder, said deed of trust and said bonds being described as follows: Deed of trust dated the 1st day of April, 1926, executed by Hilltop Manor Co., unto G. Bryan Pitts, as trustee, securing an authorized issue of one million four hundred thousand ($1,400,000) dollars first mortgage six and three-quarters (6¾) per cent gold bonds, said mortgage having been duly filed and recorded among the land records of the District of Columbia on the 9th day of April, 1926, in Liber 5726 at folio 264. Of said $1,400,000 principal amount of first mortgage bonds, $1,380,000 principal amount are outstanding. The property in and by the decree directed to be sold does not include any of said Hilltop Manor first mortgage bonds held by said David H. Blair, successor trustee, as additional security for the bonds of the first and refunding mortgage issue. The property shall be sold to the highest bidder. The highest bid for the property shall be received and noted. The successful bidder for the property shall at the time and place of sale sign a memorandum of his purchase. The trustee shall receive no bid from anyone offering to bid who shall not at or before the hour of sale, or any adjournment thereof, present to the agent of the trustee conducting the said sale, cash or a certified check on some Washington, D. C., bank in the amount of two thousand five hundred dollars ($2,500.00), or in lieu thereof first and refunding mortgage six and one-half per cent (6½%) coupon gold bonds of The Cavalier Corporation, dated November 1, 1928, secured by the first and refunding mortgage, to direction which this action was brought, aggregating in principal amount the sum of ten thousand dollars ($10,000.00), said bonds to have all unpaid coupons attached thereto, for the account of the trustee as a pledge that such bidder will make good his bid in case of its acceptance. In case within thirty (30) days after entry of the order confirming the sale, or such additional time as may hereafter be allowed by the Court, the successful bidder shall fail to complete his bid by making the additional payments required on account of the purchase price, or shall fail to comply with any order of this Court with respect thereto, the sum deposited by such bidder as hereinbefore provided, whether in cash or in bonds, shall be forfeited as a penalty for such failure and shall be applied toward the payment of the expenses of any re-sale and toward making good any deficiency or loss in case the property shall be sold at a less price on such re-sale, or to such other purpose as the Court may direct.

THE TERMS OF SALE shall be one-third of the purchase money to be paid in cash and the balance in two equal installments, payable in one and two years from the date of sale, to be represented by promissory notes of the purchaser bearing interest at the rate of 6% per annum, payable semi-annually, secured by a deed of trust on the property sold, or all cash at the option of the purchaser. All expense of conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps, etc., is to be at the cost of the purchaser. The purchaser may make payment on account of the purchase price by turning over to the trustee first and refunding mortgage six and one-half per cent coupon gold bonds secured by the first and refunding mortgage, to have payment on account credited thereon as more fully set forth in said decree. All such bonds in registered form shall be accompanied by proper documents of transfer. For further and more particular description of the property to be sold and of the terms of sale, for the provisions of the decree and other information, intending purchasers are referred to the said decree and to the records, papers and reports on file in the above entitled cause. Equity No. 53668. Dated July 5th, 1935.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY Fear? Ha Ha! By Harry J. Tuthill

A rocket?
Ah, Colonel, please...no smoking. We have explosives here.
It must be watched every moment until the government men accept it.
That, Colonel, is why we need you. There's a bit of danger, of course, but....
Bah for danger! No one can live forever. If those fellows play with us, we show them how gladly we lay down our lives for a big idea.
Ahem! Well...
We fear nothing. These assassins... we laugh at them. Ha ha ha!

Building Boom For Arlington Breaks Record

44 Permits Are Issued for New Construction in Two-Week Period.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Arlington County continues to forge ahead with the biggest building boom in its history, records in the office of the county manager show.

In first two weeks of this month 44 permits were granted for construction representing an outlay of $290,700 and nine permits for improvement to homes costing $5,580. This is a record for any like period in the history of the county.

In addition to the number of permits issued this month, lumber dealers in the county report they are working overtime preparing estimates.

The third of a series of meetings sponsored by the Democratic organizations of Arlington County under the direction of the executive committee will be held in Odd Fellows Hall at Clarendon tonight at 8 o'clock. All candidates for county board membership will speak.

While the county board race has been obscured by the battle for other offices, the county board is of great importance to taxpayers.

The county board has the authority to raise or lower taxes, to spend the county funds, to promulgate zoning and other ordinances.

It is expected a record crowd will attend the meeting tonight to learn more about candidates seeking nomination at the primary on August 6.

Monday, September 9, was set as the date for the opening of the public schools in Arlington County by the county school board yesterday.

The resignation of Henry Clay, secretary to the board, was accepted, effective July 31.

W. L. Brown, member of the faculty at Washington and Lee High School, was appointed to act as temporary secretary.

The board approved the teachers pay roll for summer schools amounting to $1,143.50.

Fire of unknown origin damaged a CCC truck on Lee Boulevard near Glencarlyn yesterday afternoon to the extent of $500. The Ballston Fire Department saved the machine from total loss.

With rumors current in the county that an effort would be made to bar colored persons from participating in the coming Democratic primary for county officers an opinion has been received from Attorney General Abram P. Staples in which he cites the opinion of the late Attorney General John R. Saunders.

The opinion reads:

"That any judge of election refusing a person a ballot on account of their color where all other requirements permitting them to vote had been complied with are liable to suit for damages in the United States Court."

The ruling of Mr. Saunders was given in 1931 and was based on a case in which a judge of elections in the City of Richmond refused colored persons to participate in a Democratic primary which resulted in a suit in the United States Court. Their right was upheld and the case was carried no further.

The State Democratic organization in convention at Norfolk in 1924 adopted a resolution to the effect that only white qualified persons could participate in a Democratic primary.

According to an announcement made yesterday by A. H. Pearson, chairman of a special committee on arrangements, the Lyon Park Citizens Association will sponsor a series of political mass meetings to give candidates seeking Democratic nominations for county offices an opportunity to present their platforms.

The schedule of the meetings to be held in the Community House and the speakers is as follows:

Tomorrow night—John W. Rust and Hugh Reid, for the State Senate, and Charles T. Jesse and Harry A. Fellows for county treasurer.

Friday night—Lyman M. Kelley, Ralph E. Remington, Chance Buchanan and C. B. Laycock for county clerk, and Lawrence W. Douglas, John Paul Jones and Emery N. Hosmer for Commonwealth's attorney.

Friday night, August 2.—Howard B. Fields and H. J. Odenthal for sheriff, and James C. Buchanan, Freeland F. Chew, C. W. Lee, Leo Lloyd, Mrs. Elizabeth Magruder, W. E. A. McShea, Edward Duncan, George M. Yeatman and Thomas R. Mechem.

Sheriff Howard B. Fields and H. J. Odenthal, seeking the Democratic nomination for sheriff, and Lawrence W. Douglas, Emery N. Hosmer and John Paul Jones for Commonwealth's attorney, will speak at a mass meeting tonight in Cherrydale. The meeting is under the auspices of the Cherrydale Citizens Association and will be held in the Firemen's Hall at 8 p. m.

A meeting of county nurses taking part in the lawn festival to be held by the Auxiliary to the Arlington Hospital Association the night of July 31 at Lyon Park will be held tonight at the home of Mrs. E. C. Butterfield, at the Arlington Farm.

Montgomery Farm Bureau To Start Drive for Members

Committees Named to Aid in Campaign Week of Aug. 12.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post.
1111 Oak Ave., Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone Shepherd 2343.

A campaign for new members in the Montgomery County Farm Bureau is being inaugurated, according to an announcement made yesterday by J. W. Jones, president. The drive will begin August 12 and continue through the week as a part of a State-wide movement to add new members to the Farm Bureau.

A meeting of all the committee members will be held at the Farm Bureau office in the courthouse August 12, at 7:30 p. m., when final arrangements for the canvass will be made. C. E. Wise, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland Farm Bureau Federation, and other State officials will be present.

President Jones has announced the following committees: A general organization committee, consisting of the board of directors, Ulysses Griffith 4th, R. L. Hickerson, Harvey J. White, E. T. A donation of $100 was given the newly formed Takoma Park Library by the town council of Takoma Park, Md., at a meeting of the library board of directors Tuesday night at the headquarters, 806 Jackson avenue. The funds will be used to buy equipment and supplies. This is the first large cash donation the association has received.

It is the association's aim to obtain a new building more centrally located than the present house, use of which has been donated by Col. A. L. Conger. The board gave a vote of thanks to the council for its generosity.

State Senator Stedman Prescott will be guest speaker at a banquet to be held under joint auspices of the Pentalpha Lodge, A. F. & A. M., and Pentalpha Chapter, O. E. S., of Gaithersburg, Md., tonight at Saubles Inn, Taneytown, Md., at 7:30 o'clock.

Thomas W. Troxell will be toastmaster. The address of welcome will be given by Worshipful Master Walter Rinehart, of Pentalpha Lodge, Mrs. Ethlene Reed, worthy matron of Pentalpha, O. E. S., also will speak. Miss Helen Claire Landrum, of Detroit Lakes, Mich., will sing, accompanied by Miss Hazel Jacobs. Mrs. Eugene Waters will offer readings and a life membership will be presented to Maurice Phebus.

County Commissioner Robert D. Hagner, of Bethesda, in a letter sent to the Bureau of Public Roads, Department of Agriculture, urged that funds which it is understood that body is planning to use for the purpose of placing curbstones on each side of the present car tracks on Wisconsin avenue between the District line and the Bethesda Bank, be used instead to fill the hole to be left by abandonment of the car tracks with dirt so that it may be paved at some future date.

The petition of the Security Land Co. for re-zoning a lot on Edgemoor lane near Wisconsin avenue, Bethesda, Md., for the purpose of building a two-story apartment house will be heard by the Montgomery County commissioners at the Bethesda County Building Monday night at 7 p. m. The petition was indorsed unanimously by the Citizens Association of Edgemoor at a special meeting Friday, June 7, and has been approved by the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Needy children of Silver Spring, Md., will be treated to an all-day outing at a nearby beach by the Silver Spring Lions Club next month, according to plans made at a meeting Tuesday night at the Falkland Manor.

Beryl R. English was appointed chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements. He will be assisted by Kenneth L. Savee, E. Wilson Stewart, John Livingston, Robert L. McKeever, Walter Crossan, J. Howell Forsyth, Charles T. Shropshire, Lowell Hendrick and William A. Walsh.

A concerted drive against speeding, violations of parking regulations and failure to observe stop signs at intersections will begin Monday in Rockville, Md., according to an announcement by Leslie B. Thompson, newly appointed special officer. Motorists violating the speed laws and parking regulations between now and Monday will be let off with a warning, as were Police Court Judge Harold C. Smith and a number of other prominent townspeople within the past few days, but those failing to observe stop signs will be given a summons to court.

The parking limit on the main thoroughfare in Rockville is 2 hours, unless otherwise specified, with unlimited parking on other streets. The speed limit in the city proper is 20 miles per hour.

Quick Worker More Accurate, Speaker Holds

CCC Instructors Are Told Tests Show Slower Man Need Not Be 'Sure.'

"The slow worker is not necessarily the sure worker," E. A. Monoghan, of the United States Civil Service Commission, yesterday told the CCC educational instructors attending the summer school at the University of Maryland.

Monoghan, speaking in place of L. J. O'Rourke, director of research of the Civil Service Commission, opened the third day of the school.

He presented facts to show that aptitude and general intelligence tests indicate the fast worker completes one and a half times more work and makes one-third more errors.

These statistics were the result of tests given employes of the United States Postal Service, he said. Samples were exhibited to the approximately 185 educational instructors attending the course.

Dr. Thomas A. O. Rennie, resident psychiatrist of Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, spoke on "The Psychiatric Examination."

The afternoon session was opened with a study of the keeping of records, Leona C. Buchwald, supervisor of guidance and placement of the Baltimore schools, gave a talk on "The Counseling Interview."

King Is Appointed Lighthouse Chief

Started in Department as $60 Aid in 1903.

Harold D. King, whose career in the Department of Commerce began in 1903 as a $60-a-month aid in the Coast and Geodetic Survey, was appointed commissioner of lighthouses yesterday by President Roosevelt. Deputy commissioner since 1930, he has been acting chief of the bureau since the retirement of George R. Putnam on May 31.

The new head of the Government's lighthouse service is a civil engineer and master mariner. For 15 years he was in charge of the Baltimore district. Transferring from the Coast and Geodetic Survey in 1911, his first assignment was as chief of the Key West, Fla., lighthouse district.

Mr. King was born in Portland, Me., December 20, 1879. He received the degree of bachelor of science in civil engineering from Dartmouth College in 1905. He lives at 3005 McKinley street northwest.

Fairfax Board Slates School Building Plans

County Board to Consider Methods of Financing Construction.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 196-J.

The school board of Fairfax County, Va., will meet tomorrow to study a building program to care for county school needs for the next several years. The board will also consider the offer of the Public Works Administration to give the county an outright donation of 45 per cent of the total cost of any new building projects.

A number of the school leagues and civic groups have urged the board to take advantage of the offer of the Federal Government, pointing out that within the next few years the county will be compelled to enlarge its present school facilities, and unless assisted by the Federal Government at the present time the entire burden of paying for the schools will be thrown upon the tax payers of the county.

The major problem that will confront the board members tomorrow will be the plan of financing the other 55 per cent of the cost of the projects that may be decided upon. Two methods of financing are available, either through a county-wide bond issue submitted to the voters in a bond issue election or to borrow the money from the State literary fund.

Borrowing from the State fund is considered the simpler method as it is not necessary to submit the question to the vote of the people. However under the present State law the limit on literary loans is $25,000 on a single project. It is doubted that under such a plan the county would be able to complete all needed work.

State School Architect Raymond V. Long will attend the meeting tomorrow prepared to discuss with board members approximate costs and other details relative to a building program.

During preliminary discussions of a proposed building program the board members have felt that, due to the rapidly increasing school enrollment in the various sections of the county, additions should be made at Groveton, Annandale, Fairfax High, Woodlawn, Lorton, Franconia and Chesterbrook.

The never-ending bottle war which breaks out periodically between dairymen of Washington and Virginia will have its day in court again next week.

A summons has been served on W. J. Sewell, a Falls Church dairyman, to appear in the Trial Justice Court of Fairfax County, Va., next week to answer charges of having used milk bottles owned by a Washington dairy. The summons was issued on the complaint of F. L. Oyster, of the Washington Milk Bottle Exchange.

Sheriff E. P. Kirby, of Fairfax County, has written the exchange asking that a conference of dairymen be called for the purpose of arriving at a solution of the milk bottle situation. In his letter Sheriff Kirby contended that drivers for Washington dairies delivering milk through northern Virginia picked up bottles owned by Virginia dairymen and delivered them to the exchange, and that Virginia dairymen were compelled to pay to redeem them or use other bottles. He admitted that Virginia milk dealers often used Washington bottles, which led to complaints on all sides.

Rachel Walker Circle, King's Daughters, of Woodlawn, will hold a bingo party tonight at 8 o'clock for the benefit of the fund being raised by the circle to help in equipping the Marian Ballenger memorial room in the new annex building at Alexandria Hospital. Miss Polly Cox and Miss Marjorie May Clapp head the committee in charge or arrangements.

A round dance under the auspices of the Lee-Jackson High School Parent-Teacher Association will be held in the school auditorium this evening from 9 to 12 o'clock, for the benefit of the fund being raised to establish a home economics course in the high school this coming term. The committee in charge is headed by Mrs. George Wilsey, of Belle Haven.

Dance Pavilion Owner Is Fined In Test of Law

Brought into the Hyattsville police court on a test case, Jerry Heflin, of Berwyn, Md., was fined $50 yesterday for operating a dance hall without a license. The sentence was suspended.

It was the first case of its kind in court since enactment of the 1929 Maryland code prohibiting "roadhouses" holding dances more than once a week without a license from the county commissioners.

Heflin, through his attorney, J. Frank Lillard, used the defense that he was not holding a dance for profit more than once a week and therefore did not need a license. He leased the hall, located at Berwyn, for two additional nights each week, he said.

Judge George B. Merrick, however, held that since he was receiving the profits of the lease, he was violating the law. Judge Merrick pointed out that the statute reads as follows:

"It shall be unlawful to maintain or operate a roadhouse, restaurant, lunchroom, cafe, inn, hotel, or club for profit where public dancing is permitted more than once a week in Prince Georges County without having obtained a license from the county commissioners." The license fee is $100.

New Bus Line Links D. C. and Annapolis

A new bus linking Washington with Annapolis will be inaugurated by the Peninsula Bus Lines today with the first bus leaving here at 6:30 a. m. At 8 o'clock the Annapolis bus will pull out, Washington-bound.

Buses will follow the Defense highway route to the Maryland capital, and will stop to pick up passengers on the way, said J. William Graham, Annapolis agent.

This afternoon at Annapolis, officials, civic leaders, county commissioners, police executives and State legislators will make a bus tour of the city. This will be followed by a celebration dinner at Bay Ridge.

According to the daily schedule, buses will leave here at 6:30 and 9:30 a. m., 12:30, 3:30 and 6:30 p. m., while the buses will leave Annapolis at 8 and 11 a. m., 2, 5, 8:30 and 11:59 p. m.
